

TO THE PRINTER OF THE ROYAL GAZETTE.

HAVING seen my name exhibited in your valuable Paper, by, or under the signature of "A. Lockwood," whom I suppose to be the Surveyor-General of this Province, I confess Sir, such a publication has alarmed, but not annihilated me; the dignified appellation will not deter me from calling the attention of your Readers upon a subject both painful and irksome in its construction, yet, conveying the most serious import.

My inability of writing, or rather pretending to write in the public prints, will infallibly convey to your judgment a corroboration of my assertion, that the subject herein developed is of no minor nature, therefore demands an elaborate and critical investigation.

It is, Sir, to be venerated that we have this inestimable liberty of Press, wherein is a channel, which gives refuge and equity to the injured, and the calumniators, or those culpable, displayed in their real colours and characters.

I will endeavor as much as possible to keep brevity on this subject my criterion, and if you should still consider me dilatory and tedious, I trust when you find that Character is the subject matter, patience and acumen will accompany you through this important investigation.

The natural enmity of the human heart still remains in many cases unsubdued, and the consequence is, that where envy and malevolence can no longer flow in one channel, their current will rush with the greater impetuosity into another. It is thus I apprehend, that the genuine spirit of malignity runs on, and truth of every kind disregarded, or rather not hearkened to, for, what is so swift as scandal - what so easy sent abroad - what received with more welcome - what spreads so universally?

I will now proceed to lay before the public the injustice that has been done to my character, by reports as false as they were malicious. - In the first place, by superceding my orders from Frederick in the execution of my office, being in that of a Deputy Surveyor's. - The second charge, or rather report against me is, that of my throwing down, destroying, or removing old established Boundaries. - In the third, of running incorrect Lines, and lastly, not qualified for the duties of my situation.

Here Mr. Printer, you perceive the arrangement of your Culprits errors in regular rotation, and as he must be his own Counsellor, he wishes to be short, and speak plain, therefore pronounces the two first charges in the indictment against him, in the full strength of meaning, - false. The residue, he will substantiate hereafter.

It is now my duty to prove those reports or charges without a shadow of truth, so as to vindicate my assertion; if I fail in so doing, let me merit that judgment so base a character would deserve. Here then, I say, those reports or malicious productions were from those whose stations in life, are by no means concordant with their actions.

I have to call upon no less a person than the illustrious and meritorious William Peters, Esq; and how I came by his displeasure was in seeing and exacting justice to a poor, but honest man, James Mays, in the survey of Gagetown Grant, wherein the said Peters wanted to take away Mr. Mays' property, and indeed considered himself once triumphant, and with his wanted touch of feeling and humanity (which is very great) exclaimed he would not leave Mays a shirt to his back, and was sorry he was not worth more! Here is a conqueror of property, courage and humanity.

The next host of enemies that entered the field against me, were a certain branch of the Scofield family, for reasons hereafter illustrated, provided that branch answers this accusation; and should this hint leave those persons in any obscurity, to whom I allude, or to what part of the family, I will make it evident in my future publications.

Here, Mr. Printer, you perceive what formidable foes I have to contend with, and have reason to conclude my enemies have increased in ten progression, not that such a compact I merited, but merely from the connexions and associates naturally belonging to my foes, whose feelings were so strictly in unison, that the least irritation of their nerves, immediately caused those of the others to vibrate. Other reports have evidently been drawn up with the design of counteracting the effects of any favorable impression in my behalf, and of paralyzing the efforts I might make to enforce that justice and equity my situation required.

The other two reports in opposition, namely of running false lines, and not qualified for the duties of my office. I promised to vindicate, which I will not do by any parity of reasoning, or much less by any strane of language that shall appear in the least obscure. - As to wrong lines, I can avow in the most unshaken stability of truth, that I have never to my knowledge or belief, gone contrary to my Instructions or oral authority. Consequently if I have erred it was not by design, but by the fallibility of nature. I go not through the woods or wilderness land like a ship dashing through the waves in the ocean, leaving no trace or mark behind, my work is obvious, and am under no apprehension whatever to meet any Surveyor or Surveyors upon it, and after proper preliminary requisites proved this great work, that has, I conjecture, grieved me so much envy. - As to not being qualified for the duties of my office, I affirm in the report of language above, that those who set the report in circulation, may exert their scholastic erudition in an examination of me, or, if not qualified for the undertaking, I will glut their desires further, by allowing them to apply to those, who may be considered capable of harassing and bewildering me in the various qualifications that belong, or ought to be the companion of a competent Surveyor.

Before I conclude, I have to notice the retreat of my foes from the scene of action, or at least, from the front; I do not blame them for such a movement. The speculation and generalship are not distinctive of the design it was intended to answer - they have got a more able person at the helm, his exertions are an indication of his assiduity, and his steps plainly paint the stability of authority and judgment. The name I need not make a repetition of, further than the Honorable Gentleman wishes to deprive me of running private lines. I believe their is no Act in our British Legislature that will authorize such an action and particularly where the respective Grantees are unanimous. The same authority may as well command the respective Landholders not to engage, controul, sell, or transact any domestic business with out the sanction of the Surveyor-General.

I will now close this statement of grievances, and if it meet with that resistance I expect, you will hear from me again in further comment and explanation, but am apprehensive other persons will be called upon, though some with reluctance, however what will not be the sacrifice in the defence of character, when attempted to be baseely destroyed? I answer, life itself is not more dear, - or what is existence without it; we are mortal, it is immortal. If those gentlemen whom I have called upon to verify their behaviour towards me, can conscientiously acquit their conducts of reprehension, I envy not the happiness of their dispositions, but leave them in quiet possession of their honoured transactions so liberally diffused upon a stranger.

I remain, Mr. Editor,
Your most obedient Servant,
WILLIAM ANSON.
