A POEM.

We received the following wonderful production last week, and gladly print it. We subjoin the masterly prelude to the poem:

I write from Cross Point opposite Campbelltown, Restigouche river, Bay Chaleur, Bonaventure County 12 miles from Metapedia river. Man-Township, Gaspe District, Province of Quebec, Dominion of Canada.

I write to you in a public spirit, hoping to find somewhere a press true to the excellent spirit of enlightened christian liberty.

William, Joseph, Caslim,
Garvey HAYES.
Born 30th June, 1829,
Waterford, Ireland.

In the Mystic Temple of thought,
In the Intellectual Temple of the Word, In the Spiritual Temple of the Event, is the Light and Truth and Glory of GOD, made manifest.

COMPOSED 18th MAY, 1881.

[For the STAR.]

RICHIBUCTO RIVER, KINGSTON, RICHIBUCTO, KENT COUNTY, N. B.

Diamond cut Diamond by mountain and river;
From the rock to the cloud can we pass them for never.
Oh distance, what distance to you twinkling star:
There is one by the fireside more distant afar.
Singing so sweetly little bird on the tree;
Who sent you hither, and is it for me!
Wave on the shore with your ceaseless roar,
Coming afar from the depths of the sea;
Now raging and wild, now lovely and mild;
Who sent you hither and is it for me!
Winds, rushing winds that encircle the earth;
Sunshine and shadow alike all to thee,
Oh tell me if angels from heaven have birth,
Or whence do they come and is it for me!
Clouds floating above us so glorious and bright;
Now blazing with majesty splendour and light,
Hail, thunder and lightning revealing thy might,
Say is thy mission inspired by true love,
Of the one of the many or angels above;
Thy motive of action the noblest of all;
The right to sustain, the wrong to appall;
Then raise up the banner of life, light and truth,
To shine o'er the land in the days of its youth.
Let power then with justice and mercy unite,
To save, fetter or slay, in the cause of the right.
Rain, dropping rain, let us bless then the giver,
In thought and word and action both now and for ever.
While our sons and our stars shine by night and by day,
Still lovelier far are our clouds in their way.

EXEGESIS.

ARTIC EXPEDITIONS.

Another romantic chapter will be added to the strange history of Artic exploration by the cruise of the Jeanette, which left San Francisco for the Polar regions in July, 1879, and has not been heard of since September last. She was well fitted out by the lavish enterprise of Mr. Gordon Bennett, whose first notion was to send her under the command of Mr. H. M. Stanley, to whom he intended to say "Go and find the North Pole," as he had said "Go and find Livingstone." Mature consideration, however, led Mr. Bennett to change his mind, and he named as commander of the expedition Lieutenant De Long, who had obtained some Artic experience in the Tigress, when that vessel was sent by the American Government to the aid of the Polaris. It is impossible to conceal the fact that the expedition was intended to be a sensational one. All the plans were kept a profound secret; and when the Jeanette steamed out of San Francisco, everybody in America believed that she was going straight to the Pole by a route only known to her owner and commander. When she was last seen, in September, by the whaler Sea Breeze, she was about 50 miles west of Herald Island, and steering due north. Since then the utmost anxiety has been felt as to her fate. In consequence of pressure from without, a sum of $35,000 was placed at the disposal of the Navy Department of the United States Government to equip a fleet of search vessels to ascertain the whereabouts of the Jeanette, and also of a number of whalers which sailed up the Behring Strait about the same time and have not since been heard of. Last mouth the first of the relief ships, the reverue cutter Corwin, left San Francisco. It is not intended that she should winter in the Artic regions, but only supply, as it were, a starting point for other vessels to follow. The Rodgers. however, which left New York on Wednesday last, is provisioned for three years; and it is to that vessel that the Americans look for more important results. But in their fever of anxiety, they do not stop here. Orders have been issued to the Alliance war vessel to cruise in the seas between East Greenland, Iceland, and Spitzbergen, and, if practicable, to sail as far north as the latter islands, in case the Jeanette "should have been carried along Baron Nordensjold's track of the North-east Passage." Now, a fourth expedition is in course of preparation, and will, it is expected, start next month.

LORD BEACONSFIELD'S SELF CONTROL.

Lord Beconsfield was a man of profoundly deep feeling, and a highly sensitive temperament, but with an idomitable will, habituated to self-control. The customary expressions of such feelings as he possessed were interdicted. For example, in place of movements of the ordinary exeito-motor type, the noble lord's physical habit was in the later-middle period, and towards the end of his career in the Commons characterized by slight and seemingly automatic, but really conscious, acts of the slightest kind often repeated. It was very curious and profoundly interesting to study these movements from the psychological standpoint. Under ordinary circumstances, Mr. Disraeli would sit for long stretches of time during the violent or terribly irritating attack of a political opponent with nearly closed eyes, as though asleep. When the onslaught waxed furious he would, as though with all engrossing interest, fix his gaze at the toes of his boots, moving them slowly, so as to bring all points under observation. If the taunts of reproaches hurled at him were of so grievous a nature as to make any other man furious, he would straighten himself and brush some particle of dust from the front of his buttoned frock coat, or from the sleeve of his left arm. Then he would examine his nails, and as a climax, when few statesmen so assailed could avoid some token of emotional restlessness, he would perhaps take out his single eye-glass, aud, fixing it firmly, look for an instant at the clock in the front of the gallery, opposite Mr. Speaker, dropping the glass with one quick elevation of the eye.. brow—this last mentioned trick being the only part of a series of actions which, though familiar to his observer, was never a mere matter of habit.

A CRUEL EVICTION.

"One of the cruelest incidents yet revealed in connection with an eviction," says the Freeman, "is that resulting in a coroner's inquest in Monagan, on Saturday last. A Northern jury found themselves compelled, to attribute the premature confinement of the wife of an evicted tenant on Lord Rossmore's estate, and the death of the infant, to the terrible mental excitement produced in the poor woman by the presence of the bailiff at her bedside."

Loss of Appitite in Children.

From Chas. H. Colgage, Manufacturer of Flavoring Extracts, 21 Blackstone street, Boston.

"Last spring my little daughter, aged five became very much emaciated with loss of appetite and great prostration of strength, so much so that we were obliged to take her out of school, This continued through the summer and caused us much anxiety. After trying various remedies withont deriving any benefit, our family physician recommended the use of PERUVIAN SYRUP. After using it one week we saw a marked improvement in the childs' condition, and in a month she was rapidly gaining in health and strength, her appetite being excellent At this date she is perfectly well, with round plump cheeks' and healthy celor, and is again attending school regularly. I consider her restoration to health entirely due to the PERUVIAN SYRUP, and feel that I cannot to highly reccomend it as a tonic."

"To sum it up, six long years of bed-ridden sickness, costing $200 per year, total $1.200—all of this expense was stopped by three bottles of Hop Bitters, taken by my wife.
