[For the Religious Intelligencer.

"Zion heard, and was glad; and the daughters of Judah rejoiced because of thy judgments, O Lord." Psalms xcvii. 8.

Let war's loud clarion sound from pole to pole,
And garments roll'd in blood bestrew the ground.
Let mountains from their stable base be hurl'd.
And choke the vales,—Let whirlwinds sweep the land,
And rend the stubborn oaks.—Let ocean rise,
And sink whole navies in the unfathom'd deep.—
Let heaven's bright lamps be dark'ned in mid sky,
And strike the savage hordes with deep dismay.—
Let the foul pestilence with countenance grim,
Stalk through the earth, and lay whole nations low,—
Let God employ the thunder of His power,
And walk with awful majesty abroad
Upon the tempest's wing; while sinner's hearts
Tremble with guilty dread, His near approach—
Zion may still rejoice: for her firm base
Lies deep in the Eternal Mind. His throne
Is not more sure, than is her interest safe.
If wisdom Infinite design, what then
Shall frustrate? If Omnipotence will work,
Who then can hinder?
Those judgments that sweep o'er a guilty world,
May purge the moral atmosphere from sin;
But they are but the hidings of that power,
Which will forever circle Zion round.

But who is Zion? but the church of God.
With everlasting love's strong arms embraced
Before the ages. And each name deep grav'd
With the Eternal pen, on the broad page
Of heaven's archives; never to be era'd.
Jehovah, in his Triune Glory Thron'd
Is Zion's mighty parent, to protect.
Immanuel, as her nearest kinsman stands
Her high Redeemer; adequate to save.
The flaming hosts of the empyreal,
Shall be her escort to her Father's house.
She feeds on heavenly manna by the way.
And from the Rock of Ages slakes her thirst,
'Till folded in the arms of mighty love.

DAVID PALMER.

Family Reading.

The Family.

Farmer Maxwell was a fine old gentleman. He lived in a beautiful country place, owned the largest farm, had the smartest wife, loveliest daughters, and the brightest sons, of any man in the country. Two months ago I did not know him, but becoming indebted to his courtesy for a transient home and a bountiful hospitality, I became quite one of the family. The girls were very lovely, all having rare complexions, and such eyes of deepest, darkest blue! The boys were young, all but one—he was grown to manhood—but alas! that I must tell what I must.

I often observed, particularly on the mother's face, what seemed a shade of anguish. She would laugh, and seem at times quite merry; but the dark always came again and gathered over the fine matronly countenance. As I became more acquainted, I fancied I saw the same expression resting upon the brows and under the eyes of the beautiful girls; and at last on the father the cloud seemed to settle heaviest of all.

I had arranged to leave this pleasant family on Friday, that I might be at home on the following Sunday. I thought I perceived an unusual eagerness on the part of my friends to assist me in preparing for my journey. This grieved me the more that a storm occurred, rendering it impossible for me to take my departure that day or the next.

Saturday I saw the gloom increase. My position was anything but enviable. A haughty look and step characterized the motions of the female part of the family—while the father moved restlessly from room to room, out of doors and back again, and seemed struggling with some internal anguish.

As I was sitting in a small room in a recess, hung before with curtains, I heard two of the sisters conversing together in smothered tones.

"It will kill me if she sees him," said Louise, the oldest and the proudest.

"Can we not prevent it?" asked the other, after a momentary pause.

"No, no," cried the other—and I fancied she wrung her hands—"he will rise the whole house."

I began to be nervous, and to wonder what this mystery meant. Some vague, impending danger seemed to threaten this pleasant household. What could it be?

After dinner Ned, a rosy-cheeked little fellow, turned to his mother, saying, "Jack will be here by seven—that's when the boat comes—so look out for"—

"Sh—" cried his mother, flushing to her temples, and the old man left his comfortable arm-chair, put on hat and overcoat, and hurried out in the rain.

Two or three times it seemed as if one of the sisters was on the point of divulging something to me, but as often she drew back with a painful look of humiliation.

At last the hour for tea drew near. The table was temptingly laid with the sweetest of bread, rich cream, and country delicacies of which the city knows but little. It stood in the centre of the handsome tea room, where sat two of the sisters, looking abstractedly out in the darkness. The entire family had become silent; it was a silence of terrible foreboding. As for me, I longed to fly somewhere out of this place that had become a prison to me.

At last, as we were drawing up to the table, the sound of approaching wheels was heard. Every one stood or paused as if rooted to the place, and I looked round wondering. The sound increased, mingled with insane laughter and mad oaths. The father went towards the door—his face had changed fearfully; and the eldest daughter had just turned to me, saying with pallid lips, "You must excuse"—when a man, a demon rather, sprang shouting and blaspheming into the quiet room, and filling me with an almost deadly terror that I could not conceal.

He was a young man, and handsome, though his features were bloated with rum. He was dressed in fine broadcloth, that was creased, wrinkled and mud-bedaubed. His eyes shot dull flames, his mouth was swelled and distorted, his cheek gushed, and his shirt bosom bloody. In vain the mother urged and the sisters entreated—in vain the grey-headed father held him. He broke away, and with a fearful imprecation kicked over the table. The contents of the urn went directly upon his mother's hand, scalding it dreadfully, but she did not cry out. Then with another glare upon us, he flew to the stove, and in an instant laid it in ruins, the coals burning through the carpet, and hissing in the water, that had fortunately streamed that way.

Such a scene as that, may I never see again—never! I thought he would kill us all, as he raved, threatening with his heavy riding whip. Shrieking, I ran to a place of safety, from whence I could hear the continual crashing of furniture, until two stout farmers, who had been sent for, succeeded by their united strength in mastering and tying the furious rum-maniac with cords; and there he lay, bound in his father's house, while that father, in utter brokenness of heart, wept over his fallen child.

Alas! how hard it was the next morning—a calm, sunshiny, glorious Sabbath dawn—to meet that suffering family. No wonder they had trembled, and feared, and dreaded to have me stay—those proud, beautiful girls; that honest upright father; that self-sacrificing mother! I went trembling down stairs; a fearful hush pervaded the house. I met no one but an old domestic, who scarce looked at me as she said, "the family are all up stairs, miss; the madam is very ill; and they say poor Jack is dying;" and with a heavy sob she caught her apron to her eyes and turned away.

Two days after he was laid in the old resting-place of the Maxwells. The poor young man had perished miserably,—drank himself to death in his twenty-first year; laid, honoured neither by old nor young, and only remembered with fearful regret by his own.

Alas, alas! mother and father are sick with grief, and a pall has fallen over the young and lovely household. Alas, alas! and the great Juggernaut, Rum, is yet permitted to roll through our streets and crush its thousands hourly, and "respectable" men cry out against prohibition!

The Bible.

A nation would, indeed, be truly blessed, if it were governed by no other laws than those of this blessed book; it is so complete a system that nothing can be added to it, or taken from it; it contains everything needful to be known or done; it affords a copy for a king, and a rule for a subject; it gives instruction and counsel to the senate, authority and direction for a magistrate; it cautions a witness, requires an impartial verdict of a jury, and furnishes the judge with his sentence. It sets the husband as lord of the household, and the wife as mistress of the table—tells him how to rule, and her, how to manage. It entails honour to parents enjoins obedience to children. It prescribes and limits the sway of the sovereign, the rule of the ruler, and the authority of the master; commands the subjects to honour, and the servants to obey; and promises the blessing and protection of the Almighty, to all that walk by its rules. It gives directions for weddings, and for burials. It promises food and raiment, and limits the use of both. It points out a faithful and eternal guardian to the departing husband and father—tells him with whom to leave his fatherless children, and in whom his widow is to trust—and promises a father to the former, and husband to the latter. It teaches a man how to set his house in order, and how to make his will; it appoints a dowry for his wife, and entails the right of the first-born, and shows how the younger branches shall be left. It defends the right of all,—and reveals vengeance to every defaulter, overreacher, and oppressor. It is the first book,—the best book, and the oldest book in the world. It contains the best laws, and the most profound mysteries that ever were penned; it brings the best tidings, and affords the best of comfort, to the inquiring and disconsolate. It exhibits life and immortality from everlasting, and shows the way to glory. It is a brief recital of all that is past, and a certain prediction of all that is to come. It settles all matter in debate, resolves all doubts, and eases the minds and conscience of all their scruples. It reveals the only living and true God, and shows the way to him; and sets aside all other gods, and describes the vanity of them, and of all that trust in such; in short, it is a book of laws, to show the right and wrong; a book of wisdom, that condemns all folly, and makes the foolish wise; a book of truth, that detects all lies and confutes all errors; and a book of life, that shows the way from everlasting death. It is the most compendious book in the world—the most authentic, and the most entertaining history that ever was published. It contains the most ancient antiquities, strange events, wonderful occurrences, heroic deeds, unparalleled wars; it describes the celestial, terrestrial, and infernal worlds, and the origin of the angelic myriads, human tribes, and devilish legions. It will instruct the accomplished mechanic, and the most profund artist. It teaches the best rhetorician, and exercises every power of the most skilful arithmetician; puzzles the wisest anatomist, and exercises the nicest critic. It corrects the vain philosopher, and confutes the wise astronomer. It exposes the subtile sophist, and makes diviners mad. It is a complete code of laws—a perfect body of divinity—an unequalled narrative—a book of lives—a book of travels, and a book of voyages. It is the best covenant that ever was agreed on—the best deed that ever was sealed—the best evidence that ever was produced—the best will that ever was made, and the best testament that ever was signed. To understand it is to be wise indeed; to be ignorant of it to be destitute of wisdom. It is the king's best copy, the magistrate's best rule, the housewife's best guide, the servant's best directory, and the young man's best companion: it is the schoolboy's spelling-book, and the learned man's master-piece. It contains a choice grammar for a novice, and a profound mystery for a sage. It is the ignorant man's dictionary, and the wise man's directory. It affords knowledge of witty inventions for the humorous, and dark sayings for the grave; and is its own interpreter. It encourages the wise, the warrior, the swift, and the overcomer; and promises an eternal reward to the excellent, the conqueror, the winner, and the prevalent. And that which crowns all, is, that the Author is without partiality, and without hypocrisy, "In whom is no variableness or shadow of turning." Reader, value your Bible.

Mind and Body.

Dr. James Johnson, in his 'Essay on Indigestion,' has the following excellent remarks on the influence which the condition of the body has on the mind and heart:

'Many a happy and lucky thought has sprung from an empty stomach! Many an important undertaking has been ruined by a bite of undigested pickle; many a well-laid scheme has failed in execution from a drop of green bile; many a terrible and merciless edict has gone forth in consequence of an irritated gastric nerve! The character of men's minds has often suffered from temporary derangements of the body; and thus, health may make the same man a hero in the field, whom dyspepsia may render imbecile in the cabinet.'

Dr. Johnson illustrates his subject in his usual felicitous manner. The following are some of his remarks:

'I lately saw a gentleman of brilliant talents and prolific genius, who could sit down and write extemporaneously whole pages of superior poetical effusions, with scarcely an effort of the mind, and who would yet, from a sudden derangement of the digestive organs, be so completely and quickly prostrated in intellectual power as not to be able to write three lines on the most common subject. On a late occasion, when he had merely to communicate an official transaction that required not more than half a dozen lines in the plainest language, he could not put pen to paper, though the attempt was made fifty times in the course of two days. At length he was forced to throw himself into a post-chaise and perform a long journey to deliver originally what might have been done in one minute by the pen. In half an hour after this task was performed, he sat down and wrote an ode descriptive of his own state of nervous irritability, which would not have done discredit to the pen of Byron.'

'The author of this essay has himself been so enervated by a fit of what is called indigestion, as to be utterly incapable of breaking the seal of a letter for twenty-four hours; though to all appearance, in good health at the time. Equally astonishing and unaccountable is the degree of timidity, and terror, incapacity, or whatever other magic spell it is, which annihilates for a time, the whole energy of the mind, and renders the victim of dyspepsia afraid of his own shadow, or of things more unsubstantial, if possible, than shadows.

Again he says: 'It is under the influence of such paroxysms as these, I am thoroughly convinced, that ninetenths of those melancholy instances of suicide, which shock the ears of the public, take place.'

We have no doubt of it. We have seen men of the strongest minds—strongest, we mean, but for their disease—as utterly overcome by a paroxysm of indigestion as Dr. Johnson says he has been; and we have seen them on the very brink, too, of self-destruction. How little do mankind know of the reciprocal influences of mind and matter!

The late Timothy Flint is said to have been in a remarkable degree the unhappy subject of indigestion. He was a giant at his pen for a time, till the fit came over him, when he was as imbecile, we are told, as a child; nay, as unconscious, almost, for a few days, as the hybernating animals are in mid-winter. In truth, not a few of those who are called geniuses, in respect of intellect, are of the same cast of character; and this is one reason why we are always disposed to doubt the correctness of their deductions and reasonings, and still more, of their speculations. Why, in fact, is it that Festus is not the only person who has thought that much learning makes people mad; i. e. denged? If it is true that a sound mind can only be had in a sound body, and if it is also a truth that most bodies of literary men are unsound, then there must of course be very few sound minds among our gifted literary men. Will we, ought we to trust implicitly the opinions of such men? Or, if we receive them, whether in regard to science, politics, morals or religion, should it not be with much allowance for their bodily infirmities, and with great caution?

Missionary Statistics.

A speaker at the opening of the Free Assembly's Institution, Bombay, gives the following statistics of Indian Missions:—

There were labouring throughout India and Ceylon, at the beginning of the year 1852,—

	443 missionaries,
Of whom.....	48 were ordained natives;
Together with.....	698 native catechists.
There agents resided at	313 missionary stations;
Maintained.....	1,347 vernacular day-schools,
Containing.....	47,504 boys;
Together with.....	93 boarding schools,
Containing.....	2,414 Christian boys.

They also superintended 126 superior English day-schools, in which 14,562 boys and young men were educated.

There were also.....	347 day-schools for girls,
Containing.....	11,419 scholars;
And.....	102 boarding schools,
Containing.....	2,779 Christian girls.

According to the latest reports, the number of converts from heathenism who have become communicants or church members, in connection with the various missions through India and Ceylon, amounted to about 21,299. The number of natives who, by breaking their caste, have separated themselves from heathenism to some considerable extent, and are brought under regular Christian instruction and influence, is said to be 112,191. But it is to be observed, that while some of these are baptized, others are not, and that both children and adults are included in this number.

FOOT-ROT IN SHEEP.—To every one hundred sheep, give half a pound of sulphur, mixed in their salt twice a week. Get blue vitrol, and dissolve as strong as possible, in hot cider or vinegar. Pare the foot until the diseased part is all paired away, even if it takes the entire foot, and dip the feet of the whole flock, sound ones and all, in this liquid twice a week until the trouble is removed. In about three works after you commence doctoring your sheep, select from the flock such as you trust are well, and put them into a clean pasture themselves, and continue dipping their feet the same as the diseased ones. Foot rot is very contagious, and sound sheep will get it by going into a pasture where diseased sheep have been, months after they have been removed.—It is caused by wet pasture.—Ohio Farmer.

WINTERING SHEEP.—A Vermont farmer says; I wintered last season about two hundred sheep on wheat straw, with one bushel of oil cake meal to the one hundred sheep per day, and now they are fat, although but thin when I bought them.

PRIZE INSTRUMENTS.

The Model Organ-Harmoniums,

BY MASON & HAMLIN,

Received the first Diploma, or highest honor at the last Exhibition in Boston.

THESE Instruments are designed for Churches and Halls. They have two Manuals or rows of keys, and eight Stops—Dulciana, Diapason, Flute Principal, Hautboy, Bourdon, Coupler, and Expression—and hence are capable of many beautiful effects. They are considered by the first Musicians, (from whom many commendable notices could be given were it necessary,) to be equal in power, and to possess advantages over pipe organs that would cost two hundred pounds, or more than twice the price of the HARMONIUMS.

The Subscriber having received the instrument that was exhibited as a specimen of the Organ-Harmoniums, for which the first prize was awarded, will be happy to discover its qualities to those interested, if they will favour him with a call at the Waverley House, before 9 o'clock in the morning, or in the evening. Parties at a distance wishing to learn more in regard to these Instruments, will be furnished with a descriptive Circular, by addressing the subscriber

THE MODEL MELODEONS,

Of all sizes, with one or two rows of Keys, made by the same firm, are sold by the Messrs. J. & G. LAWRENCE, at the head of King Street. These are durable Instruments, and second to none, and have not failed in any known instance to give perfect satisfaction.

M. A. STEVENS.

CARD.

To those wishing to purchase good Piano Fortes, I shall be happy to communicate gratuitously such knowledge as will enable them to secure what they desire without risk, either from England, France, or America, as may be preferred. To make the Piano a desirable Instrument, it must possess certain qualities; what these are, and how the instrument should be tested, will be explained.

Musical progress is enhanced, and a true taste acquired, nearly as much from the quality of the instrument used, as from the style of the compositions practised M. A. STEVENS,

Organist, Teacher of the Piano Forte, and
Dec. 19. Cultivation of the Voice.

FUR CAPS, &c.—Just received from England and the United States a quantity of WINTER CAPS, comprising:—South Seal new styles: Otter, new styles; America do. do. C. D. EVERETT & SON,

KENNEDY'S MEDICAL DISCOVERY.—The Greatest of the Age.—MR. KENNEDY, of Roxbury, has discovered in one of our common pasture weeds, a remedy that cures EVERY KIND OF HUMOR, from the worst Scrofula down to a common Pimple. He has tried it in over eleven hundred cases and never failed except in two. He has now in his possession over two hundred certificates of its value, all within twenty miles of Boston.

Two bottles are warranted to cure a nursing sore mouth.

One to three bottles will cure the worst kind of pimples on the face.

Two or three bottles will clear the system of biles.

Two bottles are warranted to cure the worst canker in the mouth and stomach.

Three to five bottles are warranted to cure the worst case of erysipelas.

One to two bottles are warranted to cure all humor in the eyes.

Two bottles are warranted to cure running of the ears and blotches among the hair.

Four to six bottles are warranted to cure corrupt and running ulcers.

One bottle will cure scaly eruptions of the skin.

Two or three bottles warranted to cure the worst case of ringworm.

Two or three bottles are warranted to cure the most desperate case of rheumatism.

Three or four bottles are warranted to cure the salt rheum.

Five to eight bottles will cure the very worst case of scrofula.

A benefit is always experienced from the first bottle, and a perfect cure is warranted when the above quantity is taken.

Nothing looks so improbable to those who have in vain tried all the wonderful medicines of the day, as that a common weed, growing in the pastures, and along old stone walls should cure humor in the system; yet it is now a fixed fact. If you have a humor it has to start. There are no ifs nor ands about it, uniting some cases, but not yours. He has peddled over a thousand bottles of it in the vicinity of Boston, and knows the effects of it in every case. It has already done some of the greatest cures ever done in Massachusetts. He gave it to children a year old; to old people of sixty; and has seen poor, puny looking children, whose flesh was soft and flabby, restored to perfect state of health by one bottle.

To those who are subject to a sick headache one bottle will always cure it. It gives great relief in catarrh and dizziness. Some who have taken it have been costive for years, and have been regulated by it. Where the body is sound, it works quite easy, but where there is any derangement of the functions of nature, it will cause very singular feelings, but you must not be alarmed—they always disappear in from four days to a week. There is never a bad result from it—on the contrary, when that feeling is gone, you will feel yourself like a new person. I heard some of the most extravagant encomiums of it that ever man listened to.

No change of diet ever necessary. Eat the best you can, and enough of it.

Principal Office of the Medical Discovery for the States of Maine and British Provinces, is at the Drug Establishment of H. H. HAY, 15 and 17 Market Square, Portland, Me. To whom all orders should be addressed.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

"Prove all things—hold fast that which is good."

It is not my design, for the sake of lucre, to entrap the afflicted with a spurious medicine; it has been several months before the public, and the result has been most satisfactory in every case where the advice given has been strictly observed. Ample testimony is in my possession of the many cures performed after all other remedies had failed, ought to induce a discerning public to give it a fair trial, especially those who are afflicted with Dispepsia; indigestion, Bilious and Liver Complaints. Try the ANGLO-SAXON MEDICINE in Consumption; if there is a medicine on earth that will cure that dreadful complaint,—try this medicine in Colds and Influenza, the forerunners of consumption; try it in Inflamation of the Lungs and Bowels, Constipated Bowels, Croup or Hives in Children.—Try the ALBION LINIMENT in the following complaints, in the cure of which I have ample testimony of its efficacy; King's Evil or Scrofula, Erysipelas, Canker Sores, Acute and Chronic Rheumatism, painful nervous Headache, Bites of animals, frost bites or chilblains, chapped Hands, Scalds, Burns, Bruises, Flesh Wounds—(plenty of these in the Crimea—would that it was in my power to present every brave soldier with a supply.) This Liniment will stop the blood immediately, and heal the worst wound in forty-eight hours, and extract the pain in five minutes. Let it please the Allied Governments to prove its healing virtues, and what an amount of suffering and money would be saved to the nations. It will cure Cramps, Sprains, Strains, Caked Breasts, Contraction of the Muscles, Salt Rheum, Scurvy, Scald Heads, Palsy, Piles, Ear ache, Deafness, and pains in all parts of the body. Try it in Spinal diseases; in Colds and Sore Throats it is invaluable. It is the best medicine in the world for Worm Fits in children, rubbed in on the chest and bowels. Try it you heads of families; try it high and low, rich and poor, and you will not be disappointed.—Try my SPEEDY RELIEF, or ANTI-CHOLERA MEDICINE, for Bowel complaints, Diarrhea, and Cholera. Try the ANGLO-SAXON MEDICINE, fellow citizens and subjects of British North America. I hope the time is not far distant when this invaluable preparation will win its widening way through the civilized world. This medicine being compounded from the vegetable kingdom, will not injure the most feeble constitution; but, on the contrary, it gives vitality to the whole system.—Bear that in mind, all you afflicted ones—prove it—that is the only criterion.

To the poor, my advice will be free. Thursdays and Fridays exclusively for ladies. Office, No. 164 Prince William street, up stairs. Walk in without rapping.
