WACHFUL WAITING IN TH EPOTATO GAME

Up to Tuesday, the 29th, the Bureau of Markets reports that 135,579 carloads of potatoes had been moved from points of production to points of consumption. This represents a record-breaking movement and is probably accounted for to some extent by the strike threat, while that was pending, and also by pressure exerted in the West by banks, which called upon farmers carrying long credits, to liquidate.

There is nothing to indicate that growers and shippers were misled by the Government crop estimate, which reported a shortage, but conditions are unusual in that outside of Aroostook, a large percentage of the crop has shifted its base, and instead of being stored in the growers' cellars or storehouses, is piled up at hundreds of widely scattered points of distribution, awaiting consumption, before life will come back into the inert and sluggish market.

It is claimed that the normal daily consumption of the country is about 700 carloads. Not more than half this quantity is now moving forward, but for many weeks the shipments were twice that and sometimes three times the 700 carloads. This excess is now evidently right at the elbows of consumers, and must be disposed of before the balance of the crop in the hands of producers, which some fairly well posted observers think to be a comparatively small percentage of the crop, will be called for and prices will pick up.

It seems to be a case of "watchful waiting," a rather tedious phase of the game, but the situation does not seem to be discouraging or to warrant the blues.—Presque Isle Star Herald.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. M. Mallory in the presence of about 45 guests. Teh bride was daintily gowned in a dress of silk and was the recipient of many useful and costly presents, including cash. The happy couple have the best wishes of their many friends for a prosperous and happy walk over life's pathway.
