From the Literary Gazette, Oct. 24, 1819. REVIEW OF NEW BOOKS.

SKETCHES OF AMERICA. - A Narration of a Journey of 5000 miles through the Eastern and Western States of America; contained in eight Reports, addressed to thirty-nine English Families, by whom the Author was deputed, in June, 1817, to ascertain whether any and what part of the United States would be suitable for their residence, &c. &c. - By H. Bradshaw Fearon, London. (Concluded.)

" Immorality. - Of the state of public morals I find considerable difficulty in forming my judgment. The habits of the people are marked by caution and secrecy. Although the eyes and ears of a stranger are not insulted in the openness of noon-day with evidence of hardened profligacy, I have, nevertheless, reason to believe in its existence to a very great extent; though perhaps there is no Philadelphia parent would say to me what a respectable New Yorker did- There is not a father in this City, but who is sorry that he has a son!!!

" Dishonesty .- No Gentleman, (say the last of the rules to be observed by all Gentlemen who choose to board at Lawes' Hotel, Middle-town, Kentucky,)-no gentleman shall take the saddle, bridle or harness of another Gentleman without his consent."

Cruelty. - At this same Inn an instance of the shocking barbarity with which slaves are treated in the United States, of which this volume abounds with proofs afflicting to humanity, is related.

"A few minutes before dinner, my attention was excited by the piteous cries of a human voice, accompanied with the loud cracking of a whip. Following the sound, I found that it issued from a log-barn, the door of which was fistened. Peeping through the logs, I perceived the bar-keeper, together with a stout man, more than six feet high, who was Colonel -, and a negro boy about : 4 years of age, stript naked, receiving the lashes of these monsters, who relieved each other in the use of a horsewhip; the poor boy fell down upon his knees several times, begging and praying that they would not kill him, and that he would do any thing they liked; this produced no cessation in their exercise. At length Mr. Lawes arrived, told the valiant Colonel, and his humare employer, the bar keeper, to desist, and that the boy's refusal to cut wood was in obedience to his (Mr. 1. 's) directions. Colonel - said, that " he did not know what the niggar had done, but that the barkeeper requested his assistance to whip Cæsar; of course he lent him a hand, being no more than he should expect Mr. Lawes should do for him under similar circumstances."

The whole company at dinner sanctioned this barbarous conduct, and the humane landlord was only angry because the niggar was not his own, 'but left under his care by a friend, and he did not like to have a friend's property injured. Such treatment of their wretched slaves, the Author assures us, is common in Kentucky, while in the Eastern and Older States the oppression of all persons of colour is intolerably grievous.

Religion .- I feel little hopes of conveying to you a faithful portraiture of this people, in their religious character; they differ essentially from the English Secretaries, in being more solemnly bigotted, more intolerant, and more ignorant of the Scriptures - I do not discover those distinctive marks which are called forth in England by Sectarianism. There is not the aristocracy of the Establishment, the sourness of the Presbyterian, or the sanctified melancholy of the Methodist. A cold uniform bigotary seems to prevade all parties; equally inaccessible to argument, opposed to investigation, and, I fear, indifferent about truth; as it is, even the proud Pharisaical Quaker appears under a more chilling and more freezing atmosphere in this new world."

We shall not projecute these extracts farther at present, but, in conclusion, have to remind our readers of the political and religious feelings of the writer from whose pen they are copied. He is no traveller infected with British prejudices, but a lover of remolicatism, a zealous theattrical admiper of the theoretical perfection of the United States Constitution, and a visitant of America, in search of a refuge in that paradise, whither he and his friends might escape from the ills of England! East and West did he wander five thousand miles, and he declares, to the thirty nine families interested in his mission,

"I lament to say, that there is not one spot in the whole of that vast distance, in which I, or indeed any man among you, could be induced to make a permanent settlement. The white population are the victims of demoralizing habits. The native Indians present of course nothing but a picture of mere savage life; and the poor negroes suffer even more than commonly falls to the lot of their oppressed and degraded condition.'

Before closing these remarks, it may not be unacceptable to notice, that Mr. Fearon encountered several of our Patriots in America; Cobbet: Mr. H-, his friend, a Lancashire cotton bleacher; Mr. Casev of Liverpool, and young Watson. Of the first, we shall have occasion to say something next Saturday. The second, Mr. H ---, was patriptically employed in " endeavouring to induce this (the American) Government to lay double duties on all British goods." The third, Mr. Casey, was trying to form a cotton and twist establishment at Washington, we suppose on the credit he took with him from Liverpool and, though last, not least, the renowned " young Watson" was pointed out in Carey's Porter-House at Pittsburgh. His appearance was that of poverty; and a reserve, which he maintained, appeared to Mr. Fearon to proceed from habit, bespeaking absence of valent. He escaped in the ship Venus, which was visited by Lavonder and another Officer off Dover, with certain information that he was on board; "His face was painted the had on a farmer's frock-coat, stuffed shoes without heels; looked stouter, shorter, and younger. than described in the proclamation. He went on deck, upon knowing that Officers were looking for him. When he was standing by their side, Miss Wilson, a cabin passenger, fainted. Lavender, ignorant of his person, told him to take care of the lady; examined the trunks of all the passengers, not excepting that of Watson, who continued supporting Miss Wilson.

"The other passengers were not in the secret till they landed in America; where they learnt that their companion, Thomas Pearson, whom they used to call the proud farmer, was a person of great notoriety. "He has got a situation in a school, and receives £50 per annum; is little known, and less regarded."
