

POETRY.

FROM A LATE LONDON PAPER,
INSCRIPTION
For the Tomb erected to the Memory of the Marquis of Anglesea's Leg.

HERE rests, and let no saucy knave
Presume to sneer or laugh—
To learn, that, mouldering, in the grave
Is laid—a British CALF.

For he who writes these lines is sure
That those who read the whole
Will find such laugh were premature,
For here, too, lies—a SOLE.

And here five little ones repose,
Twin-born with other five,
Unheeded by their brother foes,
Who all are now alive.

A leg and foot, to speak more plain,
Rests here, of one commanding,
Who, though his wits he might retain,
Lost HALF HIS UNDERSTAN-DING.

Who, when the guns, with murder fraught,
Pour'd bullets thick as hail,
Could only, to this way be brought
To give the foe LEG BAIL.

Who now, in England, just as gay,
As in the battle brave,
Goes to the rout, review or play
With ONE FOOT IN THE GRAVE.

Fortune in vain here shew'd her spite,
For he will still be found,
Should England's sons engage in fight,
Resolv'd to stand his ground.

But fortune's pardon I must beg,
She wish'd not to disarm;
And when she lopp'd the hero's leg,
She did not seek his H-ARM!

And but indulg'd a harmless whim—
Since he could walk with one,
She saw two legs were lost on him
Who NEVER DEIGN'D TO RUN.

(From a London Paper.)

Adventures of a Ten Pound Note.
Marlborough Street.—Frederick Sharpe and J. Quelch, two boys, were brought up for re-examination, on suspicion of stealing a £10 note. It appears that the prisoners were returning home from Westend Fair, by way of Camden Town, and saw a piece of paper coming in the air, which falling on the road side, one of them had the curiosity to pick it up, and found it was a £10 note. They were both runaway apprentices and such a present could not fail of being acceptable; they therefore walked to town congratulating each other on their good fortune, but were rather puzzled how to get the note changed; at length it was agreed Sharpe should personate the servant of a Mr. Warren, in Portland street, and go to the shop of Mr. Thompson, the grocer, in Foleyplace, where he was to pay for a large quantity of raisins to be sent to the master's house, and take the change himself. This plan had nearly succeeded, but as he was about to receive the change, he shewed such uneasiness to be off, as to convince Mr. Thompson he had not come by the note honestly; he therefore watched him, and gave him in charge to an officer, together with the other boy. This officer discovered that about the same time a gentleman named Penny, had been robbed of a £10 note on the same spot, and as the boys prevaricated, he had no doubt but the note could be identified, and the matter brought home to some person; he therefore advertised it, when a gentleman who held an important situation in one of the government offices, and who resides in Alfred-place, Tottenham-court-road, came forward as the claimant. After being sworn, he stated, that he had received £2000 from the exchequer office, which he was counting out in his library; he left the note in question on his table after taking the number and date; he then locked the rest in his cash box, which he was about to place in his secretaire, when all at once a sudden gust of wind entered the room and blew the note up the chimney! He had witnessed the whole transaction, and was for a moment petrified; but he ran to the door and called in a sweep, who searched the chimney and room, but without effect. He had given up every hope of seeing it again, when one morning at breakfast, he was very agreeably surprised to find a description of the very same note advertised. The note was produced, and after being identified and sworn to, was delivered to the gentleman, with an admonition not to let it take such another trip to Westend Fair. The prisoners were discharged, and given over to their respective friends. The case excited considerable mirth.

MANSION-HOUSE, LONDON.—Importation from Ireland.—A vast number of poor Irishmen were last week brought before the Lord Mayor by officers, who found them lying about the street and pennyless. Upon being questioned by his Lordship they said they came over to make hay, and upon their arrival found all employment of that kind occupied by the poor of this country. They were all stout fellows, and appeared both very able and willing to work. One of them, who had come from the County of Cork, complained bitterly of the inhospitality of the Londoners. "When I went into the houses here," said he, "the people were glad enough to see me, but then I told 'em I had no money they turned me out. I tried the big houses as well as the little ones but all's one. The people are all brutes, your Worship; but I thought nothing of that till I saw some of my countrymen among 'em, that spoke and looked Irish, like myself, but the devil a morsel they'd gave me, although I was hungry."

The Lord Mayor.—"I apprehend it was an unusual reception indeed, my poor fellow. Was there no work for you in your native country?"

Irishman.—"Not a ha'porth, your Lordship. If there was I would not walk over here."

The Lord Mayor.—"Walk! It was very hard upon you that you were not allowed to sail part of the way."

Irishman.—"They would not let me, your honour. My comrade here, and Paddy Cahil, my sister Peggy's husband, sailed over in the hould, but there was no room for me, and I was obliged to walk day and night on the deck."

The Lord Mayor appeared quite satisfied with this admirable distinction, and complimented his poor visitors upon the facility with which they converted their very errors into sources of amusement. His Lordship ordered them to be passed home, and expressed a sincere hope that the importation might cease for the present.
