Poetry.

DEAR BROTHER.—The following lines were taken from a Tract for the "Intelligencer." Please insert them, if you consider them worthy of space in your paper. A SISTER.

Time and Eternity with the Sinner.

To-day the sinner's state is much admired,
To-morrow finds his wretched soul required.
To-day seeks what to eat, to drink and wear,
To-morrow plung'd in ruin and despair.
To-day put's off repenting for his sin,
To-morrow finds no time to do it in.
To-day thinks how to pass his time away,
To-morrow needs that time to mourn and pray.
To-day he would be counted rich and great,
To-morrow sees his miserable state.
To-day he hopes he never shall be lost,
To-morrow all his hope's give up the ghost.
To-day his conscience sleeps and is secure,
To-morrow shocks him with its dreadful roar.
To-day his sins are lovely in his sight,
To-morrow they his wretched soul affright.
To-day he never thinks on what's to come,
To-morrow finds his sad eternal doom.
To-day his worldly treasure has his heart,
To-morrow must with that and heaven part.
To-day he fain would be accounted wise,
To-morrow is a fool to his surprise.
To-day the jovial crew is his delight,
To-morrow ghastly fiends his soul affright.
To-day o'er flowing cups his health is sung,
To-morrow wants one drop to cool his tongue.
To day he slights God's laws and gospel call,
To-morrow has to answer for it all.
To-day the great salvation he rejects,
To-morrow punishes for his neglects.
To-day he slights the children of the King,
To-morrow sees them shine and hears them sing.
To-day he proudly glories in his shame,
To-morrow lamentated for the same.
To-day takes pleasure in the way to hell,
To-morrow fin'd eternally to dwell.

Boast not of to morrow, improve well to day,
Lest that should bring sorrow when this flies away

With the Saint.

To-day the saint with time things has todo,
To-morrow joyfully bids them all adieu.
To-day he darkly sees as through a glass,
To-morrow views his Jesus face to face.
To-day corrected by a chastening rod,
To-morrow smile'd by the smiles of God.
To-day he's burden'd with the weight of sin,
To-morrow purified from every stain.
To-day he's watching, fighting, full of fears,
To-morrow palms of victory he bears.
To day he's persecuted jeer'd and scorned,
To-morrow with a glorious crown adorn'd.
To-day he feels his wants exceeding great,
To-morrow he enjoys a large estate.
To-day as suppliant at the Mercy seat,
To-morrow casts his crown at Jesus' feet.
To-day he sighs, he looks, he mourns, he hungs,
To-morrow all his sighs are turned to songs.
To-day he's rack'd with pain and sore distress,
To-morrow triumphs in eternal bliss.
To day to sow in tears is his employ,
To-morrow bears his sheaves with heavenly joy.
To-day he lives by faith and leans on hope,
To-morrow is fruition swallowed up.
To-day with saints on earth he dwells in love,
To-morrow joins the glorious host above.
To-day in feeble strains he tunes a song,
To-morrow sings with an immortal tongue.
To-day he gets a taste of peace and love,
To-morrow drinks full draughts of bliss above.
To day all pleasing hopes may from him fly,
To morrow fill'd with joys that never die.
To-day in God's commands he loves to run,
To morrow hears the plaudit of "well done."
To day he's on the road to happiness,
To-morrow shall the same eternally possess.

The welcome to-morrow the Christian may say,
That ends all the sorrow and sins of to-d y.

Deceiving Children.

I was spending a few days with an intimate friend, and never did I see a more systematic housewife, and, what then seemed to me, one who had so quiet and complete control of her child. But the secret of the latter I soon learned. One evening she wished to spend with me at a neighbor's,—it was a small social gathering of friends,—therefore she was very desirous of attending; but her child demanded her presence with him. After undressing him, and hearing him say his prayers, she said—

"Willie, did you not see that pretty little kitten in the street to-day?"

"Yes, I did," he replied, "I wish I had her; wasn't she pretty?"

"Yes, very; now don't you want me to buy this kitty for you? Perhaps the man will sell her."

"Oh, yes, mother, do buy her."

"Well, then, be a good boy while I am gone;" thus saying, she closed the door, but he immediately called her back.

"Don't go till morning, then I can go with you; won't you stay?"

"No, Willie' the man won't sell it if I don't go to-night, so be a good boy."

He said no more, but quietly lay down.

"Is this the way you govern your child?" said I, after we had gained the street; if you but knew the injury you are doing, you would take a different course."

"Injury!" she repeated, "why, what harm have I done? I did not tell him I would see the man, I only asked him if I should."

"But you gave him to understand that you would. He is not old enough to detect the deception now, but he soon will be. Then I fear you will perceive your error too late.—You have yourself grafted a thorn in the young rose, which will eventually pierce you most bitterly. You cannot break off the thorn, or club the poor, to make it less piercing.—On your return he will not see the kitten, therefore you will have to invent another falsehood to conceal the first."

We had now gained our friend's door, which ended our conversation. During the evening she seemed gayer than usual; my words had little or no effect upon her. She did not think her little one was doing all in his power to keep awake to see the coveted kitten on her return, wondering what made "Mother gone so long." It was late ere I reminded her we ought to return. But little was said during our homeward walk. She went noisily into the room, supposing her boy asleep, but he heard her and said—

"Mother, is that you? Have you brought the kitten? I kept awake to see it, and I was so sleepy?"

"No, my dear; the man would not sell her."

"Why won't he, mother?" he asked with quivering lips."

"I don't know; I suppose he wants her to catch rats and mice."

"Did he say so, mother?"

"He did not say just that, but I thought he meant so."

"I did want it so bad, mother." The little lips quivered, and the tears started from his eyes. He rubbed them with his little hands, winking very fast to keep them back, but they would come; at last he fell asleep with the pearly drops glistening on his rosy cheeks.—The mother's glistened also. As she knelt to kiss them away, he murmured softly in his broken slumber, "I did want it so bad." She turned her dewy eyes toward me, saying.—

"You have led me to see my error. Never will I again, let what will be the consequences, deceive my child to please myself."

Mothers, are you practicing the same deception? If you are, pause and think of the consequences ere it is too late. Does it not lessen your confidence in a person when you find out they have been deceiving you? Will it not also that of your children in you, when they become old enough to detect it? Besides, it would be very strange if they themselves did not imitate you in things of more importance.

It is the pride and joy of a mother's heart to gain and retain the entire confidence of her child, and it is in her power to do so if she but exercise that power by prompt and example.

The Way of the Transgressor is Hard.

Mrs. Cunningham (or Cunningham Burdell) is undoubtedly a "smart woman,"—in the ordinary acceptation of the term. Her smartness carried her through the ordeal of the Coroner's Inquest, and left a load of odium upon the head and shoulders of Dr. Cornery, which he has never been able since to shake off. Subsequently, on the trial, she was considerably smarter than the public prosecutor, and came out of court with a verdict of "Not Guilty." Notwithstanding a chain of circumstantial evidence against her quite as strong as that which led Prof. Webster to the gallows in Boston a few years since. Flushed with her successes in these several instances, it is not to be wondered at that she should be emboldened to attempt almost anything else in her career of crime; but, fortunately, there is a law of our nature that vice shall not be perpetually progressive. In meditating the stupendous fraud of improvising a suppositious infant, with a view to possess herself of the property of the unfortunate man whom she is supposed to have murdered, she made a great blunder, in supposing that every man as well as every woman had his price,—and that all the world was at heart just as corrupt as she is. From this blunder in theory, she went on to blunder in practice. Her secret was divulged before she was sure enough of her instruments and accessories. There were a hundred ways in which she might have baffled suspicion and—and defeated discovery, perhaps,—but there was a blindness in her very boldness, which led her to the bar of justice before she was aware of it.

Retribution has overtaken her at last,—and if she be still a human being, with any of a woman's sensibilities or a mother's feelings, we think she must lament that she had not been convicted of the murder of Dr. Harvey Burdell, and paid the penalty, long ere this, with her worthless life. For, apart from the now shame, and disgrace and humiliation,—which this last performance of this miserable woman has brought upon the heads of her grown-up daughters and her two younger children, the public now reverses the verdict of the jury in the 'Court of Oyer and Terminer—reasoning that a woman who is wicked enough to have conceived and executed a scheme so daringly bad, must likewise have been daring enough to have slain her friend and benefactor, if not her husband, under his own roof. This conclusion may be uncharitable and wrong; but, we venture to say, that it is the deliberate conviction of nine tenths of the community,—of everbody, indeed, who has formed any opinion at all upon the subject. Hence whatever punishment may await Mrs. Cunningham, as the penalty of her present transgression,—whether it may be five years, or ten years, in the State Prison,—it is as nothing in severity, compared with the judgment which is now morally declared against her,—even by many who, before, were disposed to give her the fullest benefit of the doubt. Truly, "the way of the transgressor is hard."—[Express.

Paying The Printer.

In the days of Mycall, the publisher of The Newburyport Herald (a journal still alive and flourishing) the sheriff of old Essex, Philip Bagley, had been asked several times to pay up his arrears of subscription. At last one day he told Mycall that he would certainly stand over the next morning so he lived. 'If you don't get your money to-morrow, you may be sure I am dead,' said he. The morrow came and passed, but no money. Judge of the sheriff's feelings when, on the morning of the day after he opened his Herald and saw announced the lamented decease of Philip Bagley, Esq., High Sheriff of the county of Essex; with an obituary notice attached, giving the deceased credit for a good many excellent traits of character, but adding that he had one fault very much to deplore: he was not punctual in paying the printer. Bagley, without waiting for his breakfast, started for the Herald office. On the way it struck him as singular that none of the many friends and acquaintances he met seemed to be surprised to see him. They must have read their morning paper. Was it possible they cared so little about him as to have forgotten already that he was no more? Full of perturbation, he entered the printing office, to deny that he was dead, in propria persona. 'Why, Sheriff!' exclaimed the facetious editor, 'I thought you were defunct!' 'Defunct!' exclaimed the sheriff; 'what put that idea in your head?' 'Why you yourself!' said Mycall.—'Did you not tell me—' 'Oh! ah! yes! I see! stammered out the sheriff. 'Well, there's your money. And now contradict the report in the next paper, if you please.' 'That's not necessary, friend Bagley,' said the old joker; 'it was only printed in your copy.' The good sheriff lived many years after this 'sell,' and to the day of his real death always took good care to pay the printer.—[New Orleans Picayune.

Rock Auctions.

SCENE.—A Store in Broadway, near Warren Street. A red flag hanging at the door.

A greenhorn named Mr. Jones, from Hartford, is stopped while careering down Broadway by the sound of a stentorian voice from within crying "going." He hears the whack of the auctioneer's mallet, and sees six gentlemen standing round a table. "Things are selling mighty cheap in there," says he, and goes in. Peter Funk holds a piece of linen in his hand, and is just on the point of knocking it down at six cents a yard,—"55 1-2 yards, going, at six cents!—an awful sacrifice." "Seven," says Jones. "Eight," says Sooy Pigeon. "Nine," says Jones. Whack goes the mallet: "Sold," says Peter. "Mr. Jones, 55 1-2 yards of linen, at fifty nine cents," touching lightly on the fifty. The attentive clerk beckons to Jones, who steps back behind a mysterious desk with a screen in front. Clerk begins to make out the bill while Jones lays down a five dollar bank note to pay for the linen; the money goes into the drawer. Clerk hands Jones the bill, which reads thus:

"Mr. Jones bought of peter Funk 55 1-2 yards of irish linen, at 59 cents per yard—$32,74."

Jones opens his eyes; clerk points to the sum, and holds out right hand with the remark: "Balance, $27,74." Jones opens his mouth, and essays to speak, but is dumfounded he has heard of these pesky mock auctions but never dreamed that he should ever blunder into one in so respectable a place as Broadway. Mr. Jones ruminates and Pinches himself to see if he is dreaming; he is awake—he is in New York; Broadway. But Mr. Jones, though green, has presence of mind he forks over the balance demanded, takes his linen under his arm and gapes at the auctioneer until that functionary gets nervous and announces that the sale is adjourned for the day. Mr. Jones accordingly, to prevent being hoofed with the precious scamps, steps out and travels toward the tombs, where he finds a Metropolitan Policeman, and tells his tale of woe. In a few moments the swindling shop and the inmates, which, meantime, have got under full headway again, are taken all aback with an apparition—it is Mr. Jones with that linen under his arm, and a person with a brass shield on the lappel of his coat. The man with the shield takes the clerk by the nape of his neck, and starts him toward the Tombs; Clerk remonstrates—explains—expostulates, and so on, but keeps moving up Broadway and through Chambers street, when all of a sudden he concludes to disgorge the $32,74; which Jones takes, thanks the officer and vanishes.

TALEBEARING.—Never repeat a story unless you are certain it is correct, and not even then until something is to be gained, either of interest to yourself, or for the good of the person concerned. Tattling is a mean and wicked practice, and he who indulges in it, grows more fond of it in proportion as he is successful. If you have no good to say of your neighbour, never reproach his character by telling that which is false. He who tells you the faults of others, intends to tell others of your faults, and so the dish of news is handed from one to another, till the tale becomes enormous. 'A story never loses anything,' is wisely remarked; but on the contrary, gains in proportion as it is repeated by those who have not a strict regard for truth. Truly, "the tongue is an unruly evil, full of deadly poison."

MARRIAGE.—If I were talking to my own daughter, I would counsel her never to allow herself to dwell upon marriage as an object of life. Dignity and delicacy sink, I cannot say how rapidly, when once that idea takes possession of the mind; and so far happiness there is no more miserable being in existence than a woman, past the excitement of youth, aiming to be married, for the sake of being married. She becomes more and more dissatisfied and envious and neglectful of present duties. May you never become what I have seen many others, solely from the influence of this one false, degrading principle.

PROFESSOR WOOD'S HAIR RESTORATIVE.
IT HAS WORKED MIRACLES!
THAT ALL THE BALD AND GRAY CAN BE RESTORED PERFECTLY to original growth, and color so far as their locks are concerned does not admit of doubt; besides it will cure every possible disease of the scalp, whether developed as dandruff itching or in the shape of cutaneous eruptions—even scald head—and in no possible case will it fail in curing as if by magic, nervous or periodical headache, and if used twice a week, by the young regularly, it will preserve the color, and keep the hair from falling, to any imaginable age. Read and judge.
Milford, Worcester Co., Mass., Nov. 1855.
PROF. O. J. WOOD—Dear Sir: I take pleasure in bearing voluntary testimony to the magic effects of your wonderful Hair Restorative. As far back as 1836, my hair commenced falling off, and I have continued to fall for a great many years, and in addressing I have used many celebrated preparations for restoration. Seeing your advertisement I was induced to give your article a trial, and to my utter astonishment, found, after a few applications, that my hair became firmly set, and assumed a glossy and beautiful appearance; and by the time I had used a quart bottle, my bald head was covered over with a young and vigorous growth of hair, which is now from one to two inches in length, and growing fast.
Yours, truly, HENRY GOODRICH.
CHARLESTOWN, MASS., Aug. 9, 1856.
Gents:—Nothing but duty and sympathy that I feel in communicating to others that are afflicted as I have been, would induce me to give this public acknowledgement of the benefit I have received from Prof. Wood's Hair Restorative. It has completely restored my hair, which was quite gray, and in spots entirely bald. I have now used the Restorative about five months, and my hair is entirely changed to its original color, brown, and the new hair is over three inches in length on the spots where it was bald. I have also been much benefited in the healthy sensation and vigor of the hair, which before was dry, and it has ceased to come out as formerly. Respectfully yours, &c., MRS. R. A. STODDARD.
From Mrs. Ingalls, a well known nurse in Boston.
Boston Oct. 18th, 1856
Gents:—At your request, and being so highly pleased with the effects of the Restorative, I am free to state that my hair had become quite thin, and entirely white. I have for the last five years been in the habit of using dye, but hearing of the extraordinary effects of the article, I was induced to try it. My hair has been restored to its original thickness, and also to its former color, which is light brown.
Yours respectfully, MRS. INGALLS.
The following is from the Pastor of the Orthodox Church, Brookfield.
BROOKFIELD, MASS., Jan. 21, 1856.
Prof. Wood—Dear Sir—Having made trial of your Hair Restorative, it gives me pleasure to say, that the effects have been excellent in renovating enfeebled hair, and in a constant tendency to fading, with which I have been troubled from my childhood, and has also restored the hair, which was becoming gray, to its original color. I have used no other article, with anything like the same pleasure and profit.
Yours, truly, J. S. BURNS.
(From the Jersey City Telegraph.)
WHAT IS YOUR HAIR RESTORATIVE?—Is a question asked daily by hundreds. We answer without hesitation or fear of contradiction, that it is the only article known which will do all it promises for the hair—that it will renew its growth—it will stop its falling—it will restore its natural color; it is not a Hair Dye, but a speedy and effectious Restorative.

Above we present you with a likeness of DR. MORSE—the renowned Indian Root Pills. This philanthropist has spent the greater part of his life in travelling, having visited Europe, Asia, and Africa, as well as North America—he spent three years among the Indians of our Western country—it was in this way that the Indian Root Pills were discovered. Dr. Morse was the first man to obtain the fact that all diseases arose from impurity of the Blood—that on its strength, health, and life depended upon this vital fluid.
When the various passages become clogged and do not act in perfect harmony with the natural functions of the body, the blood becomes sluggish, becomes dark, corrupted and diseased; thus causing all pains, sickness and distress of every name; your strength is exhausted, our health we are deprived of, and if nature is not assisted in throwing off the stagnant humors, the blood will become choked and cease to act, and the vital spark of life will forever be blown out. How important then that we should keep the various passages of the body free and open. And now personal to us this we have it in our power to put a medicine in your reach, namely, Morse's Indian Root Pills, manufactured from plants and herbs, which grow around the mountains and valleys in Nature's garden, for the health and recovery of diseased man. One of the roots from which these Pills are made is a Sudorific, which opens the pores of the skin, and assists Nature in throwing out the foul parts of the corruption within. The other roots and herbs are Aperients, that operate and unclog the passage to the bowels, and thus, in a working manner, perform the duty by throwing off phlegm, and other humors from the lungs, by copious spitting. The third is a Diuretic, which gives ease and double strength to the kidneys, which are designed by nature to remove large amounts of impurity from the blood, which is then thrown out beneficially by the urinary or water passage, and which could not have been discharged in any other way. The fourth is a cathartic, and accompanies the other properties of the Pills while engaged in purifying the blood, the coarser portions of impurity which cannot pass by the other outlets, are thus taken up and conveyed off in great quantities by the bowels.
From the above, it is shown that Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills not only enter into stomach, but become united with the blood, for their best way to every part, and completely purify and cleanse the system from all impurity, and the life of the body, which is the blood, becomes perfectly healthy; consequently all sickness and pain is driven from the system for they cannot remain when the body becomes so pure and clear.
The reason why people are so distressed when sick, and why so many die, is because they do not get a medicine which will pass to the affected parts, and which will open the natural passages for the disease to be cast out, hence, a large quantity of food and other matter is lodged, and the stomach and intestines for literally overloaded with the corrupted mass; thus undergoing disagreeable fermentation, constantly mixing with the blood, which throws the corrupt matter through every vein and artery, until life is taken from the body by disease. Dr. Morse's PILLS have added to thousands by restoring upon certainty, by restoring to health of the sick to blooming health and happiness. Yes, thousands who have been racked or tormented with sickness, pain and anguish, and whose feeble frames have been scourged by the burning elements of raging fever, and who have been brought down to the very brink of the silent grave, now stand ready to testify that they would have been numbered with the dead, had it not been for this great and wonderful medicine, Morse's Indian Root Pills. After one or two doses had been taken, they were astonished, and absolutely astonished, at the wonderful their charming effects. Not only do give immediate ease and strength, and take away all weakness, pain and anguish, but they at once go to work at the foundation of the disease, which is the blood. Therefore, it will be shown, especially by those who use these Pills, that they do purify the blood, and cleanse from disease—that family cases—will take the liquid, and the blood of youth and beauty will again return, and the prospect of a long happy life will cheerful and brighten your days.

THE GREATEST MEDICAL DISCOVERY
OF THE AGE.
DR. KENNEDY, of Roxbury, Mass., has discovered in one of our common pasture weeds, a root that cures EVERY KINDOF HUMOUR, from the worst scrofula down to common Pimple. He has tried it in seven hundred cases and never failed except in two or three cases of confirmed humour!. He has now in his possession two hundred certificates of the virtue, all within twenty miles of Boston.
Two bottles are warranted to cure a running sore mouth.
One to three bottles will cure the Worst kind of pimples in the face.
Two to three bottles will clear the system of biles.
Two bottles are warranted to cure the worst canker in the mouth and stomach.
Three to five bottles are warranted to cure the worst kind of erysipelas.
One to two bottles are warranted to cure all humors of the eyes.
Two bottles are warranted to cure running of the ears and blotches among the hair.
Four to six bottles are warranted to cure corrupt and running ulcers.
One bottle will cure scaly eruption of the skin.
Two to three bottles warranted to cure the worst case of ringworm.
Two to three bottles are warranted to cure the most inveterate case of rheumatism.
Three to four bottles are warranted to cure the so called Five to six bottles will cure the worst case of scrofula.
A benefit is always experienced from the first bottle and perfect cure is warranted when the above quantity is taken.
Extract from a letter to the Commercial Bulletin, of Boston, a well known merchant of Boston. I know the effect of it in every case, so much so that wherever it will go I can tell the result beforehand. I never sold a bottle of it but that sold another in a short time. It always speaks for itself. There are two things about this medicine that appears to me surprising; first, the great good it does to some patients, to some patients, and the value has never been known until discovered by Dr. Kennedy; second, that it cannot cure all kinds of humors.
In order to give some idea of the sudden fame and popularity of the discovery, I will state that in April, 1855, I sold one dozen bottles, in April, 1856, I sold over one thousand bottles per day of it.
Some of the wholesale Druggists who have been in business twenty and thirty years, say that nothing in the medical profession has ever sold like it. There has never been a case of it from all quarters.
In my own practice I always kept it strictly for humors, and never recommended it as a general family medicine, but the wonderful virtues have been found in it that I never expected.
Several cases of epileptic fits—a disease which was considered incurable, have been cured by a few bottles, and I am sorry to say it will fail in all cases of fits, but very few cases of fits have been cured by any medicine, and I have seen many cases of fits.
I know of several cases of Dropsy, all of them aged persons, cured by it. For the various diseases of the Liver, Stomach, Dyspepsia, Asthma, Fever and Ague, Pain in the Side, Diseases of the Spine, and particularly in diseases of the Kidneys, &c., the discovery has done more good than any medicine ever known.
No change of diet ever necessary. Eat the best you can and enough of it.
DIRECTIONS FOR USE.—Adults, one table spoonful per day. Children over ten years, a dessert spoonful. Children from six to eight years, a teaspoonful. As no directions can be applicable to all constitutions, take sufficient to operate on the bowels twice a day.
The Proprietors Office for the STATE OF MAINE and Eastern Partnership is at the Drug and Medicine Establishment of R. G. Hall, Market Square, Portland, to whom all orders should be addressed. Sold by druggists throughout the United States and British Provinces. Price, $1.
