Garibaldi arrived at Turin on the 28th, in compliance with a summons from the King. In addressing the multitude at Tegheri, he is stated to have said: "With a King like Victor Emmanuel, with arms like ours, and with people like you, Italy should not stop until she had freed the last inch of her soil from the heel of the foreigner."

The State of Europe.

The following brief article on the state of Europe, in the last number of the Montreal Witness is so plain and definite, that we transfer it to our columns. Things in Europe truly look ominous:—

The last news is very unfavourable for the permanency of peace. Feelings of mutual jealousy and rivalry are more and more developing themselves between France and England, and the tone of the press of both countries is far from being friendly. British influence, for the time being, seems to be a predomination in that old battle ground of the two nations—Egypt; and the Suez Canal, which—as a French work—France urges forward and Britain opposes, is at a stand-still. Baffled in obtaining the control of this route to India and China, France is attempting a higher game. She is inciting Spain to war with Morocco, in order to obtain possession of the southern side of the Straits of Gibraltar, from which, in the hands of a weak ally like Spain, France might control the trade on the Mediterranean and practically shut Britain out, not only from the overland road to India and China but from Turkey and the Black Sea. Britain opposes any such attempt on the part of Spain with all her influence, and will doubtless prevent at all hazards the occupation of the southern side of the Straits of Gibraltar by any European power. The state of Italy is also very precarious. Austria and France feel the need of a Congress of European powers—that is kings—to put down the people of Italy, and reenslave them to their petty tyrants,—the Pope included. But this Congress without the co-operation of Britain would fail of its moral effect to overawe the people of Italy. Every effort is, therefore, used to get Britain to join the Congress, and, as in 1815, to aid the continental despots to divide the nationalities at their will. This odious office Britain declines, and Louis Napoleon seems to be getting tired of an ally that will not do as he chooses. Hence, probably the liberty he gives to the press to abuse Britain and his discontinuance of preparations to send a combined force to China. All these things have produced an effect which is perhaps the most ominous of all. The British funds have fallen, notwithstanding the unprecedented abundance of money, and low rate of interest.

Wreck of the Royal Charter.

The latestest intelligence from Engladd embraces details of the loss of the Ship "Royal Charter" from Australia to Liverpool, when nearly within port. Fearful loss of life resulted. The following is the account received:—

It appears that the Royal Charter, when within two or three hours' sail of Liverpool, after a rapid passage from Melbourne, experienced the full fury of a terrible northeast gale, which prevailed all over England dureing the night of the 25th ult. The steam power of the vessel being merely auxiliary, it was insufficient to prevent her from being driven towards the shore, and as she was rapidly shoaling, it became necessary, at about 10 o'clock at night, to let go the anchors, guns having been previously fired and discharged, in the hope of attracting a pilot, but without success. The gale meantime increased to a perfect hurricane, and at 2 o'clock in the morning the port anchor chain parted, and shortly afterwards the ship was beating on the rocks in a place called Moelfra Bay, near Puffin Island, on the coast of Anglesea. The masts were cut away, but without any beneficial result.

About day light, 6, o'clock, a sailor with a cord around his waist, jumped overboard, and although the sea ran tremendous high, he succeeded in reaching and maintaining a footing on the rocky shore, which was not more than ten yards from the ship, but was almost perpendicular to the hight of 40 feet. A hawser was then got ashore and a boatswain's chair was attached to it with a view of hauling the passengers and crew ashore. About a dozen seamen were by this means soon landed, and it was hoped that all on board might be saved. At about 7 o'clock, however, the waves beating against the ship's broadside with continued violence, she suddenly snapped asunder amidships and tumbled in pieces. As the passengers had mostly kept below, a large numbers were killed by the crashing debris, and only 26 persons managed to get ashore—making the whole number saved only 39, out of a total, passengers and crew, of 423. The scene was terrable in the extreme; many were washed on and off the rocks several times, and in numerous instances those who thought themselves secure on jutting rocks were hurled back into the sea by the furious waves. Not a superior officer was saved, neither a woman or child. Capt. Taylor exerted himself to the utmost, but was finally struck on the head while struggling in the water, by a beat falling from the davits, and was seen no more. The destruction of the ship was rapid and complete, so that by eight o'clock nothing was visible but masses of wreck mingled with bodies of the dead, washed on the strand.

The prostration of the telegraph wires and the destruction by the sea of a portion of the Chester and Holyhead Railroad, which passes the locality caused considerable delay in the reception of the news at Liverpool, and consequent loss of time in sending tug-boats to the spot. The vessel had on board, it is supposed, 79,000 ounces of gold, besides a large number of sovereigns, estimated of the total value of from £500,000 to £800,000, and hopes were entertained that this might be recovered by divers. The Royal Charter was iron vessel of 2749 tons register, clipper built, and furnished with auxiliary screw engines. She was built in 1855 at a cost of over £90,000, and was insured for £80,000. Her general cargo was not valuable, say £5000. Of the persons on board when she left Australia, 63 were cabin passengers, 325 other passengers, and 123 crew—total 511. Of these, 17 passengers were landed at Queenstown, and 39 were saved from the wreck, so that the total loss of life was 455. Among these reckoned as crew were 11 rigger, who were transferred from a tug-boat to the Royal Charter in the Channel, for convenance to Liverpool. Insurances were being effected at Lloyds on the hullion, at 25 per cent premium.

The great gale, which caused the wreck of the Royal Charter and the detention of the steamers North American and City of Baltimore, was most disastrous in its effects all around the coast of England. Numerous vessels, mostly coasters, wrecked, and many lives lost. Much damage was done on land.

Church Property in Spain.

While the Pope is struggling hard to retain undiminished both the territorial extent and the sovereign prerogative of his temporal dominion in Italy, he has just made an important concession to the Spanish Government as to the temporal claims of the Spanish branch of the Catholic Church.

Down to quite a recent period the Cabtolic Church, beside a large receipt from tithes and casual sources of income, was in possession of about a fourth part of the whole landed property of Spain; this property producing an annual income in rents to the amount of some fifty millions of dollars. A large part of this income belonged to the monastic orders. As late as 1833 the number of Spanish ecclesiastics, of whom by far the larger part were persons living in monasteries and convents, amounted 176,574.

In 1835 and 1836 the Spanish Government decreed the suppression of all the monastic orders and conventual establishments, and confiscated the whole Church property to the use of the State, undertaking, however, to pay to the secular clergy certain annual stipends. Under this decree, a large part of the Church property was gradually sold, the Pope and clergy protesting against this act of spoilation, and the more loudly and with the better show of reason, as to the embarrassed condition of Spanish finances, the promised stipends to the clergy were very irregularly paid. This protest pertinaciously kept up, and the reactionary spirit infused into the Spanish Government, led, some seven years ago, to the conclusion at Rome of a concordat with the Pope, by which it was agreed that the part of the Church property as yet unsold should be restored to the Church, which should receive, besides, a certain compensation for that which had been disposed of. The concordat, however, did not receive the assent of the Cortes, and the matter has remained a subject of negotiation from that day to this. The matter has at last been brought to a conclusion, lacking only the approval of the Cortes, which there is little doubt of its receiving. The Pope has agreed to the entire secularization of the landed property of the Church. That portion of it which remains unsold, estimated to be worth a hundred millions of dollars, is to be disposed of, and the proceeds are to go into the Treasury; but the Government undertaking to hand over to the Church three per cent stocks to a corresponding amount. This arrangement is of great importance, not only so far as relates to the Church lands as yet unsold, but as quieting the titles of the holders of those parts of it formerly disposed of. The sudden resurrection of the industrial prosperity in Spain, and her consequent elevation in the scale of nations, is largely ascribed to the impulse given to the activity of the nation by the transfer of the Church property into lay hands, and a similar impulse is expected to follow the complete settlement of this question and the bringing the larger remaining amount of the Church estate into the market.

The Pope is supposed to have consented to this arrangement not only as the best on the whole that the position of affairs admitted, but as a means of securing the friendship and support of the Spanish Court, at a time when his position as a temporal power is becoming so precarious.—New York Tribune.

CRIME IN IRELAND—THE PRIESTS.—The greatest outcry raised by the Ultramontanes against Lord Derby has been that he has dared to give notice to the old parish priests of Doon as well as to the young R. C. C., both the anointed God. Had this latter step not been boldly taken, this excellent landlord would have done but half his duty. The Popish priest in Ireland, more especially in country parts, knows all secrets. From his view nothing is hid, from a merry making to a murder. He can tell the wealth and the kind of this or that parishioner. He knows well his weak and his strong points, and can name you the time and the place and the company where and in which Pat or Tim, or Norah or Judy, have spent their evenings or their afternoons. If not, as frequently happens, antecedently informed of a murder about to be perpetrated, he knows who were the guilty actors within 24 or 48 hours. By timely information he might prevent or prosecute to conviction, but never in the memory of the oldest of living men has ever a Popish priest appeared as witness against a wayside murderer of his townland, his barony, or his parish.

This is a scandal to England, and an anomaly in the face of the world. There is not a parallel in Europe, except in Rome and the ecclesiastical States, where murder and brigandage are triumpant, notwithstanding the presence of 38,320 monks and priests. There are close upon 3000 monks and priests in Ireland who, with their bishops, have received in doles and dying bequests, for the last 13 years, more than three millions of pounds from the faithful; yet not one of these holy men has ever denied the rites of his Church to any assassin, or, as they would say in their convenient casuistry, to "any agrarian offender." To Lord Derby all the honour is due of an act at once courageous, constitutional, and Christian against this horrible propensity.—Other English proprietors, we trust, will soon follow the good example, and at last Irish proprietors will be forced to imitate an example from which great and satisfactory results may be anticipated.—Morning Post.

A TERRIBLE ENGINE OF DESTRUCTION.—A discovery which occupies the Emperor of the French for the moment, to the exclusion of all other discoveries of the same nature, is a new machine for the arming of shipsof war, which is said to be the most terrible engine of destruction yet invented. This machine consists in a combination of a whole broadside, being constructed so as to be fired at once, and to be directed to any given point, so that no enemy's ship, however powerful, could resist the shock, which would sink a whole fleet, if within range. The contrivance is said to be an improvement on the infernal machine of Fieschi, which, you must remember, was a radius of small guns. So that you see even treason has its uses, and, if the Fieschi artillery be but charged with the Orsini shell, why then destruction of life will be achieved upon the grandest scale! The machine, which as yet bears no name, is to be acted upon by electricity, as no gunner could withstand the recoil. (?) As the reporter of the superb invention naively exclaims, "Here is an invention which will leave far behind it the famous Armstrong gun, just tested with so much success in England."—Paris Letter.

A BRAVE CONDUCTOR.—An engineer on the Pennsylvania Railroad discovered a small child sitting in the middle of the track, ahead of his train, playing, one day last week, and instantly whistled down brakes and reversed the engine, but the momentum of the train was too great to stop it before reaching the child, which, must have inevitably been crushed to death but for the brave conduct of Daniel McCoy, the conductor, who ran to the front of the engine, crawled down on the cow-catcher, and holding himself with one hand, leaned as far forward as possible, and as he approached the child, with a sweeping blow of the other hand, he threw it off the track. It was the work of an instant, and required a steady hand and cool head to accomplish it but he was equal to the emergency. The child was somewhat stunned and bruised by the operation, but not seriously hurt.—[Boston Journal.

AYER'S CARTHARTIC PILLS.

Letters from Eminent Personages.

"On whose brows climb
The crowns o'the world."

From the President of Mexico.

City of Mexico 5th January, 1856.

Dr. J. C. Ayer, Lowell Mass., U. S. A.—Sir: I am instructed by the President to acknowledge the receipt of your commodities (Cherry Pectoral and Cathartic Pills) forwarded to him through Vera Cruz. They have arrived safely here. The President directs me to assure you of his high regard for such inventions as tend to ameliorate human suffering. Believing your eminent compounds to be of this character, ordered them to be employed in the hospitals of the government, and by the eminent physicians in Mexico. When they have a longer trial, the President intends you shall be further advised of their success in this country. Permit me to avail myself of this opportunity to assure you, sir, of my high consideration.

DON JUAN PEAES ADRADE,
Asst. Sec. of Foreign relations.

From the American Minister at the Court of the Sultan.

Office of the American Legislation, Constantinople, Turkey, Aug. 1, 1854. Dr. J. C. Ayer: I am pleased to inform you that your Cherry Pectoral has made a reputation of itself here. It is seen in all the apothecary shops, and it is highly spoken of by all who have used it. Your Pills also are becoming popular in Constantinople, and I am authorised to inform you they have been favorably received by surgeons of the allied army. Both the pectoral and Pills have been used in my family with much benefit; and we shall not fail to employ them whenever we have occasion for such remedies. I have the honor to be, dear sir, your humble servant,

JOHN P. BROWN.

From the Cashier of the Bank of England.

London 5th June, 1856.

Dr. J. C. Ayer, Lowell Mass. U. S. A. sir: In compliance with the request of your agent, I have the pleasure to state that having used your Cathartic Pills in my family, I have found them superior in their remedial effects to any other purgative we have ever employed. It is within my knowledge that your Pills and Pectoral are recommended by some of the distinguished surgeons and physicians of the metropolis, (London.) Yours &c.

RICHARD DEAN BOYLE, Ex-Ass't Cashier.

From the King of Siam.

Kingdom of Siam September 24, 1855.

Dr. J. C. Ayer, Lowell Mass., U. S. A. Sir I have the pleasure to inform you that your present of Pectoral and Pills for his Royal Majesty SOMDET PHRA PHAMOUT MAHA MONGKUT, the King of Siam has been presented by me to a majesty in person at his palace. Nothing could have gratified His Majesty more than such attention from my distant countrymen. The enclosed letter of acknowledgment he has written you with his own hand in such broken English as he can write or speak. He has also committed me to know in what more substantial manner he can return your compliment which he designs to do. His own letter informs you of the cures they have effected among his people—cures that are not lightly regarded here.

The Cherry Pectoral and Pills you sent us at the station have proved invaluable not only for our own use, but as a most acceptable means of charity to the natives in affliction around us. It is my privilege to tender you with my owe the thanks of my coadjutors here and remain,

Sincerely yours,
SAMUEL R. HOUSE, M. D.
