

SELECTED POETRY.

Hope Comforts every Sorrow.

When arrows of Affliction fly,
And wound the heart and cause a sigh,
What is the balm that heals the wound
And spreads a cheerful aspect round?
Tis Hope.

Hope gently lights upon the breast,
With sorrow's goading fangs oppress'd,
Bidding to cease, the flowing tear,
For anguish shall not tarry here.

When Disappointment's piercing dart,
With poisonous sting infects the heart,
Whence do these gentle breezes blow,
That kindle joy, that smother woe?
From Hope.

Hope, like the gentle breathing gale
On seas of Trouble swell the sail,
And buoys life's ship, o'er shoal Despair,
Till Heaven's own gales breathe sweetly there.

When War's grim tempest calls to arm,
And heroes dauntless meet the alarm:
Where does the hidden treasure lie,
That bids the Soldier dare to die?
In hope.

Hope issues from the fountain, Fame,
And winds her course among the slain;
Else would the sight dismay the brave,
Of thousands fitted for the grave.

When Death's cold grasp demands his prize,
And bids us close our mortal eyes;
And in the dust lie mould'ring down,
To worlds unseen we're hurried on,
By Hope.

Then Hope be mine, in Hope I'll trust,
When the green turf lies on my breast,
By Heaven's command, I hope to rise,
To joys supreme above the skies.

JOHN LANE.

TIME IS SHORT.

As time then is not only short and uncertain, but precious in the highest degree, how diligently should it be improved? How weighty and powerful the incentives thereto! It is by the virtuous improvement of time that health is maintained, that honest wealth is gotten, that the mind is endowed with durable riches, the character is established, and above all a good conscience secured; all these depend on the diligent improvement of time. Again, on health depends every earthly enjoyment. On wealth the godlike power of relieving the necessities; on a cultivated and well stored mind, our usefulness to our fellow men in various ways; on character, the confidence of mankind; and on a good conscience, the high approbation of heaven, and calm sunshine of the soul, which nothing can give or take away. How immense then is the sacrifice which involves all these! and such is the sacrifice of time! For idleness is the mother of vice; the murderer of health, an impossible barrier in the way to wealth; her touch is a hermetical seal upon all the inlets to knowledge; like an air pump she collapses all the powers of the soul, is the highway robber of a good name, the death of happiness here, and the death of the hope of it hereafter.

Two sailors were observed by some gentlemen to be busy in lifting an ass over the wall of a pound where it was confined.—On asking the reason, the tars, with true humanity and character, replied, "why look ye master, we saw this animal aground, without victuals, d'ye see; and so my messmate and I agreed to cut his cable, and give him his liberty because we have known before now what it was to be on short allowance."
