LEGISLATURE OF NEW-BRUNSWICK.
 [Extracts from the Journals.]

Friday, 12th March.
 A Bill, "to enable the Province Treasurer to borrow the sum of Nine Thousand Pounds, for paying off bounties and other debts payable by the Laws of this Province," was concurred in by the Council.
 A Message from His Excellency the Lieutenant-Governor.

"NEW-BRUNSWICK.
MESSAGE TO THE HOUSE OF ASSEMBLY,
 16th MARCH, 1819.
 "The Lieutenant-Governor informs the House of Assembly, in answer to their Message of the 12th instant, that, in consequence of representations made to the Government in England, of the great and warrantable destruction committed in His Majesty's Woods in this Province, positive orders were issued by the Lords Commissioners of His Majesty's Treasury, forbidding any licence to be granted for cutting Timber, but under the sanction of the Lieutenant-Governor first obtained—which order he communicated to the Council; who, after deliberate consideration, arranged and recommended a System, which, in their opinion, might effectually prevent the recurrence of similar mischiefs in future.

"The shilling per ton, forms a part of that system, which has been transmitted for the consideration of His Majesty; and bonds have been taken to secure the payment of that sum, in case it should eventually be demanded.

"The monies which may arise from the permission to cut the Timber belonging to His Majesty, as well as all other sums of money which may accrue to Him, from the sale or other disposition of Property belonging to the Crown, in this Province, will be appropriated to such uses as His Majesty may be pleased to direct."

G. S. SMYTH,
 "Lieut.-Gov."

Saturday, 13th March.
 On motion, made and seconded, Resolved unanimously, "that in consequence of the death of the late Honourable William Pagan, a Member of His Majesty's Council, this House do adjourn until Monday next, as a tribute of respect due to the memory of the deceased, on account of the long and important services he has rendered the Province of New-Brunswick, as a Member of the Legislature from its earliest formation; in which capacity, as well as in private life, he was ever conspicuous for his integrity, correctness, and impartiality."

From a late Boston Paper.

PICTURE FOR THE DUELLIST.

The following remarks are highly interesting, in a moral sense of view; and will be read with feelings of stung sensibility. They were delivered in the Senate of the United States, by Mr. Barbour, while the Resolution of Mr. Morril, of N. H. for punishing the seconds in the late murderous duel, was under consideration:—

MR. PRESIDENT: The event to which the resolution relates, has filled me with the deepest affliction. I claim the melancholy privilege of being the chief mourner here. Mason was my friend—a long and intimate acquaintance, ripened into a sincere friendship by an association in this body for several years, gave me an opportunity of appreciating his distinguished worth. Virginia loved him as one of her bravest sons; in war her shield—her ornament in peace. With her the very name had been consecrated to patriotism, through several generations. He lost nothing in the person of the deceased. He united the amiable qualities of the man to the higher virtues of the patriot. His loss will be mourned by his country as a public calamity. In the vigor of life, uniting both the affection and confidence of all, and surrounded with every blessing that promised happiness, he has suddenly fallen the victim of a barbarous practice. Cut off in the commencement of a splendid career, he leaves a wretched mother, a disconsolate widow, a fatherless child, and a weeping country.

Oh, what a scene was there! But yesterday Selma was the abode of happiness; to-day it is wrapped in mourning. See on yesterday the affectionate husband, the amiable wife, the tender infant—the pledge and cement of their happiness. To-day behold that husband, carried into the presence of his wife, bleeding in his gore. See her, frantic with despair, precipitating herself upon the corpse of her bleeding blood, and contending with the icy arms of death for the lifeless prize. She lifts her eyes to heaven, the last refuge of the wretched, and in tones of agony cries out, My God, my God, restore my husband! Her prayers are given to the winds; his disembodied spirit has found its refuge and its home in the bosom of its God, while his earthly remains are consigned to the cold and narrow house appointed for all the living. Peace be to his ashes! And may a kind Providence become the friend of the widow; pour balm in her afflicted bosom, and bind up the broken heart; be the father of the fatherless, and let him be the mother's prop; rock the cradle of her declining years, and be a consolation in her dying hour. If any thing can now administer to the affliction of her surviving friends, it will be the knowledge that Virginia, this day, through all her borders, weeps his untimely fall.
