SOMEBODY'S MOTHER.

The [illegible] old and ragged man,
Jaded and [illegible] with the chill of the winter's day.

The street was wet with a recent snow,
And the woman's feet were aged and slow.

She stood at the crossing, and waited long,
Alone, unaided by any, and the throng

Of human beings who passed her by,
Nor heeded the plaint of her anxious eye.

Down the street, with laughter and shout,
Glad in the freedom of "school let out,"

Came the boys like a flock of sheep,
Filling the snow piled white and deep,

Past the woman old and gray
Hastened the children on their way,

Nor offered a helping hand to her,
So feeble, so timid, afraid to stir

Lest the carriage wheels or the horses' feet
Should crowd her down in the slippery sleet.

At last came out of the merry troop
The gayest laddie of all the group;

He paused beside her, and whispered low,
"I'll help you across if you wish to go."

Her aged hand on his strong, young arm
Was placed, and so, without hurt or harm,

He guided the trembling feet along,
Proud that his own were firm and strong.

Then back again to his friends he went,
His young face all happy, and well content.

"She's somebody's mother, boys, you know,
For all she's aged and poor and slow;

"And I hope some fellow will lend a hand
To help my mother, you understand,

"If ever she's poor and old and gray,
When her own dear boy is far away."

And "somebody's mother" bowed low her head
In her home that night, and the prayer she said

Was, "God bless the boys to the noble boy
Who is somebody's son and pride and joy!"

A RAMBLE AFTER THE FIRE

BY NOW AND THEN.

Wade Hampton, of South Carolina, was the guest of Governor Vance, of North Carolina; and, I presume, during their conversation they often remarked that it was "a long time between drinks." I saw no "blue ribbon" there and very little drunkenness. During the festive week there was the usual amount of speech making, horse racing, military parades by the "boys in gray," and many other festivities were indulged in by these sociable kind, and hospitable people. We remained a week at Raleigh, very much pleased, amused and interested, in many new and strange scenes. At six, on the morning of October 22nd, we took good-bye of the Capital and the many friends we had made there, including a bright and intelligent "yellow boy" at the hotel, who waited upon us with much attention, and who was, apparently, quite sorry at our departure. He said "he wasn't much account no how when de war was goin on," likewise adding, "dat he was raised by a man from Massachusetts, and he was going to be a prominent nigger some of dese yere days." After a ride of nine hours through a country, the greater part of it cultivated—a section of the State that was evidently utilized for the manufacture of turpentine, resin and tar, the pines markably straight and tall but [illegible] pines for miles and miles on either side of the road were "chipped" to the base, the life blood zapped and oozing away in what would have been stately pines in a large growth, were it not to satisfy the cravings of vain and ambitious men in extracting these much used and useful articles, leaving them in the dishonored [illegible] of all the grandeur and magnificence they would have otherwise attained, we arrived at Fayetteville at three in the afternoon, a very quiet, sandy looking place, situated at the head of Cape Fear River, containing about two thousand inhabitants. Two days was quite long enough to be compelled to remain at Fayetteville, and on the night of the 23rd at the late night hour, we found ourselves on board of a small side-wheel steamer, taken to the water's edge with a very inflammable cargo of cotton, turpentine and resin, bound for Wilmington. It was a lovely night, the pale moon shining brightly in the clear, balmy air, the air delightfully fresh, and breezy as we sped our way down the narrow and crooked stream, fringed on either side with beautiful green trees. A no less sublime repose supervened, only broken by the rattle of machinery, the frightened shrieks of some of the feathered songsters of the forest, or the lively singing of the "nigger crew," as they loaded or unloaded a portion of the cargo at different points along the river, mingled at times with the sharp orders of the captain, who was apparently familiar with every land and man, and perhaps with many of the trees on either side of the river's bank. The scenery along the river during the entire trip was delightful to the finish, savoured perhaps of monotony to either make it pleasant or interesting, the stream itself appeared to be very zig zag and tree lined, preserving the same width at every turn and within a few miles of Wilmington, holding the trip somewhat tedious and monotonous. We reached Wilmington on the afternoon of the 24th, after [illegible] the steamer from Fayetteville, a short distance and [illegible] miles away. Wilmington is built on the bank of Cape Fear River, being indemnified from the roar of Neptune's angry ocean, and Fort Fisher which was so famed Confederate stronghold during the war, that successfully withstood for a lengthened period the repeated assaults of the "Union" gunboats and monitors affording shelter and protection to the [illegible] wharves [illegible] River were lined with vessels of [illegible] tonnage, loading with cotton, turpentine, tar, resin and other products that [illegible] other places. The [illegible] quite solidly built, principally of brick, [illegible] many fine stores, churches and public buildings. A street railway traverses some of the principal streets, the car being "engineered" by a white man who is in the double capacity of driver and [illegible] and is slowly drawn along [illegible] Wilmington and [illegible] South, they have a quiet, [illegible] and, in some instances, [illegible] appearance. The in[illegible] [illegible] "Pocosin Creek," the [illegible] being all Africans who are exceedingly polite and attentive, anticipating your every want. We left Wilmington on the early morn of the 27th, arriving at a small town called "Wilson," at 10.30 a. m. Wilson is surrounded by immense fields of cotton and corn, the "niggers" toiling in the fields as they did before the war, however they can pursue their avocations without any cruel task master, whip in hand to oversee their labors. They are usually employed in picking cotton by the pound, and the more skillful [illegible] they are, the more money [illegible] "put in their purse," [illegible] as of [illegible] [illegible] 28th,
