From King Hatchy to General Gaines, in answer to the foregoing.

To General Gaines: You charge me with killing your people, stealing your cattle, and burning your houses. It is I that have cause to complain of the Americans. While one American has been justly killed in the act of stealing cattle, more than four Indians have been murdered while hunting by these lawless freebooters. I harbor no regrets. When the Englishmen were at war with America, some took shelter among them, and it is for you white people to settle those things among yourselves, and not trouble us with what we know nothing about. I shall use force to stop any armed Americans from passing my town or my lands.

(Signed) King HATCHY.

"Notes of Indian Talks."

In August, Capp had a letter from Gen. Gaines, in substance as annexed, No. 1, and returned the answer as by No. 2. Nothing further was said on either side. The end of October, a party of Americans, from a fort on Flint river, surrounded Fowl Town during the night, and began burning it. The Indians then in it fled to the swamps, and in their flight had three persons killed by fire from the Americans; they rallied their people, and forced the Americans to retire some distance, but not before they had two more persons killed. The Americans built a blockhouse or fort, they had fallen back to, and immediately sent to the fort up the country for assistance, stating the Indians were the aggressors; and also settled with Inhemocklo for the loss his people had suffered, at the same time sending a talk to King Hatchy, by a head man (Apping) that he would put things in such a train as to prevent further encroachments, and get those Americans to leave the fort. But, no sooner was the good talk given, and before the bearer of it had returned home, than hundreds of Americans came pouring down on the Indians; roused them to a sense of their own danger: they flew to arms, and have been compelled to support them ever since. It is not alone from the country, but by entering the Appalachicola river in vessels with troops, that settlers are pouring into the Indian territory; and if permitted to continue, will soon overrun the whole of the Indian lands. From the talk sent King Hatchy, by Governor Mitchell, I am in hopes that those aggressors of the Americans on the Indian territory, are not countenanced by the American government, but originate with men devoid of principle, who set laws and instructions at defiance, and stick at no cruelty and oppressions to obtain their ends—Against such oppressions the American government must use not only all their influence, but, if necessary, force, or their names will be handed down to posterity as a nation more cruel and savage to the unfortunate Aborigines of this country, than ever were the Spaniards, in more dark ages, to the nations of South America.

The English government, as the special protectors of the Indian nations, and on whom alone they rely for assistance, ought to step forward and save those unfortunate people from ruin; and as you, sir, are appointed to watch over their interests, it is my duty, as an Englishman, and the only one in this part of the Indian nation, to instruct you of the talks the chiefs bring me for your information; and I sincerely trust, sir, you will use the powers you are vested with for the service and protection of those unfortunate people who look up to you as their saviour. I have written General Mitchell, who I heard is an excellent man; and as he acts as Indian agent, I hope his influence will stop the torrent of innovations, and give peace and quietness to the Creek nation.

I pray your excellency will pardon this intrusion, which nothing but the urgency of the case would have induced me to make.

I have the honor to be your excellency's most obedient humble servant,

A. A.

From Cappachimicco, and Boleck, to Governor Cameron.

To his excellency Governor Cameron: It is with pain we are again obliged to obtrude ourselves in your excellency's notice, in consequence of the cruel war we have been forced into by the irruptions of the Americans into the heart of our lands. It will be first necessary to state to your excellency, that one head chief (Kinbijah) received a letter from General Gaines, in August last, a copy of which is enclosed, with the answer returned thereto. This letter only appears to have been a prelude to pains determined on by the said General and General Jackson, to bring on troops and settlers to drive us from our lands, and take possession of them; for, in the end of October, a party of Americans surrounded Fowl Town during the night, and in the morning began setting fire to it; making the unfortunate inhabitants fly to the swamp, and who, in their flight, had three persons killed by the fire of the Americans. Our Indians, rallying, drove the Americans from the town, but in their exertions had two more of their people killed. The Americans retired some distance and built a fort or blockhouse to protect themselves, until the assistance they had sent for to the fort up the country, should arrive. A letter falling into the hands of General Mitchell, the Indian agent, which states the Indians to have been the aggressors, he suspected its truth, and, on enquiry, found it was the reverse; in consequence, he made satisfaction to Inhemocklo, the chief of Fowl Town, and his people, for the injuries they had sustained; at the same time desired a talk to be sent to our head chief stating his wish to see all the Indians friends, and that in twenty days he would send and get the Americans to retire from the forts. But this had no effect on the lawless invaders of our soils; for, before the bearer of our talks could return home, he met hundreds of Americans descending on us. They have also settlers and troops, which came from Mobile, and go up the Appalachicola river. Thus seeing no end to these inroads, necessity compels us to have recourse to arms, and our brethren are now fighting for the lands they inherit from their forefathers, for their families and friends. But what will our nations do without assistance? Our stewards of war are almost spent; and harassed, as we have been for years, we have not been able to pay by the means for our extraordinary wants; and to whom can we look up for protection and support. You to those friends who have, at all former times, held forth their hands to uphold us, and who have sworn, in their late treaty with the Americans, to see our just rights and privileges respected and protected from insult and aggression? We now call on your excellency as the representative of our good father King George, to send us such aid, in ammunition, as we are absolutely in want of, and as our brother chief Hillsajor, was informed when in England, that when ammunition was wanted to enable us to protect our rights, your excellency would supply us with what was necessary. We have applied to the Spanish officer at the fort of St. Marks, but his small supply prevented his being able to assist us, and we have only on your excellency to depend. We likewise pray your excellency would be pleased to send an officer or person to lead us right, and to apporportion the supplies you may be pleased to send us, agreeably to our proper wants.

In praying your excellency will lend an ear to our demand, and dispatch it without delay, we remain your excellency's faithful and most obedient friends and servants,

CAPPACHIMICCO,
BOLECK,

for ourselves and all the other chiefs of the lower Creek nation.

Letter from A. Arbuthnot to Col. Edward Nicholl.

Nassau, N P 26th Aug. 1817.

Lt. Col. Edward Nicholl—Sir: Especially authorized by the chiefs of the lower Creek nation, whose names I affix to the present, I am desired to address you, that you may lay their complaints before His Majesty's Government. They desire it to be made known, that they have implicitly followed your advice, in living friendly with the Americans, who are their neighbors, and no wise attempt to molest them, though they have seen the Americans encroach on their territory, burning their towns, and making fields where their houses stood. Rather than make resistance they have retired lower in the Peninsula. The town Eachallaway, where Ollis Micco was chief, is one instance of the encroachments of the Americans. This town is situated under the guns of fort Gaines, and Micco was desired to submit to the Americans, or his town would be blown to atoms; rather than do so, he retired, and is now living in the lower nation, and his fields, and even where the town stood, is ploughed up by the Americans. They complain of the English government neglecting them, after having drawn them into a war with America; that you, sir, have not kept your promise, in sending people to reside among them; and that, if they have not some person or persons resident in the nation, to watch over their interests, they will soon be driven to the extremity of the Peninsula. You left Mr. Hambly to watch over the Creek nation; but you hardly left the nation when he turned traitor, and was led by Forbes to take the part of the Americans. His letter to me, of which I annex you a copy, will shew you what length he could go if he had the means. It is Hambly and Doyle who give the Indians all the troubles they experience. They send their emissaries among the lower Creeks, and make them believe the Cowetas, aided by the Americans are coming to destroy them; thus both are put in fear, and their fields are neglected, and hunting is not thought of; I have endeavoured to do away this fear, by writing the chief of the Cowheta towns, that they ought to live in friendly terms with their brethren of the lower nation, whose wishes were to be on good terms with them, and not listen to any bad talks, but to chase those that give them from among them. My letter was answered from them rather favorably; and I hope that the talk that was sent
