

For the Fredericton Gazette.

An Officer who was quartered in a Country Town, being invited to a ball, was observed to sit in sullen sort in a corner for some hours; one of the Ladies present being desirous of raising him from his reverie, accosted him with, pray Sir, are you not fond of Dancing? Yes Madam, I am very fond of Dancing! Then why not ask some of the Ladies to be your partner, and strike up? "Why Madam, I don't see one handsome woman in the room." Sir, your's &c. &c. replied the Lady, and with a profound courtesy left him; her companions asked her, what her conversation had been with the Captain, it is too good to be repeated in prose, give me a pencil, (said she) and I will give you the outlines in rhyme---

So sir, you rashly vow and swear,
You'll dance with none that are not fair;
Suppose we women should dispense
Our hands to none but men of sense--
Suppose! well madam, pray what then?
Why Sir, you'd never dance again.

FROM A LONDON PAPER.

LORD VISCOUNT EXMOUTH.

It must be in the recollection of many of our readers, that on the 26th of January, 1796, the Dotton East-Indiaman, in the transport service, was wrecked under the Citadel of Plymouth, and totally lost. Lord Viscount Exmouth (then Sir Edward Pellew) was with many others a spectator from the shore, of the dreadful calamity; and after offering a most liberal reward to any one who would convey a rope on board, but which none could be found to undertake, he boldly resolved to attempt the hazardous enterprise himself, and instantly dashed into the foaming waves, swam to the sinking wreck, which he never quitted until he had completed his work of humanity, by saving the lives of nearly five hundred of his fellow creatures, who, but for his exertions, must inevitably have perished. The freedom of the Borough of Plymouth was presented to him in an elegant silver Box; and a public entertainment given on the occasion, the following Stanzas, written by a gentleman of Plymouth, were recited: an insertion of them at this time may prove interesting:--

While o'er the reeling wreck, the savage storm
Poured all its lightnings; thunders, blasts and hail;
And every horror, in its wildest form,
Smote the firm heart--that never knew to fail;
'Twas thine, Fellow, sublimely great and good!
For man, thy brother man distress'd--to dare
The dreadful passage of the raging flood,
And join the frantic children of despair.

There, it was thine in comforts balmy tone,
To soothe their sorrows 'mid the tempests roar,
To hush the mother's shriek--the sick man's groan--
And bear the sufferers, trembling to the shore.

So, when this mighty orb's dread alarm,
Shall crash in ruins, at its God's decree;
The saving Angel, with triumphant arm,
Shall, from the wreck of all things--rescue thee.

The Moniteur mentions the following incident which took place at Aubusson, in the department of the Creuse. --On the 9th of October, about five in the afternoon, the wife of Pierre Martineau, a labourer, was digging potatoes in a field at a very short distance from the suburb of St. Jean, having beside her, her son about 6 years old. Two wolves made their appearance, and attacked the boy; but the courage of a mother knew no danger, and she defended him with so much presence of mind, as to succeed in felling to the ground one of these terrible animals with a stone, which she threw at him: the other took flight at the sight of the husband, who came to her assistance, and who with a mattock, which he held in his hand, gave the finishing blow to the one which was still struggling. Almost the moment after the courageous mother was delivered from the fear of having her child devoured, she paid the debt of nature, falling into a kind of delirium, which was not of long duration, and during which she spoke incessantly of her son, and of the danger which he had run.
