THE MAN OF INDUSTRY.

Lo! here he comes, with placid brow,
His steps bespeak the man of ease;
His temples deck'd with health's bright glow,
Evince a heart possessing peace.

Strength nerves his arm with manly pride;
The lark salutes his early walk:
Wealth spreads her gifts on ev'ry side,
And honor's votaries round him stalk.

At home, the couch secures him rest,
His prattling infants smile around,
For they like him, with health are blest,
Like him, with innocence abound.

The faithful partner of his life,
With joy prepares the frugal food,
And in the duties of a wife,
Bestows profusely every good.

Thrice happy he, who thus enjoys
The gifts which Industry bestows,
Whose mind, the art of health employs,
And round whose home its blessing flows.

For such shall drink the cup of joy,
Shall smile though fortune's honors cease;
Yes, his is wealth without alloy,
His life is joy, his end is peace.

Saturday afternoon.

My dear Friend,

If it is not too much for you, I wish you to write down for me, as particularly as may be, the conversation of Mrs. B. — yesterday afternoon — especially that part of it, in which she blessed your little son, and expressed a hope of meeting you all in Heaven. A little of it has been reported to me, and I am very anxious to have the whole. I shall use no more of it than may be used with delicacy and christian candour. If you consent, you may either send it, or I will call for it. I don't wish it till about evening. May the Lord bless and keep and comfort you.

Your affectionate Friend and Pastor, C. C. C.

G. B. Esquire.

My beloved Pastor, and Friend in Christ,

I attempt an answer, but I cannot represent Harriet's excitement exactly as it was — a faint sketch — an imperfect epitome — is noted. It was so unexpected — so brilliant — so eloquent; as delivered, that, tho' the sentiment and manner sunk deep into my heart, yet much of the language is lost. I would remark, that my dear Harriet said very little in the last part of her illness. Her head was so much affected, as to make noise or conversation very painful to her: and having, at an early day, discoursed with her, particularly and minutely about concerns of a personal and worldly nature, I felt no disposition to call her out unnecessarily. Yesterday morning, when I first rose, she was almost exhausted. I was touched, and she saw it — "Don't," she says — "It grieves me."

A little before 12 o'clock at noon she asked mother, Maria, and myself to join hands with her: — and seeming to gather up all her strength, she said, "I leave you — live in peace, love and Christian fellowship, and God will preserve and bless you." "My dear mother! you will soon follow me — O! prepare for the change. My dear sister! remember me — Live to God and great will be your joy in the hour of trial. And you, my dear husband! love my memory — but, above all, love Christ, the Saviour of sinners — and them all — O! all of us, thus united" (pressing our hands) "will surround the Throne of God in Heaven, chanting songs of redeeming love for ever and ever."

"Where," says she, "is my brother — I love him." — He was sent for — when he arrived she was almost spent, but spoke — "Tommy — be wise be true." — The academy bell rung. George came to the door, and hearing him, she said: "School is out — let my son be called." — He came — she affectionately embraced and kissed him, and told him to be a "Good child — remember your mother — God bless you!" She directed us to call Phillis — and when she came, Harriet gave her hand — "Phillis — farewell — be a good girl — God bless you!" — "And now, 'tis done, give rest — Oh Father, to my wearied soul!"

She spoke no more till she uttered her last words already sent to you. On a review of her life, I must consider her a paragon of virtue, prudence and piety. — She was the mother of her family. All feared her frown and loved her with cordiality. — Her opinion was law. As a wife, I cannot name her many endearing qualities. She could rob pain of its poignancy, and gave to pleasure its highest zest — She died, as she told me, without an enemy. But I must close — as all things earthly must.

In sorrow and grief, affectionately yours G. B.

13th July, 1816.

Last words of my dear Harriet about 4 o'clock, p. m. July 12, 1816, while in great agony, but in sound mind, she remarked to me, "It will soon be over." I asked her if she still hoped and trusted in God — "O Yes" — "Well," said I, "with and hope will soon be lost in vision and fruition." — "God is love." She exclaimed in extacies of joy — "Cheering consolation — heart-cheering consolation." — and continued to reiterate the exclamation till her cold lips, quivering under the icy hand of death, could no longer articulate.

REMARKABLE PRESERVATION
Of the brig Governor Carver.

Extract of a letter, from Capt. S. Doten, of the brig Governor Carver, of Plymouth, to the Owner, dated Havre, June 23d, 1818.

"On the 29th May, in lat. 42, 20, long. 50, near the easterly end of the Grand Bank, at 3 P. M. we observed some small islands of ice. It being very foggy, with the wind S. W. and going at the rate of 5 1/2 knots, we immediately took in our royal and steering sails, intending to alter my course to the south, being often obliged to luff and bear away for the islands of ice which lay about us. While in the act of hauling the sails, I discovered an object twice as high as our mast heads, appearing like a Water Spout, but did not think it possible that an island of ice should be so high — I immediately ordered the helm a weather, hoping to get the vessel before the wind, and clear of the danger whatever it might be — but before this could be done, we found ourselves completely surrounded, and covered by this immense Mountain of Ice, which projected over our heads, so that the water, which ran from it in streams and rivulets, fell over the vessel on the opposite side, and although our steering sail booms were rigged out, on the side next the ice, making a distance of 27 feet, from the centre of the brig, they did not touch it.

"Fortunately we succeeded in getting clear, and in less than five minutes, and while so near that the rebounding of the water reached the vessel, this immense body of ice fell over directly towards us, with a crashing noise resembling the heaviest thunder, and continued for the space of a minute and an half.

"I shall always attribute the saving of the brig to the steady firmness and active exertions of the mate and crew, who have merited my sincere gratitude."
