THE COQUETTE.

I thought she lov'd me-on her brow Such heavenly sweetness shone, That hope dare not a doubt allow, Nor faith a failing own. I thought she loved me-from her eye Such angel glances stole, They seemed the steady heart's reply-The secret of the soul But oh ! I found her brow could wear For others too as sweet an air, And that her winning glance would fall With the same promises on all.

I thought she loved me -on her tongue Such fondness seemed to dwell, And there the promises seemed hung She had not dared to tell. I thought she loved me-that her heart Was wholly, wholly mine-So warm to meet - so loth to part -Oh ! so-almost divine. But found alas ! her tongue would greet With fondness all she chanced to meet, Tho' other hearts she strove to move, She knew not what it was to love.

The Petition of Sir David Lindsay to

To which he replied in the most serious manner, " I think I should be willing."

The next day, which was Monday, he took tea with this family, and while in the house, was seized by the symptoms of a violent fever. On account of some particular circumstances, he could not return to his apartments in the town, but continued at the house of his friend, where, notwithstanding every attention suited to his case, he died on Thursday following.

Mysterious Providence ! this was to be the means in the hand of the Holy Spirit, of effecting the desired purpose, and to answer the many prayers of the young man. The composure of his mind under this heavy affliction, in the near prospect of death and eternity, with the many weighty and useful sentiments uttered by his dying lips, made a happy impression on the mind of Mrs. T. She began to perceive that there was a sacred reality in the religion of Jesus Christ, of which she had never duly conceived ; which impression was deepened, and issued in a hopeful conversion to God, by the funeral sermon preached in the same chapel by Mr. B. of London, under which also, several other persons appeared to be called by grace. Mrs. T. continued under deep concern of soul for several months; but there was reason to conclude that a real and gracious change took place in her heart; since which she has become an advocate for the cause of Christ, discovering as much zealfor evangelical religion as she has formerly manifested against it.

James V., King of Scotland, ridiculing the ignorance of the clergy of those times ; and the little care then observed to appoint competent men to the service of the Church, taken from Irving's Lives of the Scotish poets.

'The King being one day surrounded by a numerous train of nobility and prelates, Lindsay approached him with due reverence, and began to prefer a humble petition that he would instal him in an office which was then vacant. " I have," said he, " servit your Grace lang, and luik to be rewardit as other are : and now your maister taylor, at the plesure of God is departit; wherefore I wald desire of your Grace to bestow this little benefite upon me." The King seplied that he was amazed at such a request from a man who could neither shape nor sew. "Sir," rejoined the poet, " that maks nae matter; for you have given bishopricks and benefices to mony standing here about you, and yet they can nouther teach, nor preach; and why may not I as weill be your taylor, thocht I can nouther shape nor sew ; seeing teaching and preaching are nae less requisite to their vocation than shaping to ane taylor ?" James immediately perceived the object of his petition, and scrupled not to divert himself at the expense of the enraged ecclesiastics.

ORIGINAL ANECDOTE .- Two milk men, some few days since, finding cents very scarce, were much troubled in making change when they sold their milk. They accordingly agreed to go to the United States Branch in the city of New-York, and get twenty dollars in cents. After the cents were delivered to them, on their way to the ferry, they stopped at a Porter House to get some punch, when they deposited the bag containing the money on the table. " Ah !" said an old man who sat in the room, " if all that was in the bag was half joes, it would be something handsome." To which remark, one of the milk-men said, " they are half Joe's ;" upon which the old man offered a bet of ten dollars. The stakemoney was put into a third person's hands, when the milk man, making the bet, called to the other milk-man, whose name was Joseph-" Foe," says he, " are not those in the bag half your's." " Yes," says Joe. " There says he, " I told you they were half Joe's ;" and accordingly took the bet.

Striking instance of Converting Grace.

In a country town in England resided a respectable family, the master of which professed serious religion ; but his lady, though religously educated, was a stranger and an enemy to vital godliness. A pious young man, who lived in the same town, an attorney, frequently visited at this house, and spent his Sunday evenings there, He lamented, in secret, that want of evangelical piety, which he perceived in the lady ; and, whenever he saw her enter the chapel, used to lift up his heart to God for her conversion. Once, in her hearing, he said to her husband, " Mr. T. you want nothing to complete your happiness but the conversion of Mrs. T." Qn which she rallied him in a jocular way, as she often had done before, on his very great piety ; and added, " but, Mr. B. as you seem so much to desire my conversation, do you think you should be willing to die, if that would effect it ?"

HAT on Sunday the 9th day of May last, I was discovered by the Pilot Boats while cruizing off Point Escuminac, a Schooner, about 15 miles distant, and bearing E.N.E. from Escuminac; and upon coming up alongside of her, was found to be a Vessel of about 60 tons burthen, having no person on board, water logged, no sails nor rigging of any description, nor spars, except the two lower masts and bowsprit. The water being discharged, three Pilot Boats towed her in from sea, and up Miramichi River about two miles above the Custom-House, where she now lays on the beach in safety-no person appearing as yet to claim her-no name JAMES MCULLON.
