POOR COPY

Miscellaneous.

ABOUT HOME.—Know that the outside stock is well sheltered; that the cattle are housed and their stomachs are full; that the woodpile is high around the old hearth, where your infant knees clambered long years ago, and that the father and mother sit down in calm content to know that in their sere and yellow leaf the little children who warmed themselves at that same hearth, have not forgotten them. Try it on, as in the warm blood of your early years, with the frosty limbs above you, the icy road beneath your tread, the old home at your back, and the place of gathering, with its lighted windows, in the distance, and our word for it, you will feel happier, a thousand times, that you have left them well-to-do at home. Nothing like home at last.

Travel the world over, see all its sights, enjoy its pleasures, drink every cup of joy, there is nothing after all which will compensate for the home of the years long past and gone—for the roof and the walls which kept out the winter blast, and protected you from the burning summer's sun, nothing like the eaves where the swallows came to build their nests, and where as much as yourselves appendages of the family, and almost seemed entitled to bear the family name. Nothing like your home, whether in high or low degree. We remember hours of earlier years, and rejoice that we never trampled upon the duty that was due to its requirements, and would willingly sacrifice nearly two-score years to be again an inmate of its humble walls. We remember when the wind swept the great old trees outside, that the rock maple fire would burn upon the hearth where we warmed our little feet, and how at last we went to rest, the storm sending the hail from the shingles overhead.

A LAFF THAT IS NOT FUNNY.—There is a fish called the laff, but which is by no means to be laughed at. It buries itself in the mud or sand, and is the more dangerous for its power of assuming the exact color of its lurking-place. It is armed with a spine, of which the wound is only just short of deadly. An English soldier, pricked by one in the hollow of his foot, was instantly seized with faintness. The pain was so acute that it required four men to hold him down in his bed when the paroxysms came on; and, although he eventually recovered, he was two months in the hospital. The most remarkable circumstance connected with the pain from the wound is that it increases and decreases with the rise and fall of the tide. The "cordonnier" also inflicts a painful wound, but if you squeeze the belly, and apply the matter drawn out, instant relief is the result.

Singing oils the wheels of care and supplies the place of sunshine. A man who sings has a good heart under his shirt front. Such a man not only works more willingly but he works more constantly. An avaricious man never sings. The man who attacks singing throws a stone at the head of hilarity, and would if he could rob June of its roses or August of its meadow larks.

Give a man the necessaries of life and he wants the conveniences; give him the conveniences and he craves for the luxuries; grant him the luxuries and he sighs for the elegancies; let him have the elegancies and he yearns for the follies; give him altogether and he complains that he has been cheated both in price and quantity of the articles.

DOMESTIC SCENE.—Husband searching vigorously in his waistcoat pocket. The wife inquires:

"Have you lost your watch, love?" and he replies:

"No, dear, twas a new bonnet I had for you somewhere."
