QUEBEC, MAY 23.

We are sorry to understand that the small pox is making great ravages, both in this City and at Montreal; and we have every reason to apprehend that its poisonous sting is not exclusively limited to these two places in the Province. It is much to be lamented that our Legislature should have thought it expedient not to renew the salutary provisions, offered to the public by the Vaccine Board—whatever might have been the errors committed by that institution, the public good resulting from it ought to have overweighed every other consideration.

A practical comment on the distribution of justice, and on the degrees of punishment awarded to crime in a neighbouring country, the boasted land of liberty and equal rights.

"Circuit Court.—A Court of Oyer and Terminer was held at Flatbush on Monday last at which his honor Judge Yates presided.

The following convictions took place:—
Abraham Bristow, a colored man, convicted of Burglary, and sentenced to the state prison at hard labor for life.

Daniel Pettey, of Bushwick, convicted of manslaughter for killing his wife, and sentenced to the state prison at hard labor for ten years.—L. I. Star.

MONTREAL, JUNE 21.

BOUNDARY LINE.

We have been informed by a person of veracity and possessing the means of accurate information, that the operations on line 45 are to be suspended during this summer, in order that a Mr. Elliot, an American astronomer, may have time to examine the calculations made last summer by our astronomer Dr. Tiark. The latter gentleman is to employ this interval in ascertaining the position of some important places in New-Brunswick, for which province he has ere this taken his departure by the route of Boston. Two assistants, Messrs. Hunter and Carlisle, the former of U. S. and the latter of the British Commission, arrived in this city on Monday evening, and yesterday evening embarked in one of the steam boats for Quebec, on their route to New-Brunswick. Our informant assures us that this suspension is totally unnecessary, as the United States astronomers had last summer every opportunity of observing Dr. T's operations; but that the American government are using every expedient to procrastinate a survey which must terminate in a loss of territory to them.

INVENTION.

An ingenious person in this city has lately favored us with a description of an addition to the present machinery of a steam-boat, by which it may be enabled to stem currents hitherto impassable to that species of vessel.—We are not at liberty to specify this improvement, but some idea of its value may be gained from the following slight observations. It is well known, that in currents of a certain rapidity the mechanical power becomes totally ineffective, the passage of the water being quicker than the revolution of the paddles: thus, in order that a vessel should advance, recourse is made to cattle or manual labour. The effect of this invention, then, is to obviate the necessity of either; it being calculated to propel a steam-vessel 25 yards per minute, in any current, its power increasing in exact proportion to the velocity of the water. We do not pretend to be well versed in mechanics; but so simple is the invention, we venture to pronounce that it will be found to possess all the advantages above attributed to it; a very ingenious mechanic, not the inventor, being confidently of the same opinion.

KINGSTON, (U. C.) JUNE 16.

We understand that three hundred Royal Marines are expected from England this season, to be stationed at the Naval Yard, on Point Frederick. On their arrival, the troops of the garrison will be relieved from the performance of Dock-Yard duty, which more properly belongs to the Corps of Marines as a branch of Naval services.—Several Warrant Officers are also on the way out for the Lake Service.

BOSTON, JUNE 30.

LATE FROM THE SPANISH MAINE.
The British brig of war Wasp, from Jamaica and Havana bound to England, with dispatches, has touched in at Charleston, S. C.

Her Officers inform, that on the 27th May, a vessel arrived at Kingston, from Carthage, bringing intelligence that the Vice-Roy, together with Col. Santa Cruz, and several other officers, had hastily left that place in a schooner bound to St. Jago de Cuba, taking with them about 200,000 dollars in specie. Their flight was occasioned by the near approach of the whole Patriot Army, which was advancing upon Carthage and Santa Matra, in the form of a crescent—the latter place was supposed to have fallen into their hands before the sailing of the above vessel, but no official account of it had reached Jamaica.—Bolívar had taken Mangar and one other important place, to the rear of Carthage: in defence of which, the Royalist army suffered very severely. There was no hope of defending Carthage against the victorious army, as it was extremely destitute of the means of defence. There was no doubt but Santa Matra would likewise shortly fall into the hands of the Patriots, as the harbour was closely blockaded by the squadron of Admiral Brion, of 18 sail, which was provisioned for six months, and well supplied with arms and ammunition.

Don Raphael Ramirez had arrived at Carthage, from Havana, a short time previous to the above events, with intelligence of the Constitution of the Cortes being received and adopted at Havana—when he was thrown into prison by the Vice Roy and Inquisitor-General, for attempting to destroy his Majesty's Government.

The public quiet was maintained at Havana, but private assassinations were very frequent, three persons having been thus murdered in one night.

It was very sickly in most of the West-India Islands.

LONDON, JUNE 8.

Extract of a private Letter dated Paris, June 8.

Louvel was executed yesterday evening at six o'clock. He had preserved to his very last moment, without the slightest intermission that extraordinary and unshrinking apathy which he displayed through the course of his confinement and trial. His countenance, as he went along to the scaffold, was perfectly calm and even wore a smile of content. He assisted the executioners in the preparations for the last dreadful instant. The crowd on the occasion, presented the most magnificent spectacle I have ever seen. From the remotest points, where a glimpse could be caught of the scaffold, nought was seen but a moving mass of heads, here and there interspersed with the gleaming of the cuirasses, swords and bayonets of the military; all the roofs of the houses were black with people; the spires of the churches covered with them—and the towers of Notre Dame seemed almost to tremble under the weight of the multitude on them. All passed off with decency and tranquillity.

The apparent state of security which was created by the calm which pervaded at the execution of Louvel was but of short duration, hundreds of individuals assembled armed with sticks, and marched through the streets. They were at length dispersed by detachments of the dragoons and gendarmerie.

JUNE 9.

We understand that it is proposed to limit the number of Peers, who are to assist at the Coronation, to six in each rank, that is, six Dukes, six Marquises, &c. independent of the great Officers of State, who are Peers. These will no doubt, if the measure be adopted, be taken by seniority. This also would exclude minors from the procession. Ladies are of course not to assist, as the Queen is not included in the plan of the Coronation.

The communication from the Queen to Lord Liverpool, which was delivered yesterday by Mr. Denman, and to which Lord Castlereagh adhered last night in the House of Commons, was, we understand, merely to the following effect:—

"The Queen, in compliance with the advice of her Counsel, and of several Members of the House of Commons, thinks it proper to inform Lord Liverpool she is ready to receive any proposition consistently with her honour, which His Lordship may be disposed to make on the part of His Majesty's Government."

Thus far then Her Majesty has condescended to the utmost limit consistent with her dignity. It remains to be seen if the advisers of the King will, on their part, do what in equity and policy they are called upon to do for the security of national honour and public tranquillity. It is evident that if an accommodation, honourable to all parties, does not ensue, the fault is all their own. The proposals ought assuredly to come from them, and if they have common sense (honesty put out of the question) they will instantly make such as Her Majesty, with unblemished honour, may accept. At any rate, notwithstanding the sneers of Mr. Brougham "about the not perfect wisdom" of her unprofessional advisers, it begins even already to be completely apparent that Her Majesty was right in coming to England, and negotiating (if she must negotiate) here.

JUNE 14.

Rupture of the Negotiation between the Queen and His Majesty's Ministers.
The two following letters show the negotiation between the Queen and His Majesty's Ministers, to be at an end. The King and Queen now stand upon their absolute right—and the investigation and trial will now take place. In answer to the letter of Mr. Denman, on Friday, proposing to listen to propositions on the part of the Queen, Lord Liverpool sent the following letter on Saturday:—

"Fife House, Whitehall, Saturday afternoon, 3 o'clock.

"Lord Liverpool informs Her Majesty, that the only proposition he had to make was the one submitted to Mr. Brougham, in April last, which was scarcely the same as that proposed by Lord Hutchinson at St. Omer; but that Lord Liverpool assures Her Majesty that the King's servants will still think it their duty, notwithstanding all that has passed, to receive for consideration any suggestions which Her Majesty, or the advisers, may have to offer upon their propositions."

To this note of Lord Liverpool, Her Majesty replied:—

"That she demanded all the rights belonging to the Queen of England. That before she was in possession of all her dignities she could not listen to any other proposal. That when she was restored to them, she would be ready to listen to any other proposal from His Majesty's Ministers."

It is now understood that all future correspondence or negotiation ends.
