Poetry.

"OH, LET ME RING THE BELL."

A missionary far away,
Beyond the Southern Sea,
Was sitting in his home one day
With Bible on his knee.

When suddenly he heard a rap,
Upon the chamber door,
And opening, there stood a boy
Of some ten years or more.

He was a bright and happy child,
With cheeks of ruddy hue,
And eyes that 'neath their lashes smiled,
And glittered like the dew.

He held his little form erect,
In boyish sturdiness,
But on his lip you could detect,
Traces of gentleness.

"Dear sir," he said, in native tongue,
"I do so want to know,
If something for the house of God,
You d kindly let me do."

"What can you do, my little boy?"
The missionary said,
And as he spoke he laid his hand
Upon the youthful head.

Then bashfully, as if afraid
His secret wish to tell,
The boy in eager accents said,
"Oh, let me ring the bell?"

"Oh, please to let me ring the bell,
For our dear house of prayer;
I'm sure I'll ring it loud and well,
And I'll be always there?"

The missionary kindly looked
Upon that upturned face,
Where hope and fear and wistfulness,
United—left their trace,

And gladly did he grant the boon;
The boy had pleaded well,
And to the eager child he said,
"Yes, you shall ring the bill!"

Oh, what a proud and happy heart
He carried to his home,
And how impatiently he longed
For the Sabbath day to come!

He rang the bell; he went to school,
The Bible learned to read,
And in his youthful heart they sowed
The gospel's precious seed.

And now to other heathen lands,
He's gone of Christ to tell;
And yet his first young mission was
To ring the Sabbath bell.

Miscellany.

Agatha.

Night was falling over the city, rendered desolate and almost depopulated by the ravages of yellow fever; and with many other noble spirits who appeared as ministering angels in that season of sorrow, Mary W—— went forth, an humble follower of the "meek and lowly" One, veiling her good deeds from the eyes of men, but feeling that they were visible to the eye of God, and bearing in her heart the memory of his words:—"Blessed are the merciful:" and "inasmuch as ye have done it unto the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

She was approaching the outskirts of the city, with a light step, and fearless as those are ever who feel around them in every danger the protecting arm of the Unseen and Eternal. At this moment a fearful cry of agony met her ear, issuing from amidst a group of cottages occupied by a poor but not abject class of people. It was the voice of a child,—"Oh, my mother! my mother!" it shrieked again and again.

She hurried towards the spot from whence the sound proceeded, entered the open door and saw a child, apparently of eight years of age, stretched upon the floor in an agony of grief, and upon a low, neat bed in the corner, lay the form of a woman, from which life seemed to have that moment departed. She approached the bed, closed the still open eyes with a gentle hand, and then lifted the child from the floor. For a moment her screams were hushed, as she gazed in wonder and amazement into the face of the stranger, and then, as she turned toward her mother's lifeless form, a fresh burst of grief resounded through the otherwise silent room. At the sound several of the neighbours rushed in, and from them Mary learned that the father had died of the pestilence a week since; that the mother was convalescent from the same disease, and that her death must have been instantaneous, as she was seen talking with her little Agatha only a few minutes before.

Leaving the neighbours to perform the last duties to the dead, Mary withdrew with the child into another room, and with that love which her orphanhood and her sorrow inspired, she took her upon her knee, clasped her in her arms, and laid her head upon her bosom.

"Hush, hush, my child! do you not know that God has done this; and that God is good?"

"Mother said so when dear father died," sobbed the child.

"And do you not believe it?"

"No, no!" she cried with frantic grief; "he can't be good now."

"Why, my darling?"

"Because he has taken away my mother too."

"Perhaps you loved her too well."

"How could I," she exclaimed, throwing back her dishevelled hair,—the long, dark curls wet with tears, and fixing her blue eyes earnestly, almost reproachfully, upon the questioner. "How could I love her too well?"

"Perhaps you loved her better than God."

"So I did—better than anybody."

"That was wrong."

"Wrong to love my mother!"

"Better than God—yes."

"How could I help it?"

"Did she not tell you that you must love God first?"

"Yes, but I was with her every day, and slept in her arms every night. She said that she had nobody in the world to love but me. How could I help loving her?"

"No, you could not help it, and so God has taken her up to his home; and now all your parents are in heaven—your earthly and your heavenly,—so that you will want to go there too; won't you?"

"Yes; I want to go now."

"But God is not ready for you. He is the first great Parent of us all; and when his time comes, he will send a beautiful angel—perhaps your dear mother—to carry you in her arms to heaven. But you must wait."

"How long do you think that I must wait?"

"I cannot tell; but God knows best. You are willing to wait his time?"

"If he will send for me soon," she said sobbing.

"And if it is not soon, you will wait patiently, and believe that he loves you."

"If he loved me would he take away my father and my mother, and leave me all alone, with no one to take care of me?"

"It is because he loves you, that he wishes you to love him better than earthly friends. But have you no relations?"

"Not one. We came from England in a ship four weeks ago."

"God will raise up friends for the little orphan, if she trusts in him. Perhaps he has sent me. Do you not think that God has sent me to be a friend to you?"

"And will you be?" she said, with a touching pathos, which brought the tears to her eyes; "Will you take care of me?"

"Yes my child," and she pressed her closer to her heart, "God helping me, I will." And she smoothed back the hair from the childish brow and kissed her with a tearful tenderness. The child felt the moisture upon her cheek, and putting her arms about her neck, looked wonderingly into her face.

"What makes you cry? You have not lost your mother?"

Mary did not answer, but she dropped her head upon her bosom, and wept as she had not wept for years, except in the solitude and silence of her lonely chamber. She buried her face in her handkerchief, but her sobs could scarcely be repressed, for the little Agatha had touched a chord in her heart which vibrated through her whole being, calling up the memories of years gone by; memories of sorrow not to be forgotten, but blended with consolations proportioned to their bitterness. Once more she knelt beside her mother's deathbed, to receive her parting benediction and her injunctions to live henceforth to God; to give herself to his service, and to "go about doing good." Once more she received from those dying lips messages of affection to an unworthy father, who, far distant in a European capital, absorbed in pleasure, forgot the wife who pined for his return; forgot his vows to love, honour, and cherish her; and forgot the child whose helplessness claimed a parent's protection.

That little hand had touched the chain of memory, and its every link glittered with the vividness of a present reality. In a twinkling of an eye the past was all before her and the wealth which her dying mother had bequeathed to her, with all its accessories for doing good, and all the good deeds which she had performed in obedience to that mother's sacred wish; all the hours which she had passed by the bedsides of the dying, in the abodes of poverty and within the walls of hospitals,—all vanished away as the morning mist, and left her young, deserted, unprotected orphan of fourteen years, standing on the shore of life's great ocean, with no guide, no counsellor, no arm to shelter her, but that of the great All Father who watches over his trusting children. And thus had she been led on to this present hour; friends had been raised up to her at unexpected moments, when she most needed them; and love had approached and asked to shelter and protect her on the remainder of her way, but her mother's last words were ever with her, and her mission was to the homes and the hearts of the desolate. She would throw no earthly fetter about her heart, but in freedom and in singleness of purpose, God helping her she would go onward, with her "lamp ever trimmed and burning," and her hand ever active in doing good, while her eye was fixed on the crown laid up for her in heaven through the merits of her Redeemer.

Far back had memory borne her, through all those bygone years, when the falling of the little head in slumber upon her bosom reminded her of her position. Overcome by her sorrow, the little restless heart and heaving bosom yielding to the potency of sleep, and Agatha lay almost like a breathing corse, while directions were given respecting her mother's burial; every precaution taken against the danger of infection; and the little slumberer, in a carriage with her new friend, was borne away unconscious from the sad home which was to be hers no more. The sunrise of the next morning beheld the young mourner in a new home, the younger sister, the adopted of one who, still young, presided over it with a wisdom which could only be the immediate gift of heaven. And the years passed on, and Agatha learned, as a portion of the education she received, the art of doing good; with tender words, and gentle deeds, and heartfelt prayers, to bind up broken and bleeding hearts, and to implore the sanctifying influences of sorrow on all who were called to taste its bitterness. And the two orphans, desolate but not friendless, clung together through all the changes and chances of life, and felt, even here, the truth of that beatitude,—"Blessed are the merciful, for they shall obtain mercy."—*N. Our Princess Royal's Intended.—An anecdote of Prince Frederick William and his future illustrious consort is current at Berlin among the highest circles, which reflects great credit on the perfect sense and judgment of the former, and upon the high intellectual and sterling qualities of the latter. On returning from England, Prince Frederick William is said to have been asked by the Prince, his father, what he thought of his future Royal bride. "In my position, and with my future destinies," rejoined the son, "my special duty is to consider the mind, character, and tendencies of my future consort infinately more than all external appearances. The latter won my heart—the former my admiration and profound respect. They are such as are fully worthy of her Royal mother, and such as are best qualified to ensure my domestic happiness, and to win for my wife and me the love and esteem of the Prussian nation."

The most energetic measures are being taken for the extension of Romanism in Canada. Land is being bought in every direction, and churches, nunneries, and schools established. It would seem as though this Lower Province were becoming the rendezvous of priests, monks and nuns, from all parts of the world.

A man who had been sentenced to death at Vienna was offered a full pardon if he would consent to pass the night in the bed of a person who died of the cholera. In about four hours he was siezed with vomiting, violent cramps, and all the symptoms of cholera. Ultimately, by medical assistance, his life was saved. His astonishment was unbounded when he was informed that the bed was perfectly pure.

Feeling his Responsibility.—The Prussian School Councillor Dinter nobly said, "I promised God that I would look upon every Prussian peasant child as a being who would complain of me before God, if I did not provide him the best education as a man and a Christian which it was posible for me to provide."

Extract of a Letter from Professor Hayes,
Enclosing a certificate.

MESSRS. FELLOWS & CO.—Gents.—I made the examination of the Worm Lozenges as you desired, and found only the product mentioned in your note, which was of course expected, but which was not the less interesting to me. You have made an excellent choice of ingredients and the preparation is a tempting one, and must meet with a large sale from its merits. I enclose a document which you may publish.

Truly yours,

ALWAYS SOMETHING NEW.
Read this—Old and Young.

PROFESSOR WOOD'S HAIR RESTORATIVE is, no doubt, the most wonderful discovery of this age of progress, for it will restore, permanently, grey hair to its original color, cover the head of the bald with a most luxurious growth, remove at once all dandruff and itching, cure all scrofula, and other cutaneous eruptions, such as scald head, etc. It will cure, as if by magic, nervous or periodical headache; make the hair soft, glossy, and wavy, and preserve the color perfectly, and the hair from falling, to extreme old age. The following is from a distinguished member of the medical profession.

St. Paul, January 1, 1855.

Professor O. J. Wood.—Dear Sir,—Unsolicited, I send you this certificate. After being nearly bald for a long time, and having tried all the hair restoratives extant, and having no faith in any, I was induced, on hearing of yours to give it a trial. I placed myself in the hands of a barber, and had my head rubbed with a good stiff brush, and the Restorative then applied and well rubbed in, till the scalp was aglow. This I repeated every morning, and in three weeks the young hair appeared, and grew rapidly from August last till the present time, and is now thick, black and strong—soft and pleasant to the touch; whereas, before it was harsh and wiry, what little there was of it, and that little was disappearing very rapidly. I still use your Restorative about twice a week, and shall soon have a good and perfect crop of hair. Now, I had read of these things—and who has not? but have not seen hitherto any case where any person's hair was really benefitted by any of the hair tonic, etc. of the day; and it really gives me pleasure to record the result of my experience. I have recommended your preparation to others, and it already has a large and general sale throughout the territory. The people here know its effects, and have confidence in it. The supply you sent us, as wholesale agents for the territory, is nearly exhausted, and daily inquiries are made for it. You deserve credit for your discovery; and I, for one, return you my thanks for the benefit it has done me, for I certainly had despaired long ago of ever effecting any such result.

Yours, hastily, J. W. BOND.
Firm of Bond & Kelley, Druggists, St. Paul.

[From the Editor of the Real Estate Advertiser.]

Boston, 27 School-street, March 20, 1855.

Dear Sir,—Having become prematurely quite gray, I was induced, some six weeks since, to make a trial of your Restorative. I had used less than two bottles, but the gray hairs have all disappeared; and although my hair has not fully attained its original color, yet the process of change is gradually going on, and I am in great hopes that in a short time my hair will be as dark as formerly. I have also been much gratified at the healthy moisture and vigor of the hair, which before was harsh and dry; and it has ceased to come out as formerly. Respectfully yours,

Professor Wood. D. C. M. RUPP.

Carlyle, Illinois, June 19, 1855.

I have used Professor Wood's Hair Restorative, and have admired its wonderful effect. My hair was becoming, as I thought, prematurely gray, but by the use of his "Restorative," it has resumed its original color, and I have no doubt, permanently so.

THE ANGLO SAXON MEDICINE is the only sure remedy in the cure of Dyspepsia, in all its stages, Indigestion, Billious and Liver Complaints. Consumption has been cured by this celebrated medicine, and advice.—Ample testimony on hand, cannot fail to convince the most scrupulous of the value and efficiency of the Anglo Saxon Medicine. The Albion Liniment has no competitor in all diseases where external application is required—no matter what the disease is—it has not as yet failed. A single trial will convince the most sceptical of its value. Please read the following respectable testimony:—

To Dr. Benjamin Leary,

Dear Sir—I strained my Chest on a raft which I was running from Woodstock to Fredericton, and when I arrived at the latter place I was wholly unable to do any manner of labour; and was under serious apprehension of not being able to do anything for a long period of time. But being persuaded to try a bottle of your Albion Liniment, I procured one from Smith and Atherton, and did not apply more than one half of it on my chest before I was completely cured. The cure was so quick, and the relief so sensible, that I can recommend it to all who may be in the same condition that I was. Your most obedient servant,

Fredericton, June 8, 1856. D. A. FOYT.

☞ The above Medicine can be had at Dr Leary's Office, 77, Princess Street, St. John.

Granville, Nova Scotia, July 3d., 1856

Dr. Benjamin Leary, Sir,—This is to certify that I have been afflicted with Rheumatism, in different parts of my body, for two months. After trying different remedies, could find no relief; but after trying one bottle of your Almon Liniment, I am perfectly cured, and am able to attend to my business; and I can recommend it to those afflicted with Rheumatic pains in their various forms. I remain, Dear Sir,

Yours most Respectfully,
CAPTAIN WILLIAM H. GILLIATT.

G. BAINES

LATE FOREMAN for J. W. Montgomery, respectfully announces that he has opened a Tailoring Establishment, No. 16 Germain-street, opposite Market-street.

All orders left at the above establishment will be promptly attended to. Gentlemen can be measured on the premises or at their residence. aug. 15.

UNION HOTEL, Union Street, between Charlotte and Sydney streets, (south side.)—The Proprietor of this Establishment, thankful for favors received during the period he occupied the New Brunswick Hotel, and convinced of the necessity of more and better accommodation for the public, has erected a large and substantial Building in Union Street, capable of accommodation from 70 to 80 Boarders. This House is well ventilated, the sleeping rooms are large, and every flat is well supplied with water, and also lighted with gas. The proprietor is determined to leave no means untried to merit the patronage of the community. Travellers arriving late at night will find the house always open, and ready to receive them: while the conveniences and moderate charges will render it emphatically the home of the stranger. The tables of the house will be supplied with the best the market affords, and the Proprietor is determined to adhere strictly to the Total Abstinence principle. ☞ Two large Stables have been erected on the premises, capable of accommodating 60 or 70 horses. Good hostlers always in attendance.

Golden Ball Marble Establishment.
Corner of Union and Sydney Streets,
SAINT JOHN N. B.

THE Subscriber would respectfully inform his friends in St. John, and the public generally throughout the British Provinces, that he has removed his MARBLE CUTTING ESTABLISHMENT on Union Street, to a building lately erected by himself on the GOLDEN BALL CORNER, where he is prepared to carry on business on a more extensive scale, in the execution of Monuments, Tomb Tables, Head Stones, Centre Tables, and every description of ORNAMENTAL WORK required in his line of business.

Purchasers would do well to call and examine the style of work and prices before purchasing elsewhere, as the Subscriber has fitted up steam power, by which he is enabled to sell at lower prices than such articles can be obtained for in this City, or from the United States. The marble, also, is of the best quality, and the workmanship is as good as can be produced in the Province.

Chimney Pieces can be furnished to suit purchasers. Ten per Cent. discount made for Cash.

Steam Sash and Door Factory,
HARDING STREET.

JOHN H. STUART & CO. would respectfully inform his friends and the public generally, that they have recently taken the Steam Sash Factory in Harding street lately occupied by CLARKE & McALPINE, and formerly by JOHN E. TURNBULL, where they have on hand a large stock, and are continually manufacturing all kinds of DOORS, SASHES, and WINDOW Frames, which upon inspection, will be found of a superior quality, and as such they will be warranted, as it is the determination of the Subscribers to furnish their Patrons with such work as will reflect credit upon themselves and the establishment, and do away with the prejudice that exists against Machine Work. Parties contemplating building will find that they can obtain Doors and Sashes of a superior quality at our establishment far cheaper than they can get them made by hand. Joiners doing business in the country can have Sashes glazed or unglazed, packed to order in such a manner as will ensure their safety.

Remember the stand, Harding street, opposite the South-west corner, Queen's square, and give us a call.

Turning of all kinds executed with despatch. Jig Sawing done. Jig Saws to let by the hour.

TO THE PUBLIC.

WE are prepared to furnish purchasers, either at Wholesale or Retail, with all kinds of Fashionable Hats and Caps. Our present stock is large and well assorted. In making up the Spring style of Satin Hats we have used the very best description of French Plushes, which we have imported direct from the manufactory. Our stock of Cloth Caps is very large, the materials and workmanship being of the best description. Our Kossuth, Wide Awake, and other Felt Hats are imported from the most extensive manufacturing Houses in the United States, and will be sold at a very small advance on cost. A further supply of English and American Hats and Caps shortly expected, among which will be found a good assortment of Children's Fancy Hats.

Orders respectfully solicited.
