

able benefit of an unbiased Jury, which justice and humanity require.

GENTLEMEN,
The commitments of the last vacation are numerous, but as far as facts have come to our knowledge, we are not apprised of any cases which call for particular observation at this period. Your charge therefore is general, to prevent all offences committed within your district from Trespas to Treason; and if in the prosecution of your inquiries, you should see occasion to have resort to the Court upon any point of law, you will find us ready to give you aid, at all times.

Your researches, however, must by no means be confined to the offences enumerated in the Calendar.—Crimes of every description have their origin in the vicious and immoral habits of the people: and every means, within the sphere of your inquiries by which such habits can be fostered, are objects requiring your immediate and most sedulous attention.

GENTLEMEN,
In the exercise of all the various branches of your great trust, "you must not (to use the words of an eminent writer) fear to say any thing that is true, nor dare to say any thing that is false;" and let your conduct in every particular be such, that the innocent may approach the tribunal without the apprehension of danger, and the guilty leave it without complaining of justice.

NEW-YORK, OCTOBER 4.

The following extraordinary story is taken from the Cork Advertiser of August 15:—

A vessel arrived in our harbour last Sunday from Quebec, under peculiar circumstances, which we understand to be the following. While on the passage the crew mutinied, and determined on murdering the Captain. On his being apprised of this horrid design, he begged for a short respite to prepare himself for eternity, to which they with difficulty assented. He was accordingly permitted to retire into his cabin, and, in the interval allowed him, he contrived to secrete himself under what is called the scuttle. After the limited time had expired, the inhuman wretches repaired to the cabin to accomplish their diabolical purpose, but finding the cabin windows open, and not discovering their intended victim, they concluded he had thrown himself in the sea.—On the arrival of the vessel here, a revenue officer went on board, and was told by the mate, the ringleader of the mutiny, that the Captain, in a fit of insanity, jumped overboard, and was lost; and while he was telling the story, the captain, to his infinite consternation, made his appearance. It is scarcely necessary to add that the villains have been taken into custody."

SAINT JOHN, November 19, 1810.

From HALIFAX, November 12.
A BATTLE IN PORTUGAL.

By the Ann, from Newfoundland, Lisbon letters of the 1st of October were received—copies of which we have been obligingly favored with, and lay before our readers.—From them it appears that a severe battle was fought between an Anglo-Portuguese and French army on the 27th Sept. near Coimbra; that the latter experienced a great defeat; and that an action of a general, and most probably, decisive nature, was expected to be fought the succeeding day. A letter from Newfoundland of the 1st inst. states that it was there currently reported to have taken place on the 28th—that the French were beaten, and lost 10,000 men, including two Generals; yet another letter of the same date with the preceding, mentions that it was not expected the general action would be fought until the 2d October.

The last letter furnishes some interesting particulars of the battle of the 27th September: it was fought principally by the Portuguese troops, two British regiments only, one of which was the 88th, being engaged.—The slaughter was very great: the Portuguese gave no quarters to the French, 6000 of which were killed, among whom was a General; another of his rank was also wounded.—The 88th regiment lost a Major and fourteen other officers.—80,000 French troops were engaged.

LISBON, OCTOBER 1.

"There is great news from the army—a battle was fought on the 27th ult. near Coimbra, in which the British and Portuguese gained immortal renown—it was expected the engagement would become general the following day—we are all in anxiety for the event—God send it may prove favourable for the allies."

LISBON, OCTOBER 1.

"The armies are fighting near Coimbra—From the excellent behaviour of the Portuguese troops, in repeatedly flanking the formidable attacks of the French, and driving them with great slaughter on the 27th Sept. we have full confidence that we shall completely overthrow them."

ST. JOHN'S, N. F. NOV. 1.

"I informed you of the action of the 27th Sept. in Portugal—it is currently reported here, that a general one was fought on the 28th—that the French were defeated—and lost 10,000 men, including two Generals."

ST. JOHN'S, N. F. NOV. 1.

"We had an arrival yesterday from Portugal, by which, some glorious news was received—An army (with the exception of two British regiments one of which was the 88th) composed of Portuguese troops, defeated a French army of 80,000 men—6000 of them were killed, among whom was a General Officer—another of his rank was wounded, neither of which, however, was Massena—the 88th lost a Major, and fourteen other officers of inferior grades.—The slaughter was great—the Portuguese gave no quarters.—We lost 600 men—it was expected a general engagement would take place the 2d October."
