

POETRY.

FROM A LONDON PAPER.

For a Heart made of certain Materials there is no LONG AGO.

WHEN I thoughtfully muse on the stenes of my life, And Time's changeful events in the memory flow;

Tho' of years a long period his records unfold, The bright gift of sensation Time still can bestow;

When the follies, the levities, passions of youth, By the judgment corrective, give conscience a blow;

As the shades of the passions pass by in review, I contemplate the colours these pictures now show;

When the Muse brings the verse and its praise to my mind, I can still feel my bosom with vanity glow;

When Reflection brings Grief, and the pangs it has cost, So unwilling has Time been his mantle to throw;

Thus the heart that for sentiment Nature has made, The impression retains of the joy or the woe;

REPENTANCE.

GO, let me weep! there's bliss in tears, When he, who sheds them, inly feels Some lingering stain of early years;

Leave me to sigh o'er hours that flew More idly than the summer's wind, And, while they pass'd, a fragrance threw;

CAUTION TO LADIES.

We understand that at a fashionable tea-party in Philadelphia, the young lady of the family, as usual, was called upon to perform the honours of the tea-table.

An excellent Method to Extinguish the Fire in a Chimney.—In general when the the soot catches, it is caused by making too large a fire when the chimney is foul.
