FOLLOW ME.

Soul o'er Life's sad ocean faring,
Whither drifts thy barque?
To what haven art thou steering
Through the dark?

Torn by tempests, tossed by billows,
Wouldst thou anchor fast?
Stay thee on eternal pillows
At the last?

Far away the Happy Islet
Where the blessed be,
Lies quite past the utmost twilight
Of the sea.

But the waves are dark within thee
And that shelter warm;
Haven there is none to screen thee
From the storm.

Weary, wounded, wind-tossed, stricken,
—Hark! across the sea
Comes a Voice thy hope to quicken
"Follow Me!"

Whither, Lord? the path is gloomy;
Dim the Harbor light:
Cruel doubts and fears pursue me
Through the night.

"Follow Me in faith and meekness
Where my steps have led,
For My strength is in thy weakness
Perfected."

Shall I find Thee when I need thee?
—"Only look above;
I will keep thee, shield thee, lead thee,
With My love."

Shall the rough waves stay their riot?
—"Nay! I say not so;
Not in peace and calm and quiet
Must thou go:

"Many a time thy soul shall sicken,
Yet, though faint thou be,
Hardly pressed and sorely stricken,
Follow Me!

"I Myself will be thy Pilot
Till thou rest for aye,
Anchored at that Happy Islet
Far away."

Miscellaneous.

"THE PRINCE OF WALES."

ORIGIN OF THE TITLE.

Our boys have always been familiar with the title which the eldest son of the English sovereign always bears. But perhaps not all of them are acquainted with its orgin. It was first given to that prince during the reign of Edward I., one of England's noblest and bravest kings.

Edward while yet a young man, had already by his martial prowess, preserved during a great rebellion—for England has had her rebellions as well as we—the fortunes of his weak father, and thus secured the throne from disaster, and had then departed for the East, in order to share the prospective glories of the last "Crusaders," where he performed feats of wonderful valor in the wars against the infidels.

Recalled to England by the death of his father, the incapable Henry III., he was crowned with great splendor in Westminister Abbey, A. D. 1274, and was compelled to begin at once a warlike reign, but which proved one of the most successful through which any monarch of England ever passed.

While nearly all the chiefs of the kingdom, including the King of Scotland, appeared at the coronation, to exhibit their loyalty to the new sovereign, Llewellyn, the proud lord of North Wales, refused to be present, and soon raising the standard of rebellion, he gathered his people around his banner, and declared war against King Edward.

After a time, however, he was reduced to submission, and Edward now thought that the province of Wales would remain in peaceful subjection to the English crown, when suddenly, David, another chieftain, and brother of Llewellyn, aroused nearly the whole of that department into a flame of revolt, ravaging the borders of the English territory, and calling forth all the energies of Edward for his subjugation. In this he at length succeeded. Llewellyn was killed in battle, David was hung as a traitor, and Wales was thus, after centuries of warfare, in which she had stubbornly resisted all the efforts of Saxons, Danes and Normans, brought into final and peaceful submission to the English sovereigns.

Edward at this time had two sons, the first a fine, manly boy, named Alphonso, the second an infant, born at the Welsh castle of Carnarvon, during the stay which his father made in the province for the settlement of its affairs. A happy thought occurred to the king. The Welsh regarding themselves as foreign to the English nation, and as merely a subjugated people, were perpetually rising in rebellion against the government. Edward, therefore, determined to unite them to the English throne by a closer tie, which while merely a nominal one, was sufficiently strong to bind Wales to its conquerors in indissoluble ties.

Presenting the infant in public, he told them that they should have "a native born prince of their own, who could not speak a word of English." The pleasing bait took with the simple-minded Welsh, and flattered by this exhibition of royal favor, they accepted the pledge of union, and from that time regarding the young prince as especially their own. He was thenceforth called the "Prince of Wales."

His elder brother, the beautiful and beloved Alphonso, soon after dying, the young Edward, for his father's name was given him, became the eldest living son, and therefore heir to the throne. And so it happened that the dignity of the crown Prince, and the little Prince of Wales, centered in the eldest son of the English monarch, and he now holds that appellation, till, in the course of events, he is called to take the royal sceptre.—Zion's Herald.

LOST CLOSE BY HOME.

More than one parent has wept at the description of the finding of the remains of three lost children; the older one nearly stripped to cover the little ones, who lay partly concealed with leaves.

The saddest part of the story is that they perished near their home, not far from where the anxious searcher ceased his efforts. That thought will ever be the bitter drop in this cup of sorrow to all who knew and loved them.

But, ah, a sadder tale has reached my ears, of a boy, nurtured in prayer, taught of Jesus' love from infancy, never absent from church and Sabbath-school, with a memory stored with the words of eternal life, turning his feet gladly toward heaven, and rejoicing his pious parents with the hope that their labors were crowned with success. This boy, so near heaven, "almost a Christian," has wandered away in the wilderness of sin, and his father's voice and mother's entreaties seem to reecho unheard, unheeded.

He has grown, as he says, "too big for Sabbath-school," "too busy" to present himself at family worship morning and evening, "too tired," after working all the week at his trade, or behind the counter, to rise in the morning and go with the family to church. He is too independent to be told what to do with his earnings, or how to spend his evenings. He has found out that his father was too strict when he forbade him to go to the theatre, to play cards, to read low novels. Satan has him in his power, leading him away from sweet home influences to the wilds and fastnesses of sin.

Poor lost boy! While the first excitement of new companions, new pleasures, continues, while he conceals his first steps in dissipation from his employer, and finds his bad habits are not hurting his pocket, or turning his father and mother against him, he goes on. All seems bright as day, and a return to old correct habits, if necessary, would be very easy. He fears nothing, and his brave young nature carries him on over the brambles and rocks lying in the road that leads to death.

By and by the parents die, the home breaks up, his employer becomes tired of his faithlessness, and he is lost. It is an easy step that leads him to gambling, to cheat in order to obtain means of living in sin, and in a fatal moment "Satan enters into him," and he signs a name not his own, and is carried to a prison cell, with reputation gone for life. He has sunk from the highest, best spot on earth, the bosom of a pious family, to the lowest place out of hell.

"Lost close by home," all will say who know his sad history. The wandering little ones, we trust, went to Jesus, and were found, not lost. This child of prayer, unless he turn and cry to the Saviour of sinners for pardon, can never meet his father, mother, brother and sisters again. His lost privileges enhance his woe, and through eternity will give him infinite anguish.

Blessed be God, while there is life there is hope. Our Lord is infinitely forgiving and loving, and the lost boy may rise from the dungeon to glory.

Tempted boys, I warn you not to try a like experiment. If you begin to feel "too big" for Sabbath-school, and the Christian home grows dull, and its pure enjoyments of fireside chat and harmless games can not satisfy; if you would not like to have your mother see the book you are reading in secret, or that other one hidden in your trunk, lent you by the boy next door, you are beginning to wander; and unless a stronger hand than that of father, or mother, or Sabbath-school teacher find you, you are lost. Will it not ever be a thought of anguish that you were "lost close by home?"—American Messenger.

THE SCOFFER REBUKED.

Years ago many people on the Erie Canal in the packet boats, which were drawn by horses with long ropes. The boats, moved very smoothly over the water. The passengers in the narrow cabin were as near each other as in a crowded room. All conversation, even in low tones, was heard very distinctly.

Among the quiet people in one of these cabins in 1844 were friends coming from early Yearly Meeting, and a young Methodist preacher and his wife. Besides these a large number of other passengers were present. Of these two profane men were very conspicuous, who despised religion. Their foul words were an annoyance to many, and they talked very loud. None seemed anxious to make their acquaintance.

These two men sat down in the centre of the cabin, and related slanderous stories to ridicule Christains, and made a mock of sacred things. No vice in social life, no crime in the calender of the courts, could be named which they did not charge upon the Christian religion. One of them declared that profane swearing was a Christains vice!

He said: "No swearing is done among the heathen. They only learn to swear after the missionaries have taught them how. But in Christain countries everybody swears. So the more Christianity there is, the more people swear." Thus wickedly they talked.

The young preacher at length quietly addressed one of the men, when the following dialogue ensued:

"Sir, you are a Christain, I believe?"

"Me? Me, sir! Oh, no, I beg your pardon. I am not. Indeed, I am no such thing, I thank you."

"You surprise me. I must have misunderstood your remarks, and yet I listened very attentively."

"What do you mean, sir? I am sure I don't understand you, sir. Will you explain?"

"Oh yes, I will explain with pleasure. You have entertained this company for an hour with an essay on the evils of the Christian religion. You have proved clearly that profanity and Christianity are inseparable. The practice of swearing proves, you say, the presence of Christian influence. And I inferred, by the same logic, that proficiency in profanity was an exhibition of Christian character. Now, sir, I say it without flattery, and I refer to the company for an indorsment of my opinion, that you have done more swearing on this boat for two days past than all of us put together, except your friend. I therefore assumed that you were the most Christian man in the crowd! If I have mistaken the facts, the fault is in your logic!"

"Do—you—mean to say—swearing is wrong?"

"The wrong of swearing is not under consideration. But the truth of your argument is. And what say you? Was your argment true? Then you are a Christian. If you are not a Christian, then your statements were false.

"Well swearing is a mean practice anyhow, and I beg you pardon for the offence."

Then stammering some incoherent words, he and his fellow withdrew from the cabin, followed by the undisguised merriment of the company.

After that there was no more profanity nor ribaldry heard on the boat. A more quiet pair of gentlemen was not to be found than the noisy fellows of the two days previous.

And thus was illustrated a very curious text in the Bible, which some of my little nephews and nieces may have seen. It is this: "Answer a fool according to his folly, lest he be wise in his own conceit."

WEEDS.—I was once walking with a farmer through a beautiful field, when he chanced to see a tall thistle on the other side of the fence. In an instant he sprang over the fence, and cut it off close to the ground.

"Is that your field?" I asked.

"Oh no," said the farmer, "but bad weeds don't care much for fence, and if I should leave that thistle blossom in my neighbour's field, I should have plenty in my own."

I wish all fathers and mothers would think of that. The evil weeds in our neighbour's field will scatter weeds into our own. So it is worth while to pull them up in self-defence. Every weed pulled up in your neighbour's field is a dangerous enemy driven away from your own.

THE NATIONAL
Life Insurance Company
OF THE
UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

WAS Chartered by Congress, in 1868, with a capital of ONE MILLION DOLLARS, every dollar of which was paid in before commencing business.

This capital is four times as large as that of any American Company doing a Life Insurance business exclusively. Beside this immense capital, the Company have invested a premium reserve to meet maturing Policies of seven hundred and sixty-six thousand dollars, making their total assets to January 1st, 1871, one million seven hundred and sixty-six thousand dollars. Their liabilities to same date were $807,589, or in other words, they have more than two dollars assets for every dollar of liabilities. This success is owing to the facts that their business is conducted upon the only common sense plan—"so much insurance for so much money"—and that the Company's financial management has been economical and cautious.

In this Company there are none of the bewildering uncertainties and disappointments of "notes," "dividends," &c., &c., &c., which enter so largely into the business plans of Mutual Companies. The insured buy what they pay for—Insurance. They are not called upon to insure others, but they are insured by the Company.

Instead of charging thirty per cent. more than is necessary to cover possible losses, the National charges the net cost of Insurance and risks its capital to cover any extra mortality. Mutual Companies MAY not need to use this extra thirty per cent.; in that case it is returned to the Policy-holder and mis-called a "Dividend." The National does not need any extra guarantee, its capital being sufficient, and consequently its rates are from 25 to 30 per cent. lower than those of Mutual Corupanies.

The National's Policies are more liberal than any issued in the Provinces, allowing residence or travel anywhere in temperate climates. No extra Premiums, Policy-fees, Permits, or extra charges, except upon the half-dozen occupations generally recognized as EXTRA hazardous.

The National is the only Company which has made the required deposit at Ottawa for the SOLE benefit of Canadian Policy-holders. All others are for "POLICY-HOLDERS GENERALLY."

Five cents per day will insure a young man a thousand dollars, IN GOLD, payable to him at the age of sixty, or to his representatives should he die sooner. Four cents a day will insure a man, aged 25, for one thousand dollars, payable to his wife or children at his death, wherever that may occur. What easier way is there to make such a provision? Is it not worth your while to investigate?

Agencies are established throughout the Lower Provinces where the fullest information will be cheerfully given. Should there be none to whom you can conveniently apply, a note addressed to the General Agent at St. John, will be promptly answered. Address

JOHN C. RISTEEN,
P. O. Box 428,
Saint John, N. B.

References in regard to the Company's standing will, upon application, be given to prominent men in all parts of the Lower Provinces. [mar 3.

SPEIGHT'S
PATENT DESIDERATUM GLUE POT.

IT has hitherto been found in using any of the Domestic Glue Pots now before the public, that they have generally caused disappointment, for the Glue as soon as sufficiently heated, as speedily becomes chilled, owing to the cooling of the small quantity of water which can be used in melting the Glue. This inconvenience is avoided in the use of "SPEIGHT'S PATENT DESIDERATUM GLUE POT," where the Family Night Light not only dissolves the Glue, but will keep it in a hot and liquid state for several hours, and the necessity and manifest inconvenience is therefore obviated of having to place the Glue Pot on the bars of a hot grate or over a gas jet, as has been usually recommended, and is absolutely necessary in the use of any other Glue Pot. Another great improvement is the inner cup of porcelain which can be at any time removed for cleaning, and will be found equally useful for dissolving Gum, Isinglass, Gelatine, or any other adhesive agent.

The advantage of having a Glue Pot, the separate parts of which can be removed and cleaned, and when necessary renewed, is sufficient alone to recommend the article to public use, and altogether will be found of a character immensely superior to any other of the Domestic Glue Pots hitherto supplied, and will be admitted as a DESIDERATUM IN EVERY HOUSEHOLD, SHOP, OR COUNTING HOUSE.
