THE SEASONS.

Dear SUMMER, I love thy bright sun-burning Thy cool leafy shades, and thy broad yellow moons; Thy brooks playing bo-peep behind the green

Betrayed by the whispering grasses and rushes; Thy light floating clouds, and thy beautiful flowers; Thy soft-blowing winds, and thy cool-falling love thy blythe music; dear Summer, I love The green turf beneath thee, the blue sky above.

Thou art gone, lovely Summer, thy last sun has But sweet AUTUMN comes in like a gentle Bru-

With a warm glowing cheek, and a bright sparkling

The brightest, dear Summer, when thine is not bye. She comes with a smile, but in tears she departs, And leaves all her lovers with sorrowful hearts.

Old WINTER comes next, with his silvery head, His cold breath, as he comes, strikes the last flower

He frowns on us, threatens, and blusters and storms, But stern as he seems, gentle charity warms His old heart; and he goes about doing good deeds, As though he were sinning; he covers the seeds From the winds, with a mantle of nourishing snow, And when he has nursed the young blossoms he'll go From the blind world abused, and unjustly revited, And leaves all their beauty to deck his sweet Child; His sweet child, the young SPRING, that comes

And points to the buds on each blossoming tree; And calls her young songsters to sing in the sun; And cuckles to see the fresh brooks as shey run; And calls up the primroses, snowdrops and daises, Yet more than for this she deserves all our praises; She tells us that summer is coming again; Sing out, merry birds, in your merriest strain, For Summer, sweet Summer, is coming again.

Ah! hear, drown'd in tears the disconsolate mother, Lament the lost state of a favorite son, Hear the wife and the child, the sister and brother, Mourn a husband, a father, a brother undone.

PARLIAMENTARY PRETENSIONS. Mr. M. Lawson (only 25 years of age) who has been elected for Boroughbridge, in opposition to the interests of the Duke of Newcastle, has published his address to the Electors, of which the following singular passages relate to his own pretensions:-" With respect to my Parliamentary conduct, though very great eloquence never was in my line, and is what I shall probably never attain; though from my extreme youth, I am not possessed of so much general knowledge as I could wish, yet I do flatter myself, that I could on all occasions bring somewhat of political merriment, bearing, even in an argumentative manner, on the question in debate, and that I could contribute my mice to the conviviality, of the House. Besides, you would possess a check over me, which you never had, or could have, over the Newcastle nominees-the power of dismissal. So that you would look forward to each succeeding dissolution of Parliament with somewhat more anxiety than the Schoolboy in the story, who only wished for it that he might have the church service shorter by one prayer-the prayer of for the Great Council of the Nation now assembled in Parliament." Indeed, were I to disappoint either my own expectations or hose of my friends, I should be the last person in the world to wish to retain my seat, merely for the purpose of fixing M.P. to my name, and of franking letters. I have now come openly before you. I have used no nefarious arts; I have held out no expeceations of gain. Nay, so careful have I been to avoid all imputation of the sort, that I have not so much as a single shilling at present in my pocket; for knowing that sometimes a man found with picklock-keys bout him is committed as having the impleents of house-breaking, so were a casual wikpence to drop from my person here, I might be accused of having come to a contested election having implements of bribery about me! However, to be serious : I once more ask if you are prepared to assert yourselves as independent men, or will you consent to depart into everlasting rottenness. I promise you my best services at home and abroad. By abroad I do not mean Foreign countries; for every place I wish to consider as abroad to me, except Boroughbridge. I promise you my best endeavours, a steadfast integrity, even when I breathe the atmosphere of jobs and pensions, even were I to be put to the toil and peril of sinecures. I promise this without equivocation or mental reservation; and although I cannot go so far as the Philosopher of old, who said, "Give me but standing room, and I'll move the Universe;" yet will I say, give me but a seat, and I'll move the House."

Anecdote of Theophilus Cibber.

This strange eccentric wag, in company with three other bon vivants, made an excursion to France. One had a false set of teeth, a second a glass eye, a third a cork leg, but the fourth had nothing particular except a remarkable way of shaking his head. They travelled in a post coach; and while they were going the first stage, after each had made merry with his neighbor's infirmity, they agreed, that at every baiting place they should all affect the same singularity. When they came to breakfast they were all to squint; and, as the countrymen stood gaping round when they first alighted, Ad rot it, cried one, how that man squints? Why, d-n thee, says the second, here is another squinting fellow. The third was thought to be a better squinter than the other two, and the fourth better than all the rest. In short, language cannot express how admirably they squinted; for they went on a degree beyond the superlative. At dinner they all appeared to have cork legs; and their stumping about made more diversion than they had at breakfast. At tea they were all deaf; but at supper, which was at the ship at Dover, each man resumed his character, the better to play his part in a farce they had concerted among them. When they were ready to go to bed, Cibber called out to the waiter, " Here, you fellow, take out my teeth !"-" Teeth, sir?" "Ay, teeth, sir. Unscrew that wire, and you'll find they'll all come out together." After some hesitation the man did as he was ordered. - This was no sooner performed, than second cried out, " Here, you, take out, my eye." " How, sir," said the waiter, " your eye?" "Yes, my eye; come here, you stupid dog : pull up that eyelid, and it will come out as easy as possible !" This done, a third cried out, " Here, you rascal, take off my leg!" This he did with less reluctance, being before apprised that it was cork, and also perceiving that it would be his last job. He was, however, mis aken. The fourth watched his opportunity, and, while the poor affrighted fellow was surveying with a rueful countenance the teeth, the eye, and leg. lying upon the table-cried out, in a frightful hollow voice, " Come here, sir, take off my head !" Turning round, and seeing the man's head shaking like that of a mandarin upon a chimney-piece, he darted out of the room; and, after tumbling headlong down stairs, he ran about the house, swearing that the gentlemen up stairs were certainly all
