

On the morning in safety, self, ass, bag and baggage, without the loss of an article. In a few hours after her arrival commenced the cannon's roar of the tremendous Sunday, exposed to which for ten hours she knew her husband to be; and after a day and night in agony she was rewarded by finding herself in her husband's arms, he unhurt and she nothing the worse on the Monday. The officer told the tale himself with tears in his eyes. With a slight Irish accent he called her his "dare little woman," and said she became more valuable to him every day. I never saw a more elegant gentlemanlike young man; and assuredly his pretty Belgian seemed almost to adore him. It gave additional value to the anecdote, that I had it from the actors in the scene described. When I remarked that it was quite in the spirit of Elizabeth of Siberia, the lady exclaimed "Ah ma mere m'a dit la meme chose chose!" My mother made the same remark.

FREDERICTON, 25th JUNE, 1816.

IMPORTANT.

As the Public are perhaps not universally acquainted with the full extent of those valuable properties generally ascribed to Mr. Packwood's celebrated superior Razor Strop, we feel extremely happy in being enabled to render a very essential service to the Community, by publishing the following observations of a learned American Gentleman, which must, to a majority of our readers, prove highly interesting.

"This Strop is an irrefutable etiology, and an irrefragable corroboration of the theory of the Lucretian School, by the granulated fragility of the metallic particles cohering with the humid and obese strata, thereby obnubilating their asperities, and obstupating the inster-sices of their ramifications.

"Ths omnifarious mass coagulated with the invisible concretion of the conglomerated ethereous bulb, exhibits a hermetical alembick with the alcoholization; while the dephlogisticated fluid composes an esurine estuation, which is isachranal only to the action of the compressed matter.

"As a knowledge of Meteorology and the science of the Pneumatics is necessary to illustrate this lychophronism of the ethereous fluid, I will take my date as given, and proceed to elucidate with the omphaloptio the vital nerve and the generation of the parenchymatous, which vitiates from the ingeminate collision of the lymph; and were it not for the prophylactic fluid which engenders a refrangibility, it would condense into a pulverised fulmen and incinerate the whole compound."

CORK, May 18.

The London Journals of Tuesday and French Papers to the 11th inst. arrived at our Office yesterday afternoon by EXPRESS.

An insurrection of an alarming nature had taken place at Grenoble, on the night of the 4th, but after a sanguinary engagement with the rebels they were suppressed, and 160 left dead on the field. This conspiracy had extensive ramifications, and comprehended Lyons, Paris, and other places. The object of the insurgents, was the re-establishment of the system of 1793, and they had secretly circulated Proclamations to that effect, with cards to serve for rallying signs. Notwithstanding that this plot had assumed a serious aspect, it seems yet not a little extraordinary that those concerned in Paris are obscure persons, and possessing no political influence in the country--the lowest class of the people, old artisans of the Revolution, madmen, who had no means of execution." This conspiracy must than be viewed as the inconsiderate attempt of foolish and rash men, "to whom disorder and anarchy are desirable, & tranquillity an insupportable torment." There is one consequence however, resulting from it, which is, that it has tried the fidelity of the army. The troops and National Guard at Grenoble, behaved well, and this testimony of their attachment to the reigning family, proves that the soldiers had not participated in the plot, or had ever, in any manner, been entrusted with the secret movements of the disaffected. While the French army remain attached to the Crown, and are willing to support the constitution, the irregular efforts of insurrectionary parties must terminate in their overthrow, and after a few salutary examples the peace of the Kingdom will be permanently confirmed.

EXTRACT FROM A PRIVATE LETTER.

Grenoble, May 5.--For some time past half-pay officers have been remarked, going from commune to commune, and earousing in the cabrets and coffee-houses. During the night, arms were conveyed from house to house; provisions were even carried to the mountains.

"The Report of the arrest of a Proprietor of the Pays de Vand, by the canton of Berne, was, the subject of every conversation. This Proprietor had conducted to Hamburg a person whose name still remains unknown, and he appeared to carry on a correspondence with our frontiers.

"The Federates suddenly assembled in the Communes of Vizille, de la Mure, &c. instigated the peasants to rise, telling them that all Languedoc was an insurrection, that Paris was in full revolt, and that the troops in the garrison at Grenoble had marched to occupy the line through which the Duchess of Berry and her retinue had to pass.

"Eight hundred men, under the command of one Guillet a half pay Lieutenant of artillery, presented themselves before the gates of Grenoble on the 4th of this month, at nine in the evening.

"An anonymous Letter had reached Gen. Donadieu, which induced him to adopt measures for immediately taking the field. He assembled the brave royal volunteers of the Herault who are at Grenoble; the departmental legion of the Horse national guard, and the Grenadiers of the national guard. He marched out with one piece of Cannon, and about 400 or 800 men while the authorities took measures of defence--he met the advanced guard of the insurgents, about half a league from Grenoble, made three discharges of his piece of artillery, and drove in their ranks; a general affair then took place, in which 160 of these wretches were killed, and 40 taken with arms in their hands. We have to regret the loss of 15 brave men on our part. The general proceeded forward, found detachments of rebels who were escaping, and made about 50 of them prisoners. The remainder dispersed themselves and took refuge in the mountains.

"One Didier, long known as an enemy of the house of Bourbon, is accused of having been the director of this frightful plot.

"General Donadieu is in the pursuit of the brigands. The Prevot has commenced an investigation into the affair. Important discoveries are made, and Providence has saved us from the scourge of civil war."
