The ladies are making elaborate preparations for the occasion, and will doubtless receive a large and profitable patronage.

Here is another evidence of the worth of the FARMER as an advertising medium. During the last two afternoons Mr. McDade received orders from Fredericton merchants for 13 columns of advertisements for publication in his "Fredericton Trade Review," to be issued about Dec. 15th. A great deal of this remarkable success Mr. McDade attributes to the fact that he had advertised his paper in the FARMER, and our business men having had a chance to learn in advance the character of the new publication, decided to patronize it extensively.

Sanford Burden of Bear Island, was accidentally killed in the lumber woods at St. Pamphili, Quebec, last Friday morning, while at work scaling on a brow of cedars. The brow of lumber on which he was at work caved in, and he was hurled down the embankment, the rolling logs striking him about the head, killing him instantly. Mr. Rix Brown and Mr. Gilman were working only a few rods away, and when they reached the scene of the accident, Sanford was dead. His head lay upon a cedar log, and another log lay across his forehead. His body has been brought to his late home and interred.

There was a large attendance at the dedication services of the New Maryland Presbyterian Church Sunday afternoon, many people driving out from the city to be present. The neat little church for the erection of which the Presbyterians of New Maryland have made many sacrifices, was crowded to the doors. The dedicatory sermon was preached by Rev. Mr. Mowatt, and in the devotional exercises, he was assisted by Rev. Mr. Crabbe, Baptist. The services were interesting and impressive throughout, and the opening of the church marks the advent of a new and important era in Presbyterianism in Maryland. The pulpit will be supplied by Rev. Mr. Mowatt once a month, and on the first Sunday in January, he will celebrate communion there. Sunday's collection was a most liberal one.

THE TORRENS FORTUNE.

Fredericton People who will share in the Division.

In the last issue of the FARMER was announced the death of Mr. George Torrens of San Francisco, which occurred at his home in that city November 4th. The deceased was quite well known in Fredericton, where he leaves a large number of relatives, and among those who knew Mr. Torrens, there has been considerable speculation as to how he had disposed of the fortune he was known to possess. The amount has been variously stated, but the reports around town were unreliable and could be traced to no definite source. The relatives themselves, whether they knew the actual facts or not, were not inclined to over-estimate the amount of the fortune in which they are to share. They had heard that each of the heirs was to receive $20,000, but took little stock in that story, one of them stating that he did not think the total sum left by the deceased would amount to much more than half that figure. The FARMER to-day received positive information in reference to the fortune, which though not as large as the Moore legacy that excites Fredericton Junction circles at the present time, is quite a large one. The FARMER'S intelligence has been furnished by one having access to the Probate Court Records of San Francisco, and may be regarded as strictly correct. It is as follows: "The will of George Torrens, disposing of an estate valued at $35,000, has been filed for probate by Antoine Borel, William Dunlap and F. W. Davis. The property goes to the children of the deceased brother of the testator, namely: Lemuel Torrens of Bangor, Maine; Benjamin Torrens of Fredericton, New Brunswick; Anne Wasgatt and Jane Torrens of Bangor, Maine, and the brother of the testator, Wm. Torreus, whose residence is unknown to petitioners; another brother, Moses Torrens of Glenleary, Ramelton, County Donegal, Ireland, and to seven children of the decendent's brother, Henry Torrens, residing in Fredericton, New Brunswick, and to the children of two sisters of his residing in the same place."

"Who are the Fredericton heirs?" is of course the question of greatest moment to most of our readers. The following is as complete a list as it was possible to obtain before the time of going to press: Mr. George Hatt, Jr., Mr. David Hatt, Mrs. J. J. Weddall, Mrs, Dr. Torrens, Miss Hatt of Fredericton, and Mr. C. H. Hatt and Mrs. F. S. Williams of Marysville, all children of the late Mrs. Geo. Hatt, Sr.; and Miss Sampson, Mrs. Hatt's granddaughter; Dr. Torrens is the Benjamin Torrens mentioned in the will; Mrs. Henry Torren's seven daughters, one of whom is married to Mr. Randolph Yerxa; Messrs. James and David Dunlap of Fredericton, and their two sisters, also living here, William, Henry and John Dunlap, also heirs, are living in the United States; Alex. Torrens and Moses Torrens are brothers of deceased. The former lives in Boston, and the other in Ireland. It will be noticed that Dr. Torrens and wife are to get a double share of the fortune, the doctor being a nephew of deceased and his wife a daughter of the late Mrs. George Hatt. Dr. Torrens also has a brother and two sisters, already mentioned in the extract from the will. The FARMER while regretting the death of Mr. George Torrens, congratulates the lucky heirs, and is delighted to know that so much of the $35,000 fortune is coming to Fredericton and vicinity.

CORRECTING MISSTATEMENTS

"A report comes from Ludlow, Miramichi, of a recent disturbance there between the Baptists and Episcopalians of that place. In the lower part of Ludlow parish there is a union house of worship, the key of which is held by the resident Baptist clergymen. The other day Rev. Mr. Montgomery, rector of Kingsclear, who also has charge of the Episcopal mission in the parish of Ludlow, made an appointment for service in the union church. The Baptist minister and his people took objection to Mr. Montgomery preaching in the church on the grounds of his ritualistic tendencies. At the hour appointed for the service Rev. Mr. Montgomery and the churchmen in the community gathered at the church, but only to find the door locked upon them. A zealous churchman, however, broke open the door, and the religious service was held, as appointed, undisturbed. The affair is said to have created much strife and feud in the place, and the Baptist minister threatens legal action. The union church is about six miles distant from the new Ludlow Episcopal church."

CORRECTIONS ON THE ABOVE.

1. The title Episcopal is legally applied to the Roman Catholic Corporation in New Brunswick: the persons referred to seem to be members of the Church of England.

2. The occurence in question took place in Doaktown which is not in Ludlow.

3. The Church of England clergyman was especially invited down to Doaktown to hold service.

4. When the Church of England clergyman arrived the Union Church was open for his reception.

5. If the Union Church had been opened with violence, it was opened by one who was not a member of the Church of England, nor an Episcopalian, however zealous he might be.

6. The Union Church at Doaktown is about twelve miles from the new church of the Church of England in Ludlow, and about sixteen miles from the Episcopal Church in Ludlow.

7. The Union Church was built with money partly provided by members of the Church of England, who would have a right to have services held therein; but on this occasion the clergyman was not invited down by members of the Church of England, nor was the building opened by a member of the Church of England.

IS THE SCOTT ACT A FAILURE?

(Published by Request.)

Read the following facts from the latest report of the Inspector of Prisons in Ontario:

1. Ten counties, viz, Bruce, Dufferin, Dundas, Stormont, Glengarry, Huron, Norfolk, Oxford, Renfrew, and Simcoe, have had the Scott Act in force two years. Commitments in these ten counties were as follows;—

In 1884, under license.....911
In 1886, under Scott Act.....81

2. The following fourteen counties, viz., Durham, Northumberland, Elgin, Kent, Lambton, Lanark, Lennox, Addington, Leeds, Grenville, Ontario, Peterborough, Victoria and Wellington, have had the Scott Act in operation one year. The commitments for drunkenness in those fourteen counties were as follows;—

In 1884, under license.....501
In 1886, under Scott Act.....200

There are fourteen counties in Ontario still under license. In those, commitments for drunkenness have increased:—

In 1884, commitments for drunkenness, 2,248
In 1886, commitments for drunkenness, 2,314
increase.....66

3. Has the Scott Act reduced other crimes? Yes. In twenty-four counties and two cities under the Scott Act, in 1886, there were 1,940 commitments for all crimes. In 1884, the inhabitants of the same twenty-four counties and two cities under license had 2,806 commitments for all crimes—a reduction of 866 under the Scott Act.

4. In the Province of Ontario there are about one million people under license, and about the same under the Scott Act. The million people under license in 1886, committed 7,923 crimes. The million people under the Scott Act committed in 1886 only 1,940 crimes—a difference in number of 5,983. These facts speak for themselves.

5 Is there more liquor made and consumed now than under license? Whiskey men say, Yes. What are the facts?

1,342,989 gallons of whiskey less were taken out of bond for consumption in 1886 than the average take out for the five preceeding years. The consumption of beer and ale, according to the Blue Book, was twenty-one per cent, less for 1886 than the average for the ten preceeding years.

A FEMALE BIGAMIST.

Mary Ann Bates has Two Husbands Living in Fredericton.

A Day's Courtship Ends in Marriage.

An Unworthy Spouse.

After a reign of uneventful quietness which has prevaded the police circles for some time past, says a city contemporary, the authorities have in their hands at present, a clear case of bigamy with which to deal. The offender, however, a female in this case, is still at large, beyond the county line, and a good many miles of rough and muddy roads, separate her from the officers of the law, and a disappointed husband or bridegroom as he may yet be classed. On the 10th of October last, John Thomas Walsh, formerly of St. John, was married in this city to a girl named Annie Bates, by the Rev. G. G. Roberts. After their marriage, they went to live at Fredericton Junction, where they both had been living for some time previous to their marriage. On Saturday, John Thomas Walsh, wifeless and homeless, found his way into the police magistrate's office, and there lodged a complaint against the aforesaid Annie Bates, the object of his love and marriage vow a few weeks before, whom he had discovered was the one George A. Bernard, having been married to him on October 14th, 1885, he being still living. There was little doubt in the mind of Walsh, from the evidence he had already established, that he had been victimized; and there was still less doubt in the minds of the police authorities that such was the case, as the double wife was well known to them, she having lived for a number of years in this city, where she had succeeded in establishing a reputation for herself that made her no stranger to the police. John Thomas Walsh, the victimized husband, is a painter by trade, and hails from St. John. During the summer and fall he has been at work at his trade at Fredericton Junction. He is a very innocent looking man, and is to-day the picture of one who has been badly hoaxed and disappointed. Of his courtship which led to his hasty and unhappy union with the alleged bigamist, he has the following remarkable story to tell, which is corroborated by parties living at the Junction: One day while at work finishing up the painting of the Free Baptist church at Fredericton Junction, a young woman of his acquaintance came to him and after chatting with him awhile, asked him

IF HE WOULD NOT LIKE TO GET MARRIED,

if he could get a nice girl, one that suited him in every way. Walsh replied that he did no know; he had not given the matter much attention of late. The young woman said to him that the girl of whom she spoke had been jilted by her lover, after promising to marry her, and that she had set her affections on him (Walsh) and was all ready to get married. Walsh finally promised the young woman that he would give her a final answer in the morning. That night he was painting the church and the next morning he was introduced to the girl who had set her affections on him. The formality of the introduction over, he and Miss Annie Bates, for that was the name of the "nice" girl, who had learned to love him without his knowledge, were talking matters matrimonial. He had his pockets full of money, and she was all ready and willing, and why delay? He hired a horse and carriage, and in a few hours they were on their way to Fredericton to get married. Arriving in the city, he procured his marriage license, and immediately they repaired to Rev. G. G. Roberts, where the solemn diction was pronounced, which made the hasty lovers man and wife. Their period of courtship consisted of the drive over the twenty-one miles of road between the Junction and the city and their honeymoon tour the drive in the opposite direction. At Fredericton Junction they took up their abode with a family by the name of Pride with whom the girl had been living for some time past. As their courtship was characterized by more remarkable promptness than even cases of so their wedded life was to be of a corresponding brief duration. Less than a week from the time they promised to love and obey one another, they quarrelled, and the mother-in-law, who lived at the same house with the newly married couple, added fuel to the fire. After a short truce, war was again declared and John Thomas Walsh returned home one night to find that his wife and mother-in-law had taken their departure to parts unknown, leaving him without a trunk, or a stich of clothes except the work clothes he had on his back; in short they stripped him of everything and skedaddled. He made an effort to pursue them. After a time he learned that a party had been engaged to drive them to Fredericton.

He followed them to Fredericton and after a hunt about town for several days, he learned that they were driven across the bridge and taken down the river towards Grand Lake. The escapade took place about three weeks ago. It was not, however until last week that he discovered, in his inquiries about the renegade life partner, that she was already the wife of another man. His researches then partook of a different nature, and it was not long before he became convinced that the reports about her previous marriage were more than rumors. He was told by different parties that his wife was married in this city and lived here for some time in married life about a couple of years ago; that her husband deserted her because of her unfaithfulness towards him. Having learned that was solemnized by Rev. Dr. McLeod, he called upon that minister, who found the following among his marriage records; "Married, Oct, 12th, 1885, Geo. A. Bernard and Mary Ann Bates." This was the climax to his researches and he forthwith repaired to the police court and lodged the complaint against the woman for bigamy.

Mary Ann Bates, for that was the name by which the girl was known when she first came to this city, has had rather a remarkable career since she left her country home in the back settlements of Queens county. She was first brought to the notice of the public on the 10th of March 1885 when the auburn-haired damsel figured prominently at the police court arraigned for committing a theft at the Royal Hotel, where she was engaged as a servant she was convicted lightly for her first offence. In the fall of that same year she was married as above stated, to Geo. A, Bernard. Bernard was an honest hard-working young man, and was well spoken of by all who knew him. After their marriage they lived together in a house on George Street. They did not live happily together however, and one night a few months after they were married, taking with him all the goods and chattels of and real value. Bernard left town at the time, but it is stated that he has been in the city most of the time since then. Shortly after her husband deserted her, Mrs. Bernard led rather a reckless life, until she became a convert of the Salvatien Army. Several months ago she went to Fredericton Junction to live. She gained the affection of a young man there, and they were about to be married when the young man's people learned something of her previous history while in the city, and the engagement was broken off. Her hopes being thus blighted, but not to be undone, she set her affections on the innocent church painter, and set about to win him in the manner described above.

HE DESERTED HER,

Rev. G. F. Currie of Fredericton Junction, who, was in town Tuesday, says that the story of their hasty courtship and marriage, as told by Walsh himself, is true without any doubt. As understood by the people at the Junction, they were made acquainted and married on the same day. He believed that the girl's people lived on Grand Lake.

Mary Ann Bates, alias Mrs. Bernard, alias Mrs. Walsh is now believed to have made her escape to her old home in the country. Her mother who lived with her at the Junction, went by the name of Mrs. Campbell. There are some who believe that the girl's maiden name is not Bates, bnt a name assumed by her after she had been charged with the crime.

Miss Mary Campbell, Elm, writes: "After taking four bottles of Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure, I feel as if I were a new person. I had been troubled with Dyspepsia for a number of years, and tried many remedies, but of no avail, until I used this celebrated Dyspeptic Cure." CABRIOLET AS A MILKIST.

His experience with the gentle kine.

Carbriolet was invited into the country to spend a few days with some friends, and one evening they induced him to try his hand at milking. This is what he writes about it: "As a coy, tripping milk-maid I am not a success. Looking back over the evening's performance, I am completely cowed.

I asked for a gentle cow—one that would not get rude and motion with her feet when I laid hands on her dairy works. My fair guide pointed out a cow which she thought would fill all the requirements, including the milk-bucket. The cow's name was Flossy. I notice that they always give cows some some silly female title, instead of John, or some other solid old family name of the kine.

"Be sure you get on her left side," she said, warningly, as she tripped away to another stall to tap a fresh cow and put it on draft.

This was a bright remark. I demanded in clarion tones, of the natives at large, which is the left side of a cow? I was standing at the animal's tail when she delivered the suggestion, and after getting down the bucket and going through a pantomine to find out which was my left hand, I selected that side of the cow which bordered her on the left. I felt that I was pitiably mixed up on the latitude and longitude of that cow, and I was mortally afraid that she would get mad and bite me in the overalls.

"S-y-o-key—sukey—whoa—back—jee—haw," I remarked, in a tone of easy familiarity, to show the cow that I was largely onto the vernacular of such occasions. The cow looked aromnd at me mildly and went on chewing her tolu, or whatever it was, but I fancied she did it more wearily than before. I carefully placed the milk-bucket where it would be most effective, and gently took hold of something or udder which hung down to the profuse extent of four. I picked out the ripest-looking one and gently shook hands with it. There was no response. I pressed on it again, and this time a warm stream crept furtively into my left eye and greased my sense of sight in good fashion. I was encouraged. I cannot taste milk with my eye, but I knew at once that I had struck the right trail, and that her milky way was all right.

"If you want to milk that cow," said the hired man, as he rose up and saw me, "you'd better get on the other side. That's the right side."

"Well, my good friend," I answered, in a deliberately humorous manner, as I commenced to milk on my necktie, "you surely do not want me to milk on the wrong side. I'm very busy just now and have probably milked more cows than you ever read in the papers about. So I'll have to get you to refrain from interrupting me while I lead this attack on the evening chores."

The hired man slunk away without answering, and I continued to cajole the elusive and reluctant cow into giving up the secret of her birth. She was a large, fat cow, and I said, obese still, but she wouldn't. Suddenly she gave a circular antarctic swipe with her left hind leg, and I accompanied the milk-bucket into the next stall.

I tried it on the opposite side of the cow next time. I never knew before that a cow gave more milk on one side than the other, unless it was the inside. This time she made no further comment with her hind leg, and I proceeded to milk into my vest pocket with the greatest composure. Somehow I couldn't turn the freshet into the tin channel which art had provided. I don't fancy that my nose is as large as the bucket, but while I could milk up that feature of my face with the utmost ease, I couldn't hit the pail at all. I wasen't used to its delivery. Finally I got it to going about right. I could hear the indescribable ,'swish! swish!" of the milk as the stream rejoined the main body in the bucket. There was a subtle satisfaction about it. I was milking a cow right to her face. I was taking part in the great dairy interests of the country. I kept right on, but suddenly the genial "swish! swish!" ceased. I pulled out a fresh stop and applied both pedals, but the noise was silent. Then the hired man emerged from the next stall with a brimming bucket of milk and I picked up mine and followed him. I took mine to the light and it contained about three quarts of nothing. I hadn't been "swishing" at all. I was deceived by the sound of the soprano swish of the hired man's cow."
