[From the Christian Messenger.]

SOMEBODY'S DARLING.

The following beautiful little poem was written by Miss Marie Lacoste, of Savannah, and refers to one of those sad incidents of the late war—unfortunately but too common in both armies:—

Into a ward of the whitewashed walls,
Where the dead and dying lay—
Wounded by bayonets, shells and balls
Somebody's darling was borne away.
Somebody's darling, so young and brave,
Wearing still on his pale sweet face,
Soon to be hid by the dust of the grave,
The lingering light of his boyhood's grace.

Matted and damp are the curls of gold,
Kissing the snows of that fair young brow;
Pale are the lips of delicate mould,—
Somebody's darling is dying now.
Back from the beautiful blue-vein'd face
Brush every wandering silken thread,
Cross his hands as a sign of grace—
Somebody's darling is still and dead.

Kiss him once for somebody's sake,
Murmur a prayer, soft and low,
One bright curl from the cluster take—
They were somebody's pride you know.
Somebody's hand had rested there,
Was it a mother's soft and white?
And have the lips of a sister fair
Been baptized in those waves of light?

God knows best. He has somebody's love:
Somebody's heart enshrined him there;
Sombody wafted his name above,
Night and morn on the wings of prayer,
Somebody wept when he marched away,
Looking so handsome, brave and grand;
Somebody's kiss on his forehead lay;
Somebody clung to his parting hand.

Somebody's waiting and watching for him,
Yearning to hold him again to her heart;
There he lies—with the blue eyes dim,
And smiling, child-like, lips apart.
Tenderly bury the fair young dead,
Pausing to drop on his grave a tear;
Carve on the wooden slab at his head—
"Somebody's darling lies buried here."

Miscellaneous.

THE MOTHER'S REMORSE.

The child was so sensitive, so like that little shrinking plant, that curls at the breath and shuts its heart from light. The only beauties she possessed were an exceedingly transparent skin, and the most mournful blue eyes. I had been trained by a stern, strict, conscientious mother. I was a hardy plant, rebounding at every shock; misfortune could not daunt, though discipline tamed me. I fancied, alas! that I must go through the same routine with this delicate creature; so, one day, when she had displeased me exceedingly by repeating an offence, I was determined to punish her severely. I was very serious all day, and on sending her to her little couch, said

"Now, my daughter, to punish you, and show you how very, very naughty you have been, I shall not kiss you to-night."

She stood looking at me, astonishment personified, with her great mournful eyes wide open. I suppose she had forgotten her misconduct till then; and I left her with tears dropping down her cheeks, and her lip quivering. Presently I was sent for—"O mamma! you will kiss me; I can't go to sleep if you don't," she sobbed, every tone of her voice trembling, as she held out her hand,

Now came the struggle between love and what I falsely termed duty. My heart said, Give her the kiss of peace; my stern nature urged me to persist in my correction, that I might impress the fault upon her mind. That is the way I have been trained until I was a submissive child, and I remember how often I had thanked my mother since for her straightforward course. I knelt by her bed and whispered, "Mother can't kiss you, Ellen," though the words seemed to choke me. Her hand touched mine; it was very hot; but I attributed it to her excitement. I blamed myself, as her fragile form shook with expressed sobs; and saying, "Mother hopes Ellen will mind her better after this," and left the room for the night.

It might have been about midnight when I was awoke by the nurse. Apprehensive I ran to the child's chamber. I had a fearful dream. Ellen did not know me. She was sitting up, crimsoned from the forehead to the throat, her eyes so bright that I almost drew back aghast at the glance. From that time a raging fever drank up her life—and what do you think was the incessant plaint poured into my anguishing heart? "O! kiss me, mother, do kiss me. I can't go to sleep. You'll kiss your little Ellen, won't you? I can't go to sleep. I won't be naughty if you'll kiss me. O! kiss me, dear mamma. I can't go to sleep."

Holy little child, she did go to sleep one gray morning, and never woke again—no, never! Her hand was locked in mine, and all my veins icy with its gradual chill. Faintly the light faded out in the beautiful eyes—whiter and whiter grew the tremulous lips. She never knew me; but with her last breath she whispered: "I will be good, mother, if you will only forgive me."

Kiss her! God knows how passionate and unavailing were my kisses on her cheek after that fatal night. God knows how wild were my prayers, that she might know, if only once, that I would have yielded my life could I have asked forgiveness of that sweet child.

Well, grief is unavailing now. She lies in her little tomb; there is a marble urn at her head, and a rose bush at her feet—there grow sweet summer flowers; there waves the gentle grass; there birds sing their matins and vespers; there the blue sky shone down to-day, and there lies the freshness of my heart.

Parents, you should have heard the pathos in the voice of the sad mother as she said: "There are plants that spring into great vigor if the heavy pressure of a footstep crush them; but O! there are others that even the pearls of the light dew bend to the earth." Mothers and fathers, be kind to the little ones. Do not wait till the daisies grow over their bosoms, before you learn to chide them in love. Kiss them before you strike them. By and by you must leave them; but leave no thorns in their memory.—Hall's Journal of Health.

"THROW, BOYS, THROW!"

A good many years, in a town in England, one Sunday evening, three noisy and wicked boys filled their pockets with stones, and straggled into a meeting. Their intention was to insult and annoy the old man who was preaching, and they accordingly seated themselves at a convenient distance at the back of the meeting-house.

They had not been there long before one of them impatiently whispered—

"What's the need of listening any longer to the blockhead? let's throw!"

"No; wait a minute and see what he makes of this point," replied his companion.

But his curiosity was soon satisfied and he too exclaimed—

"Confound him! it's just as I expected! throw, boys, throw!"

"Suppose we should give up this plan altogether," now spoke up the third.

"You're a fool!" said the other two angrily. And they hastily left the church in a rage, while he remained and heard the preacher through.

Fifteen years passed away, and there was a notice given out that a celebrated preacher from abroad would speak in that same house on Sunday. A large congregation had gathered to hear him. The minister rose in the pulpit; but before he commenced speaking he paused, and leaned his head on the cushion, and was silent some minutes. The people thought he was sick. But he raised his head and said:—

"It is just fifteen years since I was in this house before. That night three young lads came into the meeting to throw stones at the preacher. Two of them went out, and the other remained. Now I want to tell you what the fate of those boys was. The first was hanged some years ago for a dreadful crime. The second is now in jail, sentenced to death for murder. And the third, my friends, the third—is he who is to address you now. Will you listen to him?"

It is a fearful thing to go on in sin. God will surely punish us sooner or later. No matter how much we may at first seem to prosper in wicked ways, the time will come when we shall be bitterly sorry for our evil doings. There is no place on earth that the sinner can hide himself from the displeasure of the Lord. But his mercy is from everlasting to everlasting, to them that fear him and keep his commandments. Let us do right, and claim his blessing now, and share his glory at last.—World's Crisis.

A TEMPERANCE STORY WITH A POINT.

Judge Ray, the temperance lecturer, in one of his efforts, got off the following hard hit at "moderate drinkers:"

"All those who in youth acquire a habit of drinking whiskey, at forty years of age will be total abstainers or drunkards. No one can use whisky for years with moderation. If there is a person in the audience before me whose experience disproves this, let him make it known. I will account for it, or acknowledge that I am mistaken."

A tall, large man arose, and folding his arms across his breast, said:

"I offer myself as one whose own experience contradicts your statement."

"Are you a moderate drinker?" asked the Judge.

"I am."

"How long have you drank in moderation?"

"Forty years."

"And were never intoxicated?"

"Never."

"Well," remarked the Judge, scanning his subject closely from head to foot, "yours is a singular case; yet I think it easily accounted for. I am reminded by it of a little story:—A colored man with a loaf of bread and a bottle of whisky, sat down to dine on the bank of a clear stream. In breaking the bread he dropped some of the crumbs into the water. These were eagerly seized and eaten by the fish. That circumstance suggested to the darkey the idea of dipping the bread in the whiskey and feeding it to them. He tried it. It worked well. Some of the fish ate of it, became drunk, and floated helpless on the surface. In this way he easily caught a large number. But in the stream was a large fish, very unlike the rest. It partook freely of the bread and whisky, with no perceptible effect. It was shy of every effort of the darkey to take it. He resolved to have it at all hazards, that he might learn its name and nature. He procured a net, and after much effort, caught it, carried it to a colored neighbor, and asked his opinion in the matter. The other surveyed the wonder a moment, and then said: 'Sambo, I understands dis case. Dis fish is a mullet-head; it ain't got any brains!' In other words," added the Judge, "alcohol affects only the brains, and, of course, those having none may drink without injury."

The storm of laughter which followed drove the "moderate drinker" suddenly from the house.

The Psalms are a theatre where God allows us to behold both himself and his works; a most pleasant green field; a vast garden where we see all manner of flowers; a great sea in which are hid costly pearls; a heavenly school in which we have God for our teacher; a compend of all Scripture; a mirror of divine grace.

A woman's tears soften a man's heart; her flattery his head.

LINES

WRITTEN ON THE DEATH OF JANE WILCOX, WHO DIED JUNE 4TH, 1867, AGED FOURTEEN YEARS.

Dear Jane we've laid thy body down
Beneath the cold damp sod,
But oh, thy spirit, it has flown,
We trust, to be with God.

But a short time thou lived on earth,
Exposed to grief and pain—
But now thou'st left this world below,
Ne'er to return again.

With God and angels thou dost dwell,
Within that shining place;
A crown of glory's on thy head,
A smile is on thy face.

Thou hast exchanged a world of pain
For one of joys above;
Though thou hast left thy parents dear,
Whom thou did'st dearly love.

Why, dearest parents, should you mourn,
Since she is now at rest;
She lov'd you dearly while with you,
But she loved Jesus best.

If you're prepared to meet with God,
When the last trump shall sound,
Oh then you'll meet your daughter dear,
And make the heavens resound.

O happy, happy is her lot,
For none can her beguile;
O blessed thought to think that she
Did leave you with a smile.

She's on the Saviour's bosom laid,
And feels no sorrow there;
She's by a heavenly parent fed,
And needs no more your care.

She has exchanged a barren waste
For rich and fertile ground.
And gone where blessed Jesus is,
Till the last trump shall sound.

And then when Jesus does appear,
With all the saints along,
Its then you'll see your daughter, dear,
Among that happy throng.

Soon round the dazzling throne of God
We shall united stand,
And greet each other, joyfully,
In heaven the better land.

She's happy now, (no pen can tell
The joy that she does feel)—
Is numbered with the things that God
Will not on earth reveal. G. S.

THE ROYAL INSURANCE COMPANY, 92 Lombard-street, London, and Royal Insurance buildings, Liverpool.
Chairman of the London Board.—SAMUEL BAKER, ESQ.
Chairman in Liverpool.—CHARLES TURNER, ESQ.
The Royal Insurance Company is one of the largest Offices in the kingdom.
At the Annual Meeting held in August 1859, the following highly satisfactory results were shown:—

FIRE DEPARTMENT.

The most gratifying proof of the expansion of the business is exhibited in the one following fact—that the increase alone of the last three years exceeds the entire business of some of the existing and of many of the recently defunct fire insurance companies of this kingdom.

The Premiums for the year 1855 being.....	£130,060
While the Premiums for the year 1858 are....	196,148
Showing an actual increase of.....	66,088

or upwards of 50 per cent. in three years.

The recent returns of duty made by Government for this latter year (1858) again show the "Royal" as more that maintaining the ratio of its increase as stated in former years. Only one among the London insurance offices exhibits an advance to the extent of one-half the increase of the Company, while all the others respectively fall far short of the moiety of its advance.

LIFE DEPARTMENT.

The amount of new Life Premiums received this year is by far the largest received in any similar period since the commencement of the business, and must far exceed the average of amount received by the most successful offices in the kingdom. The number of policies issued in the year was 832, the sum assured £387,752 6s. 8d., and the premium £12,354 3s. 4d. These figures show a very rapid extension of business during the last ten years. Thus:—

Years.	No. of Policies.	Sums Assured.	New Premiums.
1848 ..	98	£48,764 17 0	£1,380 9 1
1850 ..	190	95,650 9 11	2,627 4 7
1852 ..	422	181,504 10 6	5,828 5 10
1854 ..	408	161,848 13 4	4,694 16 0
1856 ..	703	297,560 16 8	8,550 3 11
1858 ..	832	387,752 6 8	12,354 3 4

The remarkable increase in the business of the last four years, is mainly consequent upon the large bonus declared in 1855, which amounted to no less than £2 per cent. per annum on the sums assured and averaged 80 per cent. upon the premiums paid.

SELEE'S HAIR LIFE

RICHLY merits the high praise the people of the Provinces now award it. It has proved superior to all other Hair preparations for restoring Grey Hair to its original colour. It is, also, a splendid Hair Dressing, cleaning the Head so perfectly from Dandruff, Scurf, &c.
It invariably stops the Hair from falling off, and is, decidedly, a Hair Restorer.
The money will be refunded in all cases where a thorough trial of two bottles fails to give entire satisfaction.
Sold by Druggists and other Dealers.
F. M. PICKLES, St. John, N. B.,

UNITED PROVINCIAL COMMERCIAL COLLEGE,
Will open, after February 13, 1867, in RITCHIE'S BUILDING.

DESIGNED to Educate Young Men for Business Life. Branches taught in a practical manner by efficient Teachers and Lecturers. Book-keeping by single and Double Entry, and adapted to General Mercantile Business, Manufacturing, Mining, Milling, Forwarding and Commission Business, Foreign Exchange, Steamboating, Railroading and Banking, Business Penmanship, Commercial Arithmetic, Commercial Law, Business Letter Writing and Spelling, &c.
In the Upper Provinces a systematical Business Education is deemed as essential as any other professional education, giving, as it does, the young men an honorable business standing, with a remuneration which he could not otherwise command.
The system is conducted on actual business principles, each student being supplied with cash and merchandise to the amount of one thousand dollars, with which he trades with the Merchants' Emporium College Bank, and also his fellow students. It is surprising how much is mastered in a few months.
The room will be well furnished with desks, book-cases, Merchants' Emporium, Bank, and all other improvements for the well being of the student. Business Forms, Commercial Problems, in short, every difficulty met in Mercantile Life will be fully explained on the Blackboard. Our College has been successful for years in the West, and we can point to our students throughout the country doing well.
Life Scholarships will be issued after the 14th Feb., 1867, at $55 for full course, a discount of 10 per cent. will be allowed till the 1st of March, 1867, in order that we may have a large Class at once.
Terms payable in advance.
Hours from 9 to 12 A. M., from 2 to 4
