

From the Petersburg Intelligencer.
SPRING.

These are thy glorious works, Parent of good
Almighty—thine this universal frame,
Thus wonderful fair, thyself how wonderful then!
Unspeakeable!

Of all the seasons, Spring is the most delightful. Nature is, as it were, then beginning to receive existence. The howling storms of desolate winter, are gone and forgotten; the mild serenity of the morning, the gradual advances of vegetation, and the changing appearance of the whole face of things, accompanied by the harmonious confusion of singing birds heard on every side, convey to the transported imagination, a pleasure which the mind can scarcely conceive. Not only the birds and animals, but even the inanimate creation, seem to rejoice in something like that universal joy expressed on the appearance of the first Spring, when "The morning Stars sung together, and all the Sons of God shouted for joy."—The music of the groves—the roaring of the tempest—the striking colors of the living landscape—the immense circle of Heaven—the boundless extent of Ocean—comprehend all that is great, sublime, glorious or magnificent, and sink into the soul with irresistible power.—Yet, strange as it may appear, there are men in the world, to whom all these glorious manifestations of the Deity, these inexhaustible bounties bestowed on his creatures, are overlooked, despised or utterly neglected. Winter may blow, Spring renew the world, and summer return in rich pomp—it is all one to them: if their stomachs or their coffers are full, they care for no more. May such feelings be forever strangers to my breast! Great God! may a conviction of thy munificence never cease to animate my bosom. May thy goodness teach me humanity; thy greatness a contempt for those who call themselves great; and the constant succession of night and day, seed time and harvest, cold and heat—this glorious truth, that thou art our kind and universal Parent, and we Brothers of one great Family!

Reflections, Moral and Divine.

Those who put off repentance to another day, have a day more to repent of, and a day less to repent in. In giving let your object be the necessitous and deserving; your end, their advantage, not your own praise; and your guide, your circumstances and exigencies.

Blame not before thou hast examined the truth; understand first, and then rebuke. Piety is the best profession; honesty the best policy; vice its own punishment; and virtue its own reward.

ORIGINAL ANECDOTES.

Curious Mistakes.—One of our compositors in setting up a manuscript article respecting the Circus, put the words, "Mill on Fire," instead of "Bill of Fare,"—and many persons went the Circus to witness the new piece, who otherwise would not have attended that evening.

The above careless deviation from copy is not quite so ludicrous as one which occurred some years since in the Centinel Office; a compositor having rendered the words, "a variety of Communications unavoidably omitted," so as to read "a variety of ammunition waggons," &c.

A simple lad in a country paper office, instead of following the printed copy before him, viz. "On this question the eyes and noses were taken," &c. altered it so as to read "the eyes and noses were taken"; and in doing this he thought himself a darned smart fellow for correcting the spelling and grammar.

The above typographical anecdotes afford a few samples of the "miseries" Editors of News-papers are heirs to.—Bos. Ev. Gaz.

A Thumper,

From an American Paper.

Among numberless feats of valor performed by individuals of the American Revolutionary army, none has pleased me more than the following, related by an eye witness:—"During the heat of the battle at Germantown, while the bullets flew as thick as hailstones, one Barkalew (of Monmouth) was levelling his musket at the enemy, when its lock was carried away by a ball. Undismayed, he caught up the gun of a comrade just killed by his side, and taking aim, a bullet entered its muzzle, and twisted the barrel round like a corkscrew! Still undaunted, our hero immediately knelt down, unscrewed the whole lock from the twisted barrel, and screwed it on the barrel from which the lock had been torn, and blazed away at the enemy." Can ancient Sparta or modern Britain boast a more brilliant display of cool, deliberate, unshaken courage? This hero is still living.—Torch Light.
