DEATH.

Cease, Fool, to mourn life's little span,
And hush that impious cry;
For what an abject thing were man,
If he were ne'er to die.

Yet grant thee all thy soul's desire,
A free, immortal state;
Soon immortality would sire,
And thou wouldst curse thy fate:

Wealth, honours, all the world can give;
And soft luxurious ease,
The charms for which men crave to live;
Would lose their pow'r to please.

But Death, tho' harsh to worldly ears,
To Misery and to me,
Sounds like the music of the spheres,
Celestial harmony!

It mingles in one common clay
Th' oppressor and th' oppress;
It wipes the tears of grief away,
And gives the weary rest.

It bids the wretched Miser part
From his ill-gotten store;
It terrifies the stoutest heart,
That never shook before.

It quite annerves the Warrior's arm,
It makes the haughty bow;
And rudely withers ev'ry charm
On Beauty's heavenly brow.

Its voice unbars the prison door,
And sets the Captive free;
The Slave endures the lash no more,
But springs to liberty.

It conquers woe, disease, and pain,
All private, public strife;
And snaps at once the heavy chain
That binds us fast to life.

And from a sorrowing world like this,
And Fortune's with'ring frown,
It leads to everlasting bliss,
To conquest and a crown.

Then cease to mourn life's little span,
And hush that impious cry;
For what an abject thing were man,
If he were ne'er to die.

The punishment of Ingratitude.

A French writer relates the following remarkable instance of ingratitude in children:—

An eminent trader at Lyons, who had acquired an easy fortune, had two handsome daughters, between whom, on their marriage, he divided all his property, on condition that he should pass the summer with one, and the winter with the other. Before the end of the first year, he found sufficient ground to conclude that he was not a very acceptable guest to either; of which he however took no notice, but hired a handsome lodging in which he resided a few weeks—he then applied to a friend, and told him the truth of the matter, desiring the gift of two hundred livres, and the loan of fifty thousand in ready money for a few hours. His friend very readily complied with this request; and the next day the old gentleman made a very splendid entertainment, to which his daughters were invited. Just as dinner was over, his friend came in a great hurry: told him of an unexpected demand upon him, and desired to know whether he could lend him fifty thousand livres. The old man told him without any emotion that twice as much was at his service, if he wanted it; and going into the next room brought him the money. After this, he was not suffered to stay any longer in lodgings; his daughters were jealous, if he stayed a day more in one house than the other; and after three or four years spent with them, he died; when upon examining his cabinet, instead of livers, there was found a note containing these words:—"He who has suffered by his virtues has a right to avail himself of the vices of those by whom he has been injured; and a father out never to be so fond of his children, as to forget what is due to himself."

Saw-Dust converted into Wood.—The possibility of converting saw dust into wood must now no longer be spoken of as a jest. M. Menke, of Berlin, has discovered a process by which mahogany saw-dust may be formed into a paste, which, by exposure to air, becomes as hard as stone. The statues and other ornaments made of this paste are said to vie in elegance with the finest works in bronze, and come but to one-eighth of the expence.

The King of Spain received lately from South America thirty-three chests of Segars. His Majesty must be a great smoker, or an eminent tobaccoist.
