Address to the Soul.

Immortal soul, reflect upon thyself,
Let all thy thoughts be of thy future weal,
Remember that this body must decay,
And mouldre in the silent, mirksome grave;
While thou, O Soul, must live in pain or bliss;
With Angels sing the song of Moses and the Lamb,
Or dwell with fiends in their fiery lake,
Where ever-gnawing death shall thee consume,
And yet in life there shall not be an end;
Where spirits lost shall gnaw their tongues for pain;
Where mourning souls, lamented, weep and wail,
While scowling fiends with gnashing teeth look on,
And gloat upon the horrid scene of woe.
O, thou hell-sworn who dwell in peace and ease,
And seldom think beyond the present hour,
Does conscience sometimes cry with guilty voice,
And reason flash conviction on to the soul,
That there's a dread eternity in which
You must exist in happiness or woe?
This is the voice of God, that speaks to man,
And warns him that he must give up his lease,
And quit this crumbling tenement of clay.
But when, oh! Almighty wisely hides from man,
As does a father hide his last bequest
From children, whom he loves with tenderness.

Christian Discipleship.

Jesus, I my Cross have taken,
All to leave and follow thee,
Naked, poor, despised, forsaken,
Thou, from hence, art all I shall be.
Perish every fond ambition,
All I've loved, or hoped, or known;
Yet how rich is my condition,
God and Heaven are still mine own.

Let the world despise and leave me,
They have left my Saviour too,
Human hearts and looks deceive me,
Thou art not, like them, untrue;
And if thou wilt smile upon me,
God of love, and power, and might,
Foes may have, and friends disgise me,
Show thy face and all is bright.

Go then, earthly fame and treasure,
Come disaster, scorn, and pain;
In thy service pain is pleasure,
With thy favour loss is gain.
I have called thee Abba Father,
I have set my heart on thee,
Storms may howl, and clouds may gather,
All shall work for good to me.

Man may trouble and distress me,
'Twill but drive me to thy breast;
Life with trials hard may press me,
Heaven will bring me sweeter rest.
Oh! 'tis not in grief to harm me,
While thy love is left to me;
Oh! 'twere not in joy to charm me,
Were that joy unmixed with thee.

Soul, then, know thy full salvation,
Rise o'er grief, and sin, and care,
Joy to find in every station,
Something still to do and bear;
Think what Spirit dwells within thee,
Think what Father's love is thine,
Think what Jesus died to save thee,
Child of heaven, canst thou repine.

Haste on from grace to glory,
Armed by faith, and winged by prayer,
Heaven's eternal gates before thee,
God himself shall guide thee there.
Soon shall end thine earthly conflicts,
Soon shall end thine pilgrim days,
Hope shall change to glad fruition,
Faith to sight, and prayer to praise.

Miscellany.

Days in the Furnace.

In the winter of 1845, I entered the theological seminary, and began my more immediate preparation for the preaching of the gospel. College life had brought a cloud over my piety, and relaxed the sternness of my consecration to the work. I had nothing before me but an undefined view of some pleasant parish, where sympathy and love would make labour easy.

A pious lady one day asked me if I had thought of the question of personal duty to the heathen. She said no more, but the question clung to me; I tried to dismiss the unwelcome subject, but it returned again and again; I was unhappy; conscience reproached me for avoiding the question; I excused myself. "The question is preposterous. I am not fit for a missionary; my talents are insufficient; I cannot learn a foreign language; my health is not good; my parents will not consent; there are heathen enough at home;" I am wanted here." But these things did not satisfy conscience; she told me that they were excuses, not arguments; that this was no fair and manly confronting of the question of duty, but avoiding it with a one-sided argument, not intended to elicit truth, but to reconcile duty and inclination. Still I avoided it, and the cloud between God and my soul grew darker; the Holy Spirit, grieved at my resistance, stood aloof; prayer lost its sweetness, for I could not find God.

Conscience told me more and more plainly that I ought to examine the question solemnly and fairly, look at it on both sides, decide it in the fear of God, and act accordingly. I then tried to appease it by promises;—"When I have a more convenient season," next vacation, or when I get through the seminary, I will consider it; what need of hurry? I have three years of study yet; time will throw light upon it; I will watch the leadings of providence. "No," said conscience, "you have all the light you need; the heathen world with all its wants and woes lies before you, at least eight hundred millions ignorant of Christ, two or three thousand of them dying every hour without the knowledge of salvation provided." These and other like considerations God forced upon me in spite of myself; and they gradually decided the question for me, before I had consented to look at it! I saw more and more clearly that if I should examine it candidly and conscientiously, there was little doubt which way the decision would be. This made me shun it the more; and as I did, my way grew darker and more thorny; I was fighting against God. But, blessed be his holy name! that with God-like patience he continued to fight with me, and brought me at last to yield. I kept a day of fasting and prayer; I humbled myself before God for my delay, and in view of the cross, consecrated myself in his strength to his service, wherever he might call me. The cloud departed, and the Sun of Righteousness shone upon my soul. The question was now no tangled one: I looked at all the considerations on both sides; the path of duty was plain; the noonday sun shone upon it; my objections seemed light as air, and I loathed myself that I had been swayed by them.

That day was one long to be remembered. I sat at the foot of the cross and looked up, with streaming eyes, to Him who hung upon it, "Lovest thou me?" Tears of shame and tears of love filled my eyes, as I said "Lord, thou knowest all things; thou knowest that I love thee." Time was gone; eternity surrounded and enveloped me; I breathed it. I stood before the throne of God, and saw the dead come to judgment, and receive their award. The nations that forgat God were turned into hell; the shrieks of the lost came up from the bottomless pit; while from the other side came the songs of the blessed, and among them stood those who had turned many to righteousness, shining like the stars in the firmament; their Elder Brother smiled upon them. How contemptible now seemed ease and comfort; how light the cross; how pleasant toils and sorrows endured for Him who loved us and gave himself for us! I blessed God, and have never ceased to bless him, that he did not leave me to pursue the path of my inclination. I shudder as I look back and think, what if God, wearied with my opposition, had given me up to my folly?

That day was to me a beginning of days, the first of a new life, a second conversion. The experience which preceded it was wonderfully similar to that which preceded my first submission to God; there was the same persevering work of the Spirit, the same resistance, the same excuses, the same procrastination, the same grieving of the Spirit and the same patience on his part, and the same final submission and consecration, and the same blessed results. Thenceforward the candle of the Lord shone round about me, and the everlasting arms were underneath me. I never afterward had a single doubt of my call to be a foreign missionary.

Remark.—The path of duty is the only path of happiness. All the "goodness which the Lord hath laid up for them that fear him," is strewn along that path; all the flowers which he has appointed to gladden our way, grow beside it, and well of living water spring up all along it; while the way of selfish inclination leads through the wilderness and solitary way; it is barren as the desert; owls hoot by it, and the wild beast has his lair there.—Journal of Missions.

"SOMETHING THAT SHOULD HAVE BEEN A MAN."

"There goes something that should have been a man!" exclaimed a friend.

The poor creature was just leaving a low grog shop. A tall form, with a massive broad chest, a noble brow, with a shock of frizzled gray hair—eyes deep, dark, and lustrous once; now, still deep, but sepulchral, and burning like smouldering fires upon red altars—these made the sum total of that something that should have been a man.

But once to trace his career.

A beautiful babe pressed fondly to the breast of a joyous mother. Clinging to her neck, playing with her ringlets, filling the house with the music of his laughter.

A lovely boy, towards whom all eyes are turned; his face bright with enthusiasm, wending his way to the little school, and there winning prizes. So in the play-ground, the king among his fellows; vivacious, full of fun and repartee, eager at play. Hear the ring of his glad shouts!

A youth, already singling his gentle partner. A youth, sipping at small parties the bright-hued wine, and pouring upon the frothy pearls that deck its surface.

A young man! How the words leap to prayer. How much of strength, what beaming eyes, what high resolves, and proud startings for fame! What yearnings to be rich! What hopes of happiness! What dreamings of the future! What excesses of joy, those three little words conjure before the mind!

A young man! Does he mean to be drunken? To be poor? To be dishonored? To have the children laugh and point the finger at him? To strike down the helpless woman? To deform innocent children? To turn home into worse than a howling desert?

O! assuredly not.

Not does he think so, while he leans back in the gorgeous saloon, and amid flashing lights, aided by every artifice, takes to his heart, to his soul, hugging it as a miser hugs his treasure, the fiend that dishonors.

Well, time has passed swiftly; the brand is burnt out, it is charred and blackened, the star has fallen from the heavens of home.

Hit hickers, he quarrels he laughs with silly leering, and kicks at the harmless chairs and tables. He roars, that you may roar him back; and thinks it wit. If his wife smiles, he curses her; and if she cannot get him a supper on a fire, still he curses her. It is cursing, cursing, and going to grog shops, and coming home to curse again, from morning till night.

Alas! poor drunkard. Whenever you behold him, you see "something that should have been a man." Ah! and something that cannot be freed from human responsibilities. The Judgment! The Judgment!

UNION HOTEL, Union Street, between Charlotte and Sydney streets, (south side.)—The Proprietor of this Establishment, thankful for favors received during the period he occupied the New Brunswick Hotel, and convinced of the necessity of more and better accommodation for the public, has erected a large and substantial Building in Union street, capable of accommodating from 70 to 80 Boarders. This House is well ventilated, the sleeping rooms are large, and every thing is well supplied with water, and also lighted with gas. The Proprietor is determined to leave no means untried to merit the patronage of the community. Travellers arriving late at night will find the house always open, and ready to receive them; while the conveniences and moderate charges will render it emphatically the home of the stranger. The tables of the house will be supplied with the best the market affords, and the Proprietor is determined to adhere strictly to the Total Abstinence principle. ☞ Two large Stables have been erected on the premises, capable of accomodating 60 or 70 horses. Good hostlers always in attendance.

MEDICINES FOR THE SEASON!
An unfailing Remedy for
DIARRHŒA AND CHOLERA!!
Neuropathic Drops, & Dysentery Syrup.

THIS is the third Summer since the Subscriber became acquainted with these medicines; which taken separately or combined, exert a very wonderful control over the various bowel complaints that prevail at this season of the year,—from ordinary Diarrhœa to the most malignant case of Asiatic Cholera.

During those seasons, he has enjoyed uncommon opportunities of witnessing the triumphs of these medicines; and has been so thoroughly convinced of their extraordinary sanitary powers, that he feels it his duty to publish his confidence in them, and to promote their diffusion as much as possible; sure, that by so doing, he will save great numbers of precious lives.

These medicines, (the Neuropathic Drops and Dysentery Syrup) are prepared by E. O. & G. C. Wilson, the well-known Botanic Druggists of Boston, Mass., whose Pharmaceutical preparations have long enjoyed the highest reputation for scientific skill and professional fidelity. They belong to that small class of medical manufacturers, who rely upon their goods to advertise themselves; and it was only by a careful personal interview with the senior partner of this Firm, that the subscriber learned of the existence of these medicines. But their certain curative power in his own case, led him to recommend them to others; and every succeeding occasion of trial has strengthened his conviction, that he can do no greater service to his suffering fellow men, than by spreading abroad a knowledge of their virtues; especially at this season of the year, when the destroyer is abroad, sweeping the "fairest and best" into untimely graves.

THE NEUROPATHIC DROPS.

This Remedy, as its name imports, acts upon the Nerves, and expels disease by re-invigorating the vital forces of the more or less nervous system. It exerts a power over pain more soothing and potent, than any of the medicines which have become celebrated as "Pain-killers." It in fact accomplishes the same purposes for which they are advertised—but with greater certainty. For many distressing diseases, besides those of the Chylopoietic system, such as Rheumatism, The Dead-nerve, Lumbergs, Toothache, Spinal and Neuralgic affections, &c., it operates like a charm, giving almost instant and permanent relief.

THE DYSENTERY SYRUP.

This Syrup alone is the appropriate and sovereign remedy for the Dysentery, Diarrhœa, and various other bowel derangements of the bowels. In violent cases, it is taken in combination with the Neuropathic Drops, in the usual doses; and it may safely be said that no medical practitioner has ever given more signal and undeniable evidence of complete success, than that the swift Messenger of Death is arrested by former cases, and the victim rescued. The best proof that any medicine can give of its virtues, is the grateful appreciation of those saved by it; and those who have ever used these medicines are never willing to be without them.

The above medicines are for sale in St. John, at the Religious Intelligencer Book Store, and also at Messrs. Hannah & Underhill's, King Street.

M. A. STEVENS, Agent.

[From George Washington Morgan.]

NEW YORK, June 17, 1854.

Messrs. MASON & HAMLIN,

Gents.—I have had the pleasure of trying one of your Melodeons this morning. I can strongly commend them to parties wishing to study the Organ, and can assure you, for my own use, I should select one of your make.

Most faithfully yours,

GEO. WASHBOURNE MORGAN,

Late Organist of St. Clares, Southwark, the Parish Church of South Hackney, and to the Harmonic Union, Exeter Hall, London.

St. John, N. B., March 27, 1855.

MR. STEVENS,—Dear Sir,—It is with pleasure I make known to you the opinion of myself and many others, of the MELODEONS purchased from you a few months ago. This instrument manufactured by MASON & HAMLIN, has given the utmost satisfaction, both in Tone, Touch, and Power, and I do freely, and cheerfully admit it is the best I have ever seen. Since the introduction of this instrument in our Choir Practice we find a great improvement, thereby sustaining the Voice, and producing a perfect Tone to every Note. I am dear Sir, yours truly,

R. D. McARTHUR,
Conductor of St. Andrews' Church Choir.

AYER'S PILLS.

OTHERS by their powerful influence on the internal viscera to purify the blood and stimulate it into healthy action. They remove the obstructions of the stomach, bowels, liver, and other organs of the body, by restoring their irregular action to health, correct, wherever they exist, such derangements as are the first causes of disease. An extensive trial of their virtues, by Professors, Physicians, and Patients, has shown cures of dangerous diseases almost beyond belief, were they not substantiated by persons of such exalted position and character as to forbid the suspicion of untruth. Their certificates are published in my American Almanac, which the Agents below named are pleased to furnish free to all inquiring.

Annexed we give Directions for their use in the complaints which they have been found to cure.

FOR COSTIVENESS.—Take one or two Pills, according to as to gently move the bowels. Costiveness is frequently the aggravating cause of Fevers, and the cure of one complaint is the cure of both. No person can feel well while under a costive habit of body. Hence it should be, as it can be, promptly relieved.

FOR DYSPEPSIA, which is sometimes the cause of Costiveness, and always uncomfortable, take mild doses—from one to four—to stimulate the stomach and liver into healthy action. They will do it and the heartburn, headache, and soulburn of dyspepsia will rapidly disappear. When it has gone, don't forget what cured you.

For a FOUL STOMACH, or Morbid Inaction of the Bowels which produces general depression of the Spirits and bad health, take from four to eight Pills at first, and smaller doses afterwards, until activity and strength is restored to the system.

FOR NEUROGNESS, SICK HEADACHE, NAUSEA, Pain in the Stomach, Bank, or Side, take from four to eight pills on going to bed. If they do not operate sufficiently, take more the next day until they do. These complaints will be swept out from the system. Don't wear those and kindred disorders because your stomach is foul.

FOR SCROFULA, ERYSIPELAS, and all Diseases of the Skin, take the Pills freely and frequently, to keep the bowels open. The eruptions will generally soon begin to diminish and disappear. Many doubtful ulcers and sores have been healed up by the purging effect of these Pills, and some disgusting diseases which seemed to saturate the whole system have completely yielded to their influence, leaving the sufferer in perfect health. Patients, your duty to society forbids that you should parade yourself around the world covered with pimples, blotches, ulcers, sores, and all or any of the numerous diseases of the skin, because your system wants cleansing.

TO PURIFY THE BLOOD they are the best medicine ever discovered. They should be taken freely and frequently, and the impurities which now sow the seeds of incurable diseases will be wept out of the system like chaff before the wind. By this property they do as much good in preventing sickness as by the remarkable cures which they are making every where.

LIVER COMPLAINT, JAUNDICE, and all Bilious Affections arise from some derangement—either torpidity, congestion, or obstructions of the Liver. Torpidity and congestion vitiate the bile and render it unfit for digestion. This is dangerous to the health, and the constitutions frequently undermined by no other cause. Indigestion, the symptoms Obstruction of the duct which empties the bile into the stomach causes the bile to overflow into the blood. This produces Jaundice, with a long and dangerous train of evils. Costiveness, or alternately costiveness and diarrhœa, prevails. Feverish symptoms, languor, low spirits, weariness, restlessness, and melancholy, with sometimes inability to sleep, and sometimes great drowsiness; sometimes there is severe pain in the side; the skin and the white of the eyes become a greenish yellow; the stomach acid; the bowels sore to the touch; the whole system irritable, with a tendency to fever, which may turn to bilious fever, bilious colic bilious diarrhœa, dysentery, &c. A medium dose of three or four Pills taken at night, followed by two or three in the morning, and repeated a few days, will remove the cause of all these troubles. It is wicked to suffer such pains when you can cure them for 25 cents.

RHEUMATISM, GOUT, and all Inflammatory Fevers are rapidly cured by the purifying effects of these Pills upon the blood and the stimulus which they afford to the vital principle of Life. For these and all kindred complaints they should be taken in mild doses, to move the bowels gently, but freely.

AS A DINNER PILL, this is both agreeable and useful. No Pill can be made more pleasant to take, and certainly none has been made more effectual to the purpose for which a dinner pill is employed.

Prepared by J. C. AYER, Practical and Analytical Chem. Lowell, Mass., and sold in St. John by T. Walker & son, Fellows & Co., Everett & Co., Chalmer & Hunt, do., in Fredericton, in Carleton by J. Cook, and by the Druggists generally.
