Poetry.

THE OLD WIFE'S KISS.

The hour had come, and gathered friends
All looked their last adieu,
Till she arose, the widow lone,
That dear, dead form to view.
With faltering step she slowly drew
Anear the icy clay,
Then gazed and gazed as if her eyes
She could not turn away.

There lay the chosen of her youth,
The husband of her age,
Full sixty years, together, they
Had read life's varied page.
Most only saw an aged man,
With furrowed cheek and brow,
With silvery locks; she sees, O yes!
She sees her loved one now.

Dear love looks out from those closed lids,
His voice is in her ear,
She shrinks not from that marble form—
What has his wife to fear!
Long years in swift review she sees,
All gilded by his love,
How can she spare him to the host
That fill the courts above!

Her children's father! O, how dear
Those silent lips to her!
How aches her heart that she must be
A lonely traveller!
Hush, pause a moment, as you move
To bear that dust away;
Gently should mortals separate
Friends from beloved clay.

She knows the hour—she lingers still,
She sees you waiting now,
Her trembling hand she softly lays
Upon that icy brow.
The scalding tears are raining fast
Adown her cheeks and yours,
You feel, though Death hath claimed his own
That Love, more strong, endures.

She bends above the placid face,
Calm in the last, long sleep,
And for the last, last time on earth,
Now lip is pressed to lip.
O, hard the heart that sees unmoved
Such token of the power
Which Love exerts o'er human hearts,
E'en in such solemn hour!

Thank God! it was a token sweet
Of soul-uniting ties,
A pledge of union in the land
Where no companion dies.
Aye, God be praised! that death can take
Alone the casket fair;
Forever gleam in heaven's light,
Love's glorious jewels rare.

MIRIAM FIELD'S MISSION:

A STORY FOR WOULD-BE WORKERS.

By Nelsie Brook.

CHAPTER VI.

(Concluded)

Early in the week she called on Mrs. Pearce again, and found Janet at home. Janet was in the back kitchen at work, and she was actually singing! Old Mrs. Pearce was leaning back in her chair, with closed eyes. A book lay on the table which she had evidently been reading; for her thick-rimmed spectacles were upon it. The front door was wide open, so Miriam heard and saw this before she knocked.

At her light tap Mrs. Pearce opened her eyes and gave her a smiling welcome; and hearing voices, Janet made her appearance, smiling too.

"I am come to tell you of a place of work, Janet," said Miriam. "I was speaking to a lady about you yesterday, and she says she can give you four half-days' of work every week."

"Well now, that is nice," interposed the grandmother.

"And in winter-time, when there is so much to do with the fires, she will give you constant work," added Miriam.

Janet look delighted, "I shall like it so much better than flower-selling," she said; "and p'r'aps I might learn things as would help me to take a situation some day!"

"Very likely, if you are willing to learn," said Miriam. "But the lady wanted to know something of your character; and I wouldn't say much about that, as I have not known you long. However, she is very kind, and she said she would try you. So you will be very honest and upright, I hope, Janet. And I should much like you to attend our Sunday-school; there are girls bigger than you there; and you would learn such good things. Would you like to go next Sunday?"

"I shouldn't be tidy enough, Miss," said Janet, after some hesitation.

"You could do your things up a bit," said the grandmother. "She is very handy with her needle," she added, turning to Miriam.

"In that case I might give you two or three things which you could alter for yourself, Janet," said Miriam. The girl looked very pleased, and after a few more words returned to her work. Then Miriam began a conversation with the grandmother, and found that she had been reading a bit of "Pilgrim's Progress."

"Janet found it for me amongst some old books," she said. "It used to be Jamie's, look at his fine handwriting in it. It's as good as printing."

Miriam praised the worthy Scotchman's writing, although it was not so perfect in her opinion as in that of his mother-in-law. Then they talked of "Pilgrim's Progress," and before Miriam left, the grandmother blessed her for ever coming to speak good things to her which had made her really hunger for the truth. And as Miriam walked away her full heart thanked God for allowing her to be instrumental in leading a soul even one step towards the shining way.

Miriam went bravely to the home of the poor child whom she had met at the baker's shop. She found it a squalid den of a place, and there, like a ray of light in the dirty, ruined place, stood her little fair haired friend. She at once recognised Miriam, but looked quite frightened to see the young lady actually at the door of her home.

"How do you do, dear?" said Miriam, pleasantly. "Can I see your mother?"

"She isn't at home," said the child in a sweet voice.

"Who's that?" was demanded in gruffer tones. And a low-looking man came forward from a back room.

Miriam's heart beat quickly. "I merely wished to speak with Mrs. ——," and then Miriam remembered that she was quite ignorant of the name.

"My wife, Mrs. Davis, I s'pose you mean?" said the man. "She ain't at home, and if you're one o' them tract folks she don't want you, so you can jest keep away." And he came forward to close the door.

Miriam turned away, feeling sick at heart. This was her first repulse; she had dreaded something like this, but now it had come, bad as it was, it was not so bad as she had anticipated. Her strength had been proportioned to her need, and she did not feel crushed. Indeed, she quite resolved to go again, and in this resolution she was confirmed by a voice calling to her, and saying, "Stop a minute, ma'am. I'm so sorry father was so rude to you; he don't know what he's saying. But you'll come again, won't you, ma'am, when mother's at home?" said the little girl breathlessly, as she came up.

"Yes; I shall come again," said Miriam. "I want to ask your mother to let you come in my class at the Sunday-school."

"O, I should like to," said the child earnestly. "Do come and ask her. I must be quick back: father might hurt our Tommy." And without another word she bounded back, and Miriam thoughtfully went her way.

The next time she called at the wretched home she met with better success. The mother, a miserable-looking, untidy woman, was at home, and she seemed quite glad to have some one to speak a kind word, to her, and to "rout 'em up a bit," as she phrased it; and she promised to try to get her little girl, Emma, tidy enough to go to the Sunday-school.

I need not enter into any more particulars of the way in which Miriam did her work. Step by step she went on, finding paths of usefulness opening up before her as she went steadily and patiently forward. The more she did, the more she found had to be done, and the better able she felt to perform any work that came to her hand. She found it very pleasant to minister to those needing kindness, and, in watering others, she herself was watered.

Her doings could not be kept secret. Arthur heard something about them, and tried to joke her, calling her a "Lady Bountiful," "Saint Miriam," and such things; but she did not mind them.

One bright Sunday afternoon in the autumn, Miriam was walking home from school with Janet Malcolm and little Emma Davis, both of whom were neatly dressed, and looked as pleasant as the sunny day. They had to pass Miriam's house on their way home, and she was quite willing and glad to have them walk with her. As she parted from them at her own door, a cough from above made her look up, and there, at the open drawing-room window, she saw Arthur watching her. She went into the house and upstairs, feeling sure that he would say something to her.

"Are those some of your converts, Miriam?" he asked, as she entered the room.

"Did you not recognize the eldest girl?" said Miriam, pleasantly. "She is the poor flower-girl whom we met at Farmer Drew's."

"You don't say so! But who has effected such a transformation?"

"Oh, the poor thing only just wanted a kind word or two and a little encouragement to make herself tidy; and now she is getting good instruction, and a character far better than Mrs. Drew could have given her two or three months ago."

"I did not think your modus operandi could be so simple," said Arthur. "Are people changed by kind words without long prayers, long faces, psalm-singing, and so forth?"

"Kind words are often powerful to win people to seek after that which will change them," answered Miriam. "It is not in our power to change people's hearts; but we should do our best to influence them for good. Did you notice the little girl with me Arthur?"

"Yes, a very pretty child," he replied.

"And she has such a wretched home, poor thing," said Miriam. "She is a scholar in my class. I am not going to give over visiting their home until I see her father and mother attend a place of worship every Sunday. What a grand thing it would be to get them to turn over a new leaf in this way, and to see their home comfortable and happy!"

"Then I suppose you think it is your mission to get bad people to go to church and chapel," said Arthur.

"Not just that, Arthur, dear," said Miriam. "Each one of us has a mission, and God expects us to fulfill it; it is this: To do all the good we can, as often as we can, and in as many ways as we can."

Arthur slowly repeated her words, and then added, "Very good, Miriam. And so you think I have a mission?"

"Assuredly, Arthur."

"And is that mine,—only that?"

"Think how much it comprehends, my dear Arthur. Most certainly it is my mission, and I believe that is yours also, and everybody's."

It is yours, too, dear reader; therefore, to the best of your ability, seek to fulfill it, that you may receive at last the Master's commendation, "Well done, good and faithful servant!"

INCIDENT OF A CHILD.

A little boy about eight years old, having jumped off the car from the rear platform, ran forward to get on in front, and by accident slipped and fell so that the heavily loaded car passed over his leg, crushing it in a frightful manner. In the first excitement of feeling, the passengers, horrified at witnessing such a scene, cried out, "hang the conductor—he ought to be hanged;" when the little fellow, though quivering with agony, exclaimed, "don't hurt him; I was to blame." Poor child! Brave, just, thoughtful of others even in the sudden presence of death. While he was lying on some straw by the roadside, previous to being taken to the hospital, a little girl picked up his cap, and having ascertained from him his name and residence, ran with it to his home. His mother opened the door, when the child exclaimed, 'here is the cap of the little boy who has just been run over by the railroad car. What words to reach a mother's ear! What wonder that, with frantic speed, she should have rushed to the fatal spot, thence to track him by his blood to the hospital! There she was at first denied access to her boy, lest her excessive agitation should hasten his death. A few moments, and the mother love so stilled the surging anguish of her heart that, with the calmness of despair, she was admitted to the presence of her darling child, only to find him conscious of his danger and ready to obey the sudden summons to his heavenly home. "Jesus is with me, mother," he said; "I must die, but Jesus is with me."

So rapidly his strength failed that his father reached his bedside only to find his son, whom he had left well in the morning, past the power of recognition. In that dreadful moment what consolation like that afforded by his own child's dying words,—"Jesus is with me." I know not where he had been taught the preciousness of a Saviour's love and the reality of his presence, whether in the Sabbath-school, in the home circle, or in the sanctuary; still he has added one more testimony to the power of that love to sustain the soul, serene and undismayed, when suddenly called to resign the bright anticipations of life in this world, to enter upon the grand realities of heaven. Who can willingly delay seeking that peace which can thus irradiate life's last moments with the halo of the Mercy Seat?—N. Y. Sunday-School Times.

PLAGIARISM.—A clergyman at Cambridge preached a sermon which one of his auditers commended. "Yes," said the gentleman to whom it was mentioned, "it was a good sermon, but he stole it." This was repeated to the preacher. He resented it, and called on the gentleman to retract. "I am not," replied the aggressor, "very apt to retract my words, but in this instance I will. I said you had stolen the sermon. I find I was wrong for on returning home and referring to the book whence I thought it was taken, I found it was there."

The sale of the Plantation Bitters is without precedent in the history of the world. There is no secret in the matter. They are at once the most speedy, strengthening, health restorer ever discovered. It requires but a single trial to understand this. Their purity can always be relied upon. They are composed of the celebrated Calisaya Bark, Cascarilla Bark, Dandelion, Chamomile Flowers, Wintergreen, Anise, Clover Buds, Orange Peel, Snake Root, Caraway, Coriander, Burdock.

S.—T.—1860—X. &c.

They are especially recommended to clergymen, public speakers, and persons of literary habits and sedentary life, who require free digestion, a relish for food, and clear mental faculties.
Delicate females and weak persons are certain to find in these Bitters what they have so long looked for.
They purify, strengthen, and invigorate.
They create a healthy appetite.
They are an antidote to change of water and diet.
They overcome the effects of dissipation and late hours.
They strengthen the system and enliven the mind.
They prevent miasmatic and intermittent fevers.
They purify the breath and acidity of the stomach.
They cure Dyspepsia and Constipation.
They cure Diarrhœa, Cholera and Cholera Morbus.
They cure Liver Complaint and Nervous Headache.
They are the best Bitters in the world. They make the weak man strong, and are exhausted nature's great restorer.

The following startling and emphatic statements can be seen at our office:—

Letter of Rev. E. F. CRANE, Chaplain of the 107th New York Regiment:

Near Acquia Creek, March 4, 1863.

Owing to the great exposure and terrible decomposition after the battle of Antietam, I was utterly prostrated and very sick. My stomach would not retain medicine. An article called Plantation Bitters, prepared by Dr. Drake, of New York, was prescribed to give me strength and an appetite. To my great surprise they gave me immediate relief. Two bottles almost allowed me to join my regiment. * * * I have since seen them used in many cases, and am free to say, for hospital or private purposes I know of nothing like them.

REV. E. F. CRANE, Chaplain.

Letter from the Rev. N. E. GILDS, St. Clairsville, Pa.:

Gentlemen—You were kind enough, on a former occasion, to send me half a dozen bottles of Plantation Bitters for $3.50. My wife having derived so much benefit from the use of these Bitters, I desire her to continue them, and you will please send us six bottles more for the money enclosed.

I am very truly yours, N. E. GILDS,
Pastor Ger. Ref. Church.

Soldiers' Home, Superintendent's Office,
Cincinnati, Ohio, Jan. 15th, 1863.

* * * * * * *

I have given your Plantation Bitters to hundreds of our noble soldiers who stop here, more or less disabled from various causes, and the effect is marvellous and gratifying. Such a preparation as this I heartily wish in every family, in every hospital, and at hand on every battle field.

G. W. D. ANDREWS, Superintendent.

Dr. W. A. CHILDS, Surgeon of the 10th Vermont Regiment, writes: "I wish every soldier had a bottle of Plantation Bitters. They are the most effective, perfect, and harmless tonic I ever used."

Willard's Hotel, Washington, D. C., May 22, 1863.

Gentlemen—We require another supply of your Plantation Bitters, the popularity of which daily increases with the guests of our house.

Respectfully, SYKES, CHADWICK & CO.
&c. &c. &c. &c.

Be sure that every bottle bears the fac-simile of our signature on a steel plate label, with our private stamp over the cork.

THE ROYAL INSURANCE COMPANY, 92 Lombard-street, London, and Royal Insurance buildings, Liverpool.
Chairman of the London Board.—SAMUEL BAKER, Esq.
Chairman in Liverpool.—CHARLES TURNER, Esq.
The Royal Insurance Company is one of the largest Offices in the kingdom.
At the Annual Meeting held in August 1859, the following highly satisfactory results were shown:—
FIRE DEPARTMENT.
The most gratifying proof of the expansion of the business is exhibited in the one following fact—that the increase alone of the last three years exceeds the entire business of some of the existing and of many of the recently defunct fire insurance companies of this kingdom.

The Premiums for the year 1855 being	£130,060
While the Premiums for the year 1858 are	196,148
Showing an actual increase of	66,088

or upwards of 50 per cent. in three years.
The recent returns of duty made by Government for this latter year (1858) again show the "Royal" as more than maintaining the ratio of its increase as stated in former years. Only one among the London insurance offices exhibits an advance to the extent of one-half the increase of the Company, while all the others respectively fall far short of the moiety of its advance.
LIFE DEPARTMENT.
The amount of new Life Premiums received this year is by far the largest received in any similar period since the commencement of the business, and must far exceed the average of amount received by the most successful offices in the kingdom. The number of policies issued in the year was 832, the sum assured £357,752 6s. 8d., and the premium £12,354 3s. 4d. These figures show a very rapid extension of business during the last ten years. Thus:—

Years.	No. of Policies.	Sums Assured.	New Premiums.
1848	98	£48,764 17 0	£1,380 9 1
1850	190	95,660 9 11	2,627 4 1
1852	422	181,504 10 6	5,828 5 10
1854	408	161,848 13 4	4,694 16 0
1856	703	297,560 16 8	8,850 3 11
1858	832	357,752 6 8	12,354 3 4

The remarkable increase in the business of the last four years is mainly consequent upon the large bonus declared in 1856, which amounted to no less than £2 per cent. per annum on the sums assured, and averaged 50 per cent. upon the premiums paid.

A Slight Cold, Cough, Hoarseness, or Sore Throat, which might be checked with a simple remedy, if neglected, often terminates seriously. Few are aware of the importance of stopping a Cough or Slight Cold in its first stage, that which in the beginning would yield to a mild remedy, if not attended to, soon attacks the lungs.
Brown's Bronchial Troches were first introduced eleven years ago. It has been proved that they are the best article before the public for Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, Asthma, Catarrh, the Hacking Cough in Consumption, and numerous affections of the Throat, giving immediate relief.
Public Speakers and Singers, will find them effectual for clearing and strengthening the voice.

THE TORONTO "GLOBE!"
IS the largest and most extensively circulated Journal in British America. It contains the very latest news by Telegraph and Mail from all parts of the world, editorials on Politics, social questions, public improvements, and everything which interests the British American people. It supports the Confederation of the Provinces on a just basis, and the economical and pure working of the new Government.
THE GLOBE:
Daily, ...$6 per annum.
Weekly, ...$2 "
The GLOBE has a much larger circulation than any other Journal in British America, and larger than any other paper published, in proportion to the population among whom it circulates. By one advertisement and one payment every part of British America can be reached. Persons having Lands or Houses to sell or let; merchants, manufacturers, and others, will find it to their advantage to advertise in the Globe.
Subscribers in the Lower Provinces will be charged for Postage in addition to the above rates, as follows, viz.: on the Weekly Globe, 26 cents; on the Daily Globe, $1.60, a year. Publisher and Proprietor,
George Brown, Toronto, C. W.
Agents for New Brunswick—
