

FROM A LONDON PAPER
THE ORPHAN, AND LD. LINSEY WOOL-SEY.

PITY, my Lord, the wretched plight
Of a lone Orphan, faint and weary,
No house by day, no bed by night,
Exposed to tempests wild and dreary.

I have no friend, I have no food,
Alas! I know not where to wander;
But I was told you folks are good,
Who roll in wealth and shine in grandeur!

"Young Gipsy, if your tale be true,
Say where your parents' life departed!"
My father fell at Waterloo,
My mother died quite broken hearted.

She sought my sire among the dead,
And fell upon his bosom gory—
"Oh! if they died in Honor's bed,
My child they re—cover'd o'er with glory!"

And what is "glory?" my good lord,
Wilt it relieve the Orphan's hunger?
A shelter, clothes, and food afford?
Oh! say—or I can't live much longer!

"The nation, child, will see you fed,
"Posterity will learn your story;
"Your Parents died in Honor's bed,
"And they are covered o'er with glory!"

He said—and with a hasty pace,
From the lone Orphan whistling parted;
The tears bedew'd her pallid face,
And down she sunk half broken hearted.

Then to her aid a soldier flew,
Who had o'erheard her artless story;
He knew her Sire at Waterloo,
And saw him—"cover'd o'er with glory!"

"Come, Orphan, to my arms," he cried,
"And I will screen thee from the weather;
Close to my side thy parent died,
"And for their sake we'll lodge together,

"I have a pension, and a cot,
"Where thou shalt live till I am hoary;
"Here wrap thee in this old watch-coat,
"Tis warmer than his Lordship's "glory."

A Gentleman who signs himself "A Subscriber" has requested us to insert the following lines in our "valuable columns," and we trust that their merit will be duly appreciated both by the Public and the Lady to whom they are addressed.

VERBATIM.

Why should a lady cruel be
Accusing a young man
Your old and fickle I perceive
My mind is still the same,
I may connected with you be
When low your in the clay
And my advice in that degree
You let us both be quite,
Your grievances I do despise
Such begotting minds
Ill not resign, but first will dy
So that to end my rime.

FAMILY PRIDE.—In Georgia, people of quality exercise the office of executioner; and it is so far from being accounted infamous, that it reflects honor upon the whole family. A Georgian will boast what a number of hangmen he has had among his ancestors.

The following affecting Anecdote is from the French of Ann Maria Porter.

A sailor of Martinique married a young woman, as virtuous as she was beautiful, and she having expended all the little money her husband had left her before he embarked, had recourse to a wealthy citizen, to whose protection she had been confided—the citizen, enflamed with the charms of the fair borrower, demanded, as the price of his services, the surrender of her virtue. Relying on the hope of her husband's return, and shuddering with indignation at the proposal. The insulted woman refused without hesitation. The sailor did not arrive, and in a few day all the resources of this unhappy wife were exhausted: want too clearly made her sensible of her situation: she was a mother, and dreading to behold one infant perish at her breast, which nourished it, and the other whose maturer age demanded bread, expire of hunger before her; she sought the tyrant again in the hope of softening him. But prayers and tears could obtain nothing from the barbarian; she was forced to capitulate; and vanquished by necessity, she permitted him to come to supper with her; after a meal which was spiritless, the citizen pressed her to fulfil her promise; the poor woman took him to the cradle where her child was sleeping; and then pressing it to her bosom, her eyes suffused with tears, she said to it, "Drink, my dear babe! drink freely,—thou yet receivest the milk of a virtuous woman, whom necessity alone stabs to the heart? To-morrow, for alas! I cannot wean thee—to-morrow thou wilt drink the milk of an unhappy—" her tears finished the sentence. The citizen beheld—and was moved at the sight; and throwing his purse at her feet, he exclaimed "It is not possible to resist so much virtue!"

Pleasant Travelling.

A man who was following his wife's hearse, and was somewhat corpulent, called out to the coachman, "Drive a little slower, for you need not be in such a hurry. Why should we make a toil of pleasure?"

A Convenient Nap.

Two Oxford scholars slept in the same room at college. "Jack," says one early in the morning, "are you asleep?"—"Why?" replied the other. "Because if you are not, I will borrow half a-crown of you."—"Is that all? Then I am."

The Newspaper.

To you, all readers turn, and they can look
Pleas'd on a paper who abhor a book;
Those who ne'er rise a sermon to peruse,
Would think it hard to be deny'd their news;
Sinners and saints, the wisest with the weak,
Here mingle tastes, and one amusement seek;
This, like the public inn, provides a treat,
Where each promiscuous guest sits down to eat;
And such this mental food, as we may call,
Something to all men and to some men all.

Auctioneer and Sheriff—or, mutual apologies.

An attorney presenting a copy of a writ to an auctioneer, apologised, saying he hoped the other would not be offended, as he was merely performing an unpleasant duty of his profession. "Certainly not," said the auctioneer; "you must attend to the duties of your profession, so must I to mine:"—so saying, he knocked him down.
