THE BANKS OF JORDAN.

(From the Welsh of Rev. Evan Evans. Translated by the Rev. W. Howells, President of Trevecca College.)

Deep Jordan's banks I tread,
And trembling waves;
I long to cross—but dread
The stormy river;
O would 'twere given that I
Might shun these swellings high,
And o'er the flood might fly
To rest for ever!

The stream in might along
Its waters urges,
And many are the strong
The wave submerges.
I fear the land of light
Will never greet my sight,
And I shall sink to-night
Beneath the surges.

But who are these I see
In crowds appearing?
Old friends, from peril free,
My spirit cheering.
I'll loiter here no more,
But trust the God that bore
Them safe to yonder shore,
No danger fearing.

Miscellaneous.

THE TWO HABITS.

Mrs. Williams was a very prudent, impartial mother, and usually bought her two daughters similar dresses, hats, and coats at the same time. But it was a singular fact that Laura always looked neat and well-dressed, while Sarah was quite the reverse. It was all the result of the different habits of the two young girls.

When Laura had on a nice new calico dress, she never thought of going into the kitchen without her wide checked apron on. Thus she kept it neat and clean for a long time. She had a good stock of pretty white ruffles, which she did up herself, and she always took care to have a clean one basted into the neck of her dress. It added a great deal to the tidiness of her appearance, and required but little labor or expense. If Laura wished to work in her garden for an hour in the morning, she put on one of her oldest dresses and a pair of boots; and after the healthful exercise was over, she did not think it too much trouble to change them again. Then she was all neat and fresh, to sit down to her sewing. Her dresses lasted much longer than her sister's, because she pursued the "stitch-in-time" policy. She mended small rents at once, and a spot of grease or mud was removed as quickly as possible.

Sarah had, all her life, had the same teachings from a careful, thrifty mother; but the reason there was such a wide difference between her and her sister was that she did not heed those teachings. Her new dresses were worn about her work without aprons as often as with them, and the result was they were soon ready for the wash, while Laura's looked still as good as new. It was "too much trouble" to keep ruffles in order—therefore her dresses were usually without them. It was "too much trouble" again to keep a particular suit for gardening—so she worked in her ordinary dress and boots, and the dew and earth which clung to them—after hours—to dress. "Too much trouble" were not uncommon on her best dresses, for these careless habits ran through everything she did. She did not take the trouble to remove these spots at once, and the dust settled on them, and the fire fixed them until they were past removing.

Which of these young girls would you prefer to imitate? If you desire to be neat and tidy in your appearance, begin early, to form habits of neatness. Take good care of your clothes, and dress according to your occupation. Banish that word "too much trouble" from your list, and be willing to take trouble to secure so desirable a good. "Let everything be done decently and in order," is a divine direction.—Presbyterian.

A HASTY SPIRIT.

"There, I'll see if I'm going to be plagued with you any more," exclaimed the excited mother, seizing the offending toy from the child's hand and going towards the grate.

"Don't, mother, don't burn it up," screamed little Benny. The child's plea was unavailing; already the flames had spoiled the pretty painted toy. For two whole days the tiny whistle (a present from Uncle John) had made little Bennie as happy as a child could be. Every room in the house had rang with its shrill music, frightening the baby and torturing older ears with its screechings, all rare sport for Benny, who persisted in keeping up the din, despite of threats and entreaties. All the boys in the village had seen and admired the wonderful whistle, Choicest nuts and apples, balls of twine and fishing-tackle, and a penknife had been offered in exchange for the coveted toy. This last was a tempting offer to Benny. But the love of noise finally triumphed over the desire of whittling. Poor Benny, his precious whistle would never make any more noise for him! He looked the picture of despair, sitting there before the grate with his tear-stained face, contemplating his idol in ashes. It was his first real sorrow, and it seemed almost more than the child heart could bear.

The sorrowful face filled the mother's heart with regret for the hasty act. "Go out and play," she said, pleasantly. But Benny's heart was too full for that. Before his usual bed-time, he crept away to his trundle-bed. The low sobbings reached the mother's ear long after sleep had closed the little fellow's eyelids. Stepping softly to the room where he slept, she knelt by her darling boy, kissing away the hot tears. Soothing back the moistened curls, and giving the bed-clothes a fresh tuck, she went back to her work. But her thoughts were ill at ease. She knew that the child had deserved punishment, but not in the manner and spirit in which she had given it. Her hasty temper had led her into an act of injustice, almost of cruelty, to her child, and she resolved, as she had done many times before, never to be so hasty again.

When the morning came she missed the childish prattle, the caress of the velvety arms, and the bright lips put up lovingly to her's for the good-morning kiss. With sad forebodings she bent over the crib where little Benny lay. The little face, flushed with fever, tossed restlessly upon the pillow, moaning of its lost treasure. The sunny blue eyes were heavy with pain. With that anxious, loving care which only mothers know, she tended the suffering child, pleading with heaven for its precious life, that she might atone for the past. Too late! A few brief days of suffering, and the angels took little Benny home.

Death left a darker shadow in that dwelling, the earth fell upon that coffin with a gloomier sound, for the bitter memories in the mother's heart. Others may be spared the bitter experience through which her spirit learned the lesson of self-control. Better were it, though, that the child die in its innocence, than it should come to years of humanity with such a character as a hasty, passionate spirit, on the part of her to whom is committed its training, begets.—Zion's Herald.

PIETY IN THE COAL-PIT.

"God moves in a mysterious way
His wonders to perform."

We have been reminded of this couplet while reading a communication lately received from a collier named Henry Pickering, who writes from Buddesley Ensor Pits, near Atherston. It appears that on the 27th of July 1836, four men were killed in that pit by an accident happening to the engine. This occurrence made a deep impression on the minds of the survivors; and it was proposed that prayer should be offered each morning before descending the pit, by one of the pious colliers. This was readily agreed to, and has been continued ever since. The writer was the first to begin. Well may he say: "Who can tell what ills have been prevented by this practice?" The accident also led to the holding of an annual meeting in the open air on the Saturday evening and Sunday morning nearest the 27th of July. The one on Sunday morning is held as early as half-past four o'clock, and is largely attended. The object is not so much to commemorate the event as to seek the salvation of sinners. Several addresses are given by the colliers and others, who also engage in prayer. Our correspondent has never missed this anniversary for thirty-six years, the thirty-sixth has just been held. Who can tell the amount of good brought about by what men call an accident? There is a mystery about these things, but as William Cowper also says in the same hymn:

"God is his own own interpreter,
And he will make it plain."

THE NUMBER NINE.

The most romantic of all numbers is the figure nine, because it can't be multiplied away or got rid of any how. Whatever you do, it is as sure to turn up again as was the body of Eugene Aram's victim. One remarkable property of this figure (said to have been first discovered by W. Green, who died in 1794), is that all through the multiplication table the product of nine comes to nine. Multiply by what you like and it gives the same result. Begin with twice nine, 18; add the digits together, and 1 and 8 make 9. Three times 9 are 27; and 2 and 7 make 9. So it goes on, up to eleven times nine, which give 99. Very good—add the digits; 9 and 9 are 18, and 1 and 8 are nine. Going on to any extent, it is impossible to get rid of figure nine. Take a couple of instances at random. Three hundred and thirty-nine times nine are 3051; add up the figures and they give 9. Five thousand and seventy-one times nine are 45639; the sum of these digits is 27; and 2 and 7 are nine.

M. de Maivan found out another queer thing about this number—namely, that if you take any row of figures, and, reversing their order, make a subtraction sum of it, the total is sure to be nine. For example:

Take 5071
Reverse the figures 1705

3366=18, & 1+8=9.

The same result is obtained if you raise the numbers so changed to their squares or cubes. Starting with 62, begin the sum over again. By reversing the digits, we get 26, which subtracted from 62 leaves 36, or 3+6=9. The squares of 26 and 62 are 676 and 3844, and the difference between them is 3168, which, if you add together, 3+1+6+8, you get 18, and 1+8=9. The cubes of 26 and 62, which are 17576 and 238328. Subtracted, they leave 220752=18, and 1+8=9.—Chambers Journal.

DRUNK BUT ONCE.—"You have but five minutes to live," said the sheriff. "If you have anything to say, speak now." The young man burst into tears and said: "I have to die. I had a little brother. He had beautiful black eyes and flaxen hair; and I loved him. But one day, I got drunk for the first time in my life, and coming home I found my little brother getting berries in the garden, and I became angry without a cause, and killed him with one blow of a rake. I did not know anything about it until next day, when I awoke and found myself bound and guarded, and was told that my little brother was found, his hair clotted with blood and brains, and he was dead. Whiskey had done it. It has ruined me. I never was drunk but once. I have only one more word to say and then I am going to my Judge. I say to young persons, never! never! never touch anything that can intoxicate!" In another moment the young man was ushered into eternity.

OBITUARY.

Died in Harmony, Queen's County, Nova Scotia, Aug. 21, 1872, aged 11 years, after a sickness of four days of internal inflammation, Talitha F. Kempton, daughter of Richard and Lovina Kempton. Talitha was a damsel of rare excellencies, modest and retiring in her manners, yet free to converse when spoken to. She felt the pardoning love of Jesus manifested to her heart last winter, during the services in one of the meetings, the writer was attending in the old School-house in Harmony, where she had received the instructions of her teachers. From very early childhood she had prayed the Lord's prayer daily, as her mother had taught her. But after the meeting referred to above, she ever offered additional prayer. She was wonderfully happy in her sickness, often expressing the desire to die and go where Jesus is. She felt that strong love to Jesus which is stronger than death, and sweeter than life. She wished her school mates to be as happy as she. She loved the sound of prayer, and begged of her father to pray, that she might hear him before she died. Taking her parents by the hands, she requested a promise from them, not to cry for her when she was gone, and a promise from them also that they would meet her in Heaven. She was greatly exercised with a missionary spirit, and left a dollar in her mother's hands, with a dying request to give it to the Foreign Mission.

She made arrangements for her funeral like one going on a journey; she selected the text to be used and the minister to preach the funeral sermon. "Suffer little children, and forbid them not to come unto me." Her father and mother commenced the evening after her death to pray, and redeem their promise to meet her in heaven. Her funeral was attended on the 23d, and a discourse delivered by the writer to an attentive audience, from the text she chose. Four of the Sabbath school class of young girls to which she belonged, acted as pall-bearers. She leaves to mourn her departure, parents, one brother, and one sister, and a large circle of relatives.

But they mourn for one gone from them but not lost. Saved in the arms of Jesus.

THE NATIONAL
Life Insurance Company
OF THE
UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

WAS Chartered by Congress, in 1868, with a capital of ONE MILLION DOLLARS, every dollar of which was paid in before commencing business.

This capital is four times as large as that of any American Company doing a Life Insurance business exclusively. Beside this immense capital, the Company have invested a premium reserve to meet maturing Policies of seven hundred and sixty-six thousand dollars, making their total assets to January 1st, 1881, one million seven hundred and sixty-six thousand dollars. Their liabilities to same date were $807,389, or in other words, they have more than two dollars assets for every dollar of liabilities. This success is owing to the facts that their business is conducted upon the only common sense plan—"so much insurance for so much money"—and that the Company's financial management has been economical and cautious.

In this Company there are none of the bewildering uncertainties and disappointments of "notes," "dividends," &c., &c., &c., which enter so largely into the business plans of Mutual Companies. The insured buy what they pay for—Insurance. They are not called upon to insure others, but they are insured by the Company.

Instead of charging thirty per cent. more than is necessary to cover possible losses, the National charges the net cost of Insurance and risks its capital to cover any extra mortality. Mutual Companies MAY not need to use this extra thirty per cent.; in that case it is returned to the Policy-holder and mis-called a "Dividend." The National does not need any extra guarantee, its capital being sufficient, and consequently its rates are from 25 to 30 per cent. lower than those of Mutual Companies.

The National's Policies are more liberal than any issued in the Provinces, allowing residence or travel anywhere in temperate climates. No extra Premiums, Policy-fees, Permits, or extra charges, except upon the half-dozen occupations generally recognized as EXTRA hazardous.

The National is the only Company which has made the required deposit at Ottawa for the SOLE benefit of Canadian Policy-holders. All others are for "POLICY-HOLDERS GENERALLY."

Five cents per day will insure a young man a thousand dollars, IN GOLD, payable to him at the age of sixty, or to his representatives should he die sooner. Four cents a day will insure a man, aged 25, for one thousand dollars, payable to his wife or children at his death, wherever that may occur. What easier way is there to make such a provision? Is it not worth your while to investigate?

Agencies are established throughout the Lower Provinces where the fullest information will be cheerfully given. Should there be none to whom you can conveniently apply, a note addressed to the General Agent at St. John, will be promptly answered. Address

JOHN C. RISTEEN,
P. O. Box 428,
Saint John, N. B.

References in regard to the Company's standing will, upon application, be given to prominent men in all parts of the Lower Provinces. [mar 3.

CAUTION!! CAUTION!!!
TO THE PUBLIC OF THE BRITISH PROVINCES OF NORTH AMERICA.

I beg most respectfully to acquaint the public of the British North American Provinces, that in May, 1871, I caused the business at 20, Maiden Lane, New York, for the sale of HOLLOWAY'S PILLS AND OINTMENT, which were, up to that time, prepared by William Brown, now deceased, to be closed. I regret to say that I have reason to know that the management of the late business had for some years, and in many ways, been most corrupt; and it may be that the Pills and Ointment were not prepared with that care I have always desired.

Those who do not wish to be deceived by buying spurious medicines, which are now likely to emanate from the States or elsewhere, but to possess themselves of the genuine HOLLOWAY'S PILLS AND OINTMENT, manufactured by me in London, England, will do well to see that each pot and box bears the British Government stamp, on which is engraved the words "HOLLOWAY'S PILLS AND OINTMENT," and that the address on the label is 533, OXFORD STREET, LONDON, where only they are manufactured, and in no other part of the world. The retail prices are on the labels in British currency, and not in dollars and cents.

No representative of mine will ever travel through any part of the British Provinces, or the United States, either to sell, or to take orders for my Pills and Ointment; and as I have reason to believe that attempts will very probably be made to deceive the public in this way by persons calling upon medicine vendors, falsely representing that they are acting for me, and with my knowledge and consent, I deem it advisable to put the public on their guard against any such deceptions.

I most earnestly entreat all those who may read this advertisement, that they be pleased, in the public interest, to communicate the purport of the same to their friends, that they may not be defrauded of their money by purchasing perhaps worthless imitations of the genuine HOLLOWAY'S PILLS AND OINTMENT.

I would ask, as a great favor, that should it come to the knowledge of any person that spurious medicines are being made or sold in my name, he be pleased to send me all the particulars he can collect respecting the same, that is to say, the name and address of the vendor who is selling the spurious medicines, and likewise the name and address of the House in the United States, or elsewhere, which may have supplied them, so as to enable me, for the protection of the public, to institute proceedings against such evil-doers, and I engage to remunerate very handsomely any person who may give me such information, the information's name never being divulged.

If any person have reason to believe that he has been deceived by buying spurious imitations, of these Medicines, he will do well to send me, in a letter, to the address at foot (which he can do at a cost of six cents in postage), one of the books of instructions which are affixed to the same. I promise to examine it and send a reply, stating whether the Medicines are genuine or not, so that if spurious he may apply to the person from whom he purchased them to have his money returned.

Chemists and Druggists who desire to obtain the Medicines can be supplied at the lowest wholesale prices in quantities of not less than £30 worth—viz., 8s. 6d., 22s. and 34s. per dozen boxes of Pills or pots of Ointment, nett, without discount, for which remittance must be sent in advance. I have the honor to be,

With great respect,
THOMAS HOLLOWAY.
