

Year of my Collectorship 50.
"CALL AGAIN."

"Courteous and most gentle peruser of this volume, be it known unto thee, that, for the space of 50 years, I have been collector of debts due to Editors and Proprietors of sundry Newspapers in these United States; and that during this space, I have kept a correct account of the number of times I have been requested, nay obliged, by different individuals, to "CALL AGAIN;" with the expences accruing thereon; viz. During the 50 years, 6000 times. Expences of "calling again," 2000 dollars. Died or insolvent before I could "call again," 1500 subscribers.

Editors and proprietors' total loss, 9500 dollars.
Signed, T. H.

"* * * When it is recollected, that this is the statement of but one of the numerous newspaper collectors in the United States, surely all will exclaim, the editors of public journals are, of all men, the most miserable."

THE CHINA-ASTER.

"I planted it with my own hand," said my sister, holding up a withered China-Aster, plucked up by the roots, "I covered it from the sun, I watered it night and morning, and after all" (wiping her eyes with her handkerchief) "after all it is dead."

Alas! how many are the occurrences in life, thought I, which resemble Mary's flower. Too easily believing what we wish, we adopt some trifle, and laying it, as it were in our bosom, love it as a daughter. Fancy paints it in gay colors; increasing in beauty, we see its leaves expand, and trace its progress with anxious solicitude from the swelling bud to the full blossom; and then we expect to enjoy it, reality tells us, after all it is dead.

How often does an only son engross all the cares of his parents, and wind himself round every fibre of their hearts. To cherish the idol every wish is on the stretch—to indulge it are the rarities of art and nature provided: sleepless nights and anxious days are their lot; and lo! when they hope to see the end of their labors, struck by the hand of disease, or debased by the contaminating touch of vice, the agonizing friends find, after all it is dead.

And how sanguine are the expectations of those relations and friends who possess a lovely girl, endowed with all the charms of beauty and goodness. How do they exult in contemplating on her: she is the solace of their calamities and the staff of the independence for their declining years. Friendship rises in her defence like a wall, and affection nourishes her as the mild dews of spring.—Ah! to how little purpose! the canker-worm of love preys upon this sweet sensitive; and the scorching winds of disappointment drink up its moisture; it fades—the hands of affliction and friendship are united to support it in vain; for

The deep drawn, oft repeated sigh
Hath caus'd health's blushing to decay;
The tear that moisten'd beauty's eye,
Hath worn its lustre quite away.

It languishes and dies: and REGRET bitterly weeping, raves round the LOVELY FALLEN and exclaims, after all it is dead!

"CALL AGAIN."

I knew an old codger in New-England (says a writer in the Independent Balance) who for fifty years had been a collector of Newspapers in various places in the United States. He was an accentric genius, and paid particular attention to things, in themselves, apparently the most trifling. In his breeches pocket he ever carried a memorandum book, in which he was accustomed to insert the various incidents, &c. which occurred in his peregrinations. When this whimsical, but honest old fellow paid the only debt he ever owed, I was present at his funeral, and shortly after was appointed one of the committee of the three to examine his papers, &c. In the prosecution of the business I accidentally discovered the memorandum book in question; it was tied round with a piece of tape, and its cover was of parchment pretty much worn out. The name of the deceased owner was written in large letters, German text, on a blank leaf inside. On perusal I found many interesting remarks, anecdotes, &c. I had turned over 25 pages of the volume, when my attention was arrested by the words following, written in large capitals, and with a peculiar kind of ink, to wit, "CALL AGAIN."

My readers will task their wits to discover the meaning of the emphatic words before mentioned; but, as I rate myself to be kept in suspense, I will extract at once the whole page, verbatim et literatim.

NOTICE.

WHAT on Sunday the 9th day of May last, was discovered by the Pilot Boats while cruising off Point Escuminac, a Schooner, about 15 miles distant, and bearing E.N.E. from Escuminac; and upon coming up alongside of her, was found to be a Vessel of about 60 tons burthen, having no person on board, water logged, no sails nor rigging of any description, nor spars, except the two lower masts and bowsprit. The water being discharged, three Pilot Boats towed her in from sea, and up Miramichi River about two miles above the Custom-House, where she now lays on the beach in safety—no person appearing as yet to claim her—no name JAMES McCULLON.
