HARDSHIPS OF SEA RELATED

St. John Men Had Terrible Experience on Barkentine Westfield.

An unusual story of adventure at sea is related by Victory Rossley, now in this city. The story tells of hardships and trials undergone by the crew of the barkentine Westfield, which sailed from this port in March, 1919, with a cargo of nails, wire, paper, iron piping, beaver board and organs for Melbourne, Australia. Three persons from this city, ex-police officer Percy Ganter Rossley, son of Jack Rossley, and the second mate of the vessel (who never returned home) were numbered among the crew of twenty-one.

The Westfield was owned by Nichols and Company, of Dundee, Scotland, and was under the command of Captain Weymouth, an Englishman who was frequently advised by his wife, regarding the navigating and victualling of the ship.

Victor Rossley at the time of his shipping as a deck hand on the Westfield, was only sixteen years of ago (the age when most boys yearn for adventure.) The lure of the sea had seized hold of the spirit of the lad and the hardships and days of utter exhaustion on that vessel, will forever linger in his memory. Every little detail in connection with the voyage is irrevocably stamped in the brain of the boy, who, along with the rest of the crew, suffered in a manner almost unbelievable.

Bad Luck From Start.

After sailing from this port in March, 1919, the barkentine encountered a severe storm in the Bay of Fundy and after a voyage lasting for thirty-three days was forced to put into the Barbadoes in distress on April 5th, with the fore-gallant topmast shattered and many sails torn to ribbons. The crew were forced to remain on deck practically all the time.

The Westfield remained at the Barbadoes for a period of ten weeks, refitting and bending a new top-gallant mast. A bill of $9,000 was presented for payment when the work was completed. During the enforced stay in the West Indies the men were allowed only two shillings when they were granted shore leave. As it cost each member of the crew a shilling to go ashore in a boat and another to return to the ship, it is not hard to figure out the amount with which the crew had to purchase anything in the nature of food or small comforts during the time they spent on land.

After the barkentine left Barbadoes she sailed north for some distance and finally encountered the northeast trade winds. The vessel was often becalmed and made several attempts to put into African ports without success. With food running very low the Westfield ran into a storm and was blown to the far away coast of Brazil, after intervals of calm and stormy weather, covering a period of ninety-eight days. Water and biscuits constituted the food of the crew for over a week.

The remainder of the voyage was marked by a long period of ill-luck.

An Unusual Distillery Seized Near St. John

Inland Revenue and Provincial Officers Find Strong Liquor on Abandoned Farm Near Fernhill Cemetery—A Cow on Guard.

Inland revenue officer Murphy, accompanied by Chief Sub-inspector Alexander Crawford, Sub-inspector Samuel Journeay, R. Carson and F. Killen, motored out Rothesay avenue yesterday afternoon and were successful in locating an illicit still, about fourteen "long necks" of moonshine, and in obtaining a confession from John Kane as being the distiller of corn whiskey, better known as "third rail hootch."

The officers had a clue that everything was not as it should be in an old house on a deserted farm, situated on a road leading to the north from Rothesay avenue, nearly opposite the Fernhill cemetery entrance, and accordingly the party motored to the premises and gave Kane one of the greatest surprises of his life.

Kane is said to have been a permanent resident of the vicinity of the Upper lakes at Loch Lomond, but during the past summer has been employed at farming for a Mr. Rafferty. When the farming season was finished Kane took up his residence on the deserted farm and occupied the house alone, while in a barn adjoining he kept a cow.

On the arrival of the officers yesterday afternoon they informed Kane the reason for their visit.

Kane solemnly assured the officials that he never was guilty of distilling illicit spirits. The officers by this time were making a search and one of them came across a bottle of home made liquor. When confronted with the evidence Kane said that he did not know how it happened to be there. Then another bottle was found and Kane admitted, the officers say, that he made the liquor the night before.

The inspectors located the still, and keeping up the search, they entered the apartment where the cow was kept. The cow was feeding from a pile of hay on the floor and when one of the officers kicked the hay away no less than a dozen quart bottles of liquor, the most of it warm, were exposed. Kane then informed the inspectors that he had made the stuff only a couple of hours before they arrived. The liquor and still were placed in an automobile, brought to the city and stored in the office of the inspectors on Prince William street. Kane was not placed under arrest but will be taken before the court today for examination.

Many Stills Discovered.

Ever since the Prohibition Act was put into force many stills have been discovered throughout the province, but the one owned and operated by Kane is something new, so far as its make up is concerned.

It consists of a tin wash boiler, round in shape, about two feet wide and about the same in depth. The cover when turned upside down has soldered around the edge a rim of tin about six inches high. When the boiler is placed on a stove, it is filled with corn mash. The cover is turned upside down and suspended to the handle of the cover is a small enameled stew kettle. The six inch space on the cover is filled with ice or snow, making the top very cold. As the heat from the stove boils the corn mash, the fumes or steam strike against the cold top, and alcohol drips into the stew kettle. When the latter is nearly full the contents are emptied into the bottles, and with a little coloring is quite ready for sale or drinking.

The officials were not prepared to say just what brand of hootch was manufactured. The spirits have a decidedly strong smell, and from all appearances should be guaranteed to do most anything to a human being. A spectator remarked that the close proximity of the cemetery was suggestive.

COMPLIMENTS NEW BRUNSWICK

Dominion Fire Marshal Pleased With N. B. Progress—A Big Campaign.

R. Groves Smith of Ottawa, Dominion Fire Marshal, who is here in connection with the recent explosion at the C. P. R. elevator on the West Side, when seen last evening at the Royal talked interestingly about his work and that of the department, in all parts of the Dominion.

The campaign of education carried on had, he said, borne fruit in many instances, and investigations carried out had in some cases shown that further education was necessary and in others that legislation was needed to compel those who would not be taught in any other way to prevent waste.

Speaking of elevator explosions, Mr. Smith said it was the intention to investigate every one of these which occurred until they had found out the cause and then a remedy to meet it. During the past year many enquiries had been held, some of them of explosions in cleaning outfits in the fields. In these latter cases it had been pretty clearly demonstrated that static electricity was the cause, generated by the belt in the machine coming in contact with the dust.

While it might be possible to do away with these explosions by insisting that grain be cleaned before going into the elevator, he said there was an economic reason why this could not be done unless the government undertook to bear the loss which would be entailed by the shrinkage in weight.

This loss would run into a lot of money, estimated for the year 1921 at $1,500,000.

He complimented the province on the progress made since the appointment of a fire marshal, but said it would probably be another three or four years before the people would realize the full amount of benefit received.

CARELESSNESS NOT APPARENT

Cause of Elevator Explosion Not Known—Investigation Unfinished.

An investigation into the explosion in the C. P. R. elevator B, which occurred on the morning of Dec. 20, was begun yesterday in the offices of the C. P. R. baggage room, Sand Point, by a board of inquiry composed of H. H. McLellan, provincial fire marshal, chairman; J. Groves Smith, dominion fire marshal, and Peter Clinch, who represented the interests of the underwriters. D. K. Mullin, K. C., appeared on behalf of the Provincial fire marshal. Eleven witnesses, employes of the elevator, were examined and adjournment made at 1 o'clock for the personal inspection of the elevator yesterday afternoon by fire marshal Smith and McLellan.

During the course of the inquiry it was brought out that there was no apparent carelessness in the operating of the elevator, and no direct evidence as to the cause of the explosion was forthcoming. The contents of the bin 175, where the explosion took place, has been kept sealed, and it was decided that the board should examine the contents to ascertain if any metal or wood was carried into the bin with the grain, which might possibly have caused a spark by coming in contact with the concrete walls or iron ladder. The investigation will be continued this morning.

J. A. CHESLEY EX-M. P. DEAD

Former Leading Resident of St. John Was Born in 1838.

Word was received in this city last night of the death in Montreal yesterday of John A. Chesley, for years one of the best known residents of St. John, at one time a member of the House of Commons and for years Canadian trade commissioner to South Africa.

The cause of death was pneumonia. Mr. Chesley had been living in Montreal, where several members of his family reside, for more than a year.

John A. Chesley was born in 1838 and was educated in the schools of the North End. In early life he became a member of the firm of J. & W. A. Chesley, iron founders of Chesley street. He was long active in civic affairs of the old town of Portland, now the North End of St. John. He served as a member o fthe Portland council and later was mayor. He was one of the commissioners appointed to arrange the amalgamation of Portland with the city, and after the amalgamation was alderman of the city of St. John.

When the late C. N. Skinner retired from parliament in 1892, Mr. Chesley was elected as a Conservative to succeed him, in a by-election held on Nov. 22. He sat in parliament until his defeat in the general elections of June 23, 1896, by the late John V. Ellis, Liberal. Mr. Ellis had 3,249 votes, Mr. Chesley, 2,527 and William Pugsley, Int., 1,427.

Before the Conservative government, of which the late Sir Charles Tupper, Bart., was premier, retired from office after its defeat in 1896, Mr. Chesley was appointed Dominion trade commissioner to South Africa and served many years in that country, during which he worked hard to make Canada better known. Largely the result of his efforts a considerable trade is exchanged between the two Dominions at the present time. He probably possessed more information regarding the customs, the people and the resources of British and Dutch South Africa than any man in Canada.

After living in retirement in St. John for many years, Mr. Chesley was a candidate for mayor of the city in 1920, but was defeated by E. Allan Schofield.

Mr. Chesley is survived by three sons, H. C. Chesley, of Montreal, Fred P. Chesley of the Royal Canadian regiment, now stationed in that city and Charles Chesley of the T. Eaton Company, Winnipeg; and four daughters, Mrs. H. W. Gross, of Montreal; Mrs. Alexander Baillie, of Toronto; Mrs. McKenzie of Philadelphia and Mrs. Florence Waugh, of Cape Town, South Africa.

The funeral will take place this afternoon. Interment will be in Mount Royal cemetery, Montreal.
