THE STRAY LAMB.

FOR AN INFANT CLASS.

A GIDDY lamb one afternoon
Had from the fold departed:
The tender shepherd missed it soon,
And sought it broken hearted.
Not all the flock that shared his love
Could from the search delay him,
Nor clouds of midnight darkness move,
Nor fear of suffering stay him.

But night and day he went his way
In sorrow, till he found it:
And when he saw it fainting lie,
He clasp'd his arm around it.
Then, safely folded to his breast,
From every ill to save it,
He brought it to his home of rest,
And pitied and forgave it.

And thus the Saviour will receive
The little ones who fear him;
Their pains remove, their sins forgive,
And draw them gently near them.
Blest while they live, and when they die,
When flesh and spirit sever—
Conduct them to his throne on high
To dwell with him forever.

The Family.

THE BOY ON STILTS.

Awhile ago I saw a little lad on two curiously formed stilts, walking along by the side of his parent, and calling out to every boy he met, "I am taller than father." Since then, I have often thought of that remark, and have seen several boys who seemed taller than their parents.

When I see a boy refusing to attend school, and disobeying those who have fed and clothed him, I think that boy is "taller than his father."

When I see a boy using profane language, thinking it sounds manly, I say, that boy is "taller than his father."

When I see the son of a pious man leaving the house of God, and disregarding the Sabbath, I think he imagines himself "taller than his father."

When I see a boy with a cigar in his mouth, and his cap thrown upon one side of his head, I think he is "taller than his father."

When I see a child at home, saying, "I will," and "I won't" I think he has got a little "taller than his father."

When I hear a boy talking about cards, and fights, and theatres, and the circus, I say to myself, that boy is "taller than his father."

When I see a boy leaving the Sabbath school, because he is too old, I think that boy is "taller than his father."

When I see a boy abusing an old man, or hooting after a drunkard, or teasing a dumb beast, I think that boy is, taller than his father."

Little boys, if you are addicted to any of these practices, you are walking on Satan's stilts, and soon will fall.

The little boy that I saw walked a few steps, and fell with his head against a stone, and cut a deep gash in his forehead. So if you walk on any of these stilts of the "wicked one," or, in other words, practice these sins, you will meet with disaster. You had better walk on the safe ground of virtue, obedience, truth, and piety, than get up above your father, by profanity, disobedience and sin. HOMO.

JOHN AND WILLIAM.

John and William are brothers, but are different in their dispositions. John is a good boy and obeys his parents. Consequently he keeps out of difficulty, always has a clear conscience, the approval of his parents, and the smiles of God. He is lovely and amiable, and all of his young comrades are fond of his company. He is never found fighting, stealing, nor deceiving.

William is the reverse. He disobeys his parents, and is consequenly in trouble. He always has been doing some mischief, breaking windows, robbing orchards, and the other day came near being sent to jail for a wicked deed. He is consequently fighting, and his young companions do not love him. He always has a black eye, or a gashed face, or a lame foot.—The other Sabbath evening, at the time of the Lowell street riot, while John was in the prayer meeting, William had wandered on to the acre, with other wicked boys, was struck with a stone, and brought home badly wounded. John will be a Sabbath school teacher, or perhaps a missionary or minister, or a good man in some department of usefulness, but what William will come to I do not know. Most likely he will come to the prison, and the dungeon. Will you my young friends, be like John or William.—Christian Era.

LITTLE THINGS AND LITTLE PEOPLE.

LITTLE things, and little people, have often brought great things to pass. The large world in which we exist is made up of little particles, as small as the sands on the sea-shore. The vast sea is composed of drops of water. The little busy bees, how much honey they gather! Do not be discouraged because you are little. A little star shines brightly in the sky in a dark night, and may be the means of saving many a poor sailor from shipwreck; and a little Christian may do a great deal of good, if he or she will try. There is nothing like trying.—Dr. Chalmers.

IDLENESS.

SOME one, in casting up his accounts, put down a very large sum per anuum for his idleness. But there is another account more awful than that of our expenses, in which many will find that their idleness has mainly contributed to the balance against them. From its very inaction, idleness ultimately becomes the most active cause of evil; as a palsy is more to be dreaded than a fever. The Turks have a proverb, which says that "the devil tempts all other men, but that idle men tempt the devil."—Colton's Lacon.

CIHLSON'S
Patent Air Warming and Ventilating Furnace.
(FOUR SIZES.

THE fame of this well known FURNACE has now become so extended, that it would become mere supererogation to enter into any elaborate detail of its construction. Since the period of its first appearance, it has attracted the attention, and gained the encomiums of many individuals, who hold high rank in the scientific world—and completed an entire revolution in the construction of "HOUSE WARMERS."

The antiquated and now exploded notion, of obtaining a sufficiency of pure warm Air from a small surface of Red Hot Metal, in contact with which, an inadequate supply of COLD AIR disseminates into the apartments above a sluggish current of burnt deoxygenated HOT air, unfit for respiration, is rapidly being supplanted by the introduction of our new HOUSE WARMERS, which, from its peculiar construction, can never become overheated, and by its extensive and well proportionate surface, is capable of warming a large volume of atmospheric air.

Another prominent peculiarity of our Furnace, is so complete adaptation for Wood or Bituminous Coal; the flues being so arranged that they cannot become closed by soot or ashes: this point has never before received the attention of Furnace Manufacturers, and is indeed the only article in which this description of fuel can be used to any advantage.

And when we take into consideration the fact, that this has become the standard on which all new Furnaces are founded, and the only Heater on which attempts at infringement are constantly being made; and add thereto, that it has received numerous Medals and first Premiums from various Scientific Institutions—not to make mention of the "World's Fair" (where, in competition with articles for similar purpose, from all parts of the world, it received the GREAT PRIZE MEDAL.)—it must convince every unprejudiced mind that this Furnace already hold the highest rank for the purposes to which it is applied.

Any information respecting our Furnace, or the general subject of "Heating and Ventilation" together with our pamphlets containing Cut of Furnace &c., and an Appendix of over 1000 References, will be promptly forwarded to all who address the Subscribers by Post.

We are also the Agents for, and have constantly on hand, an assortment of the Patent Mirror Marble Chimney Pieces—a new, cheap and elegant substitute for Marble—at prices varying from $13 to $150 each, a sample of which is in possession of the Editor of this paper.

Besides the above, we have always in our Warehouse a large stock of Cooking, Office, Hall, and Parlor Stoves, Ranges, Registers, Ventilators, &c., &c., which we are happy to present for inspection at 51 and 53 Blackstone Street, Boston.
