From the foregoing account it will be seen, that the three persons nearest the throne, being married and having children, are the King of Wurtemberg, Prince Paul his brother, and the Princess Frederica Bonaparte, their sister. This would be a grievous She had been seduced, and committed the prospect, if we did not recollect, that alrhough there is now no grandchild of George III. yet all his sons, and probably more than one of his daughters are still of an age, at which a proper marriage might be hoped to produce offspring. The Dake and Duchess of Gloucester are little more than 49 years of age, and have been not much above a year married. It must, however, be confessed that, until we have a more certain prospect of issue from the British branch, the public attention will be turned to the two young Princes of Brunswick, the sons and grandsons of the two illustrious Dukes of Brunswick who lost their lives in the fields of Jena and Waterloo. These young Princes, were educated in England: but that is bur a small allevation of the repugnance we feel at having a foreign king and this is a consideration which enhances and imbitters all the regrets which the loss our own lovely and oxcellent Princess excites.

Our readers will not fail to observe with interest, the state of the electoral family of Messe, the venerable age of the Elector, and his two brothers, and their numerous children and grand-children; and the circumstance, that the three wives of the three elder Princes are will living (two of them being in their own right, as well as their husbands, in succession to the British crown) will not be easily paralleled.

THE KING.

The following judicious and affecting obgrvanions, relative to our beloved mourren, cannot fail to prove deeply interesting to our Readers :---

And now, may we be permitted to turn tions :--our attention to another illustrious and venerable Personage of the Royal Family, the glory of that Family, the price of his subjects, who is not dead, and get who partakes not of the joys or the afflictions of his kindred or his people. CURSORY NEWS ARTICLES.

Among the many strange events which modern times have produced, their is none, perhaps, of a comparatively trifling nature, which better illustrate the compound revotutions of power and opinion, that have taken place in France, than that four of Bonaparte's favorite Generals should have breakfasted all together with Louis XVIII, at the Palace of the Thuilleries .-- The circumstance is noticed in the following words, in a Paris paper :--

The four Marshals on duty at the Palace (Macdonald, Oudmot, Marmont, and Victor) breakfasted on Sunday with the POLITICAL RUMOUR.

It is reported, that after much discussion, it was agreed between the Ministers of the five great powers that the negociation between Spain and her Colonies, under their mediation; should be carried on in France," and that the matter is now so far advanced that the claims of the Province of Venenzula will most probably, be taken as im basis of the negociation, viz.

That the Supremacy of Spain shall be reknowledged on the following condi-
