THE FLOWERS OF LIFE.

[BY S. WOODWORTH.]

The ills of Life's journey how many complain of,
Who swear not a floweret is found on the road!
But the evils they censure I laugh at the pain of,
While sweet smiling cheerfulness lightens the load.

Though I find not a rose, I indulge not in sorrow,
But pluck with contentment a daisy to-day;
Nay, even a sprig will feed hope for the morrow,
The humblest that nods to the zephyr of May.

Let others dispute, I'll avoid the dissention,
Religious, political, moral, or such;
For the lily of peace thus escapes their attention,
And the sweet bud of Pleasure which blooms at my touch.

The blossom of Friendship surviving mortality,
I'll carefully cherish and wear in my breast,
Though its picture may boast brighter hues than reality,
Its fragrance directs me when doubtful the test.

The spirit of feeling, the soul of affection,
Wildly ardent in rapture, and melting in wo,
Whatever its image, attire, or complexion,
With mine shall commingle in sympathy's glow.

I ask not his birth place, whatever the region,
Hot, temperate, frigid—despotic or free;
I ask not his politics, creed or religion,
A Turk, Jew, or Christian—he's still dear to me.

But ah! there's a flower which, though teeming
with nectar,
Beneath its fair aspect screens Misery's dart,
So artfully veil'd, that it mocks a detector,
Till pressed to the bosom it pierces the heart.

But still to a bosom susceptibly placid,
The anguish of Love will but heighten its joy,
As the be'rage uniting a sweet with an acid,
Is grateful, when nectar untemper'd would cloy.

The bramble of avarice others may nourish,
Exhausting Life's soil of its virtues and strength;
I'll stay where the plant of Benevolence flourish,
And the generous vine winds its serpentine length.

Let misers pursue their mean sordid employment,
And hoard up their treasures for life's latest scenes;
I'll waste not the moments allowed for enjoyment,
Nor squander the season in gaining its means.

Our object is happiness—ne'er could we miss it,
In life's varied path, if the talent were ours,
From all we encounter some good to elicit,
As bees gather sweets from the meanest of flowers.

Then pluck every blossom of happiness blooming;
Leave birds of contention and play with the dove;
And our path soon the flush of enchantment assuming,
Will glow an Elysium of Pleasure and Love.

AGRICULTURE.

(From an American Paper.)

In an English newspaper of February last, we find the following article. It is one of the most impressive facts to establish the advantages of improved cultivation of the soil, that we have ever read, if the fact is to be credited, and we have no reason to disbelieve it more than any other, derived from the same source, respecting improvements in the arts, sciences, &c. We do not copy this under the impression that this mode of cultivation can ever be employed otherwise than experimentally, but to shew what can be accomplished by system and industry. Here are an hundred and thirty four bushels of wheat raised from an acre of ground. The highest produce we have ever heard of being realized in this country, on the most fertile land, was fifty bushels. The average crop, throughout the Union, is probably not more than ten bushels, if so much; in England, it is rated according to the following article, at more than thirty, by the ordinary mode of cultivation. The difference in these averages is again owing to the differences in the modes of culture.

(From an English Paper.)

"GREAT CROPS.—Mr. Falla gives an instance of land cultivated by the spade, and wheat planted in lines by a dibble, with plants previously raised in a seed bed, producing the enormous return of seventeen quarters of wheat to the acre! The average produce in the ordinary mode of cultivation, is not more than four quarters; so that the extra expense is more than repaid four fold. The expense of digging an acre of ordinary land, at nurser price, he states to be 33s. and this, he adds, is an operation worth two ploughings; and, besides, by planting the wheat there is a great saving in seed. In the usual mode of broad cast, it requires two bushels to the acre; but, in planting, one peck is sufficient. Mr. F. also states, that by spade husbandry he has produced a crop of potatoes, amounting to the almost incredible quantity of 800 bushels per acre! and he gives it as his opinion that a more general use of the spade would have the most beneficial effect, not only upon the agricultural laborers themselves, but on their employers also; for though the farmer might not be able to find laborers to cultivate large quantities of land in this way, he might at least cultivate sufficient to employ his quota of the laborers of his parish, and at once exonerate the poor rates, and he himself amply repaid."
