Culture of Beans while growing.

The most important modern discovery, in the management of growing crops, is perhaps in the culture of beans, which may lead to consequences highly interesting to the farmer. It is well known, that beans are an excellent preparation for wheat: but it is often so late before the crop can be cut down, and afterwards carried from the field where it was reaped, to the stack-yard, that the season of sowing the succeeding crop to advantage, is lost; the wheat afterwards sown, became liable to diseases, and frequently suffered in the harvest. These losses may be at least diminished, if not totally prevented, by a simple expedient.

It has long been a practice with gardeners, to cut off the tops of beans, in order to accelerate their podding. From its success in the gardens, it was natural to suppose, that it would answer in the fields; and some experiments had been made in different places, to ascertain that circumstance. It has probably been tried, however, on the greatest scale, by John Lowther, Esq. Member for Cumberland; who in a communication to the author of this work, gives the following account, of the origin and progress of this improved system, on his farm.

His bailiff, George Lane, who had been a gardener, was instrumental in applying the garden culture of beans, to that of the field, and hence the practice of cutting off their tops originated with him. It begun about the year 1804, and has already been tried on more than 200 acres. The operation is performed by means of a sharp-edged instrument or knife, 12 or 14 inches long, exclusive of the handle; but it may be done by a sickle or reaping-hook. The expence has never exceeded 3s. per acre, and it is done by contract. At a certain stage of its growth, the head of the bean-stack does not seem essential for the purposes of vegetation, but by its luxuriance, to exhaust the strength of the plant. The proper time to cut them off, is, when the first blossoms begin to drop; if done sooner, a fresh shoot will put forth.
As soon as the tops are cut off, the pods rapidly increase in size, and the period of ripening is accelerated. The timely removal of those parts where the insects chiefly lodge, materially contributes to the health and vigour of the plant, and probably increases the weight of the crop. The harvest is by this means advanced at least a fortnight. In the ordinary mode of managing a bean crop, their tops are green when reaped, consequently they absorb and retain moisture, and require a considerable exposure in the field, to prepare them for the stack; whereas, without their tops, the crop is sooner in a condition to be carried, and less risk is incurred, from the effects of frost and wet seasons.—The tops are left to rot upon the ground. The loss of some fodder, and the trifling expence, are the only objections that can be urged against the practice. It is peculiarly calculated for the drill system, all the plans not being other otherwise accessible; and it furnishes an additional reason, in support of that superior mode of culture for pulse crops.

In the General Report of Scotland, in which this process is briefly described, an old scythe-blade, set in a wooden handle, is recommended; and the expence is only estimated at about one shilling per acre; but even a much greater expence, is not to be put in competition, with the advantage of having the crop ready for the sickle, a fortnight earlier, and perhaps an additional week gained in the drying of the sheaves.

The other improvements to be afterwards detailed, in the reaping, and the harvesting of beans, in addition to drilling already mentioned, have brought the culture of that plant to such perfection, as to render it a much more advantageous preparation for wheat, than it has hitherto been considered.

LONDON, SEPT. 2.

The Parliamentary Reports are published with great expedition, notwithstanding their magnitude. The evidence of Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday last occupy nearly two hundred folio pages.

The harvest in England has been abundant and got in free from blight or mildew.

PARIS, AUGUST 20.

ANOTHER FOUL CONSPIRACY.

For some days government has been informed of a conspiracy to murder most of the Royal Family, and Ministers—to excite the army to rebellion, and to place some member of the family of Bonaparte on the throne.— The steps of the conspirators have been watched; and the whole of them, with only one or two exceptions, have been apprehended, and will answer with their lives to the offended majesty of the law.

AUGUST 25.

Yesterday evening certain Officers agreed among themselves to meet at the barracks, to assemble the soldiers, to march against the palace of our King, and to proclaim as Sovereign some member of the Bonapartean family; but many of those whom they attempted to seduce by their perfidious proposals, did not hesitate to report immediately to their chiefs, and discover the plot which was about to explode. Government could delay no longer. Those who had taken part in this criminal conspiracy, were arrested by the Gens d'armee.

AUGUST 22.

Yesterday an immense number of Deputies, Generals, &c. &c. paid their homage to his Majesty.

On Saturday, when the 2d regt. of the Royal Guards was paraded, their Colonel, M. de Droughant, after announcing to them the existence of the conspiracy, told them, that four of the traitors were now in their ranks. "I need not," he added, "point them out. They are well known." At these words, the soldiers all directed their eyes to four of their officers, who turned pale, and were arrested on the spot.

The manner in which Government first received an intimation of this conspiracy, was, by a fortunate but most singular chance.
A female, who was accustomed to read the newspapers at the Thuilleries, in returning the journal she had borrowed, left in it, unaware, a letter that had just reached her.

This letter was to the effect of advising her instantly to quit Paris, in order to avoid the consequences of a revolution that was about to break out. This letter fell thus into strange hands, was read, and the female to whom the letter had been addressed was taken up.— She pointed out the writer of it, who, being also taken, put the authorities in possession of the plot.

The plan of the conspirators was to seize the Louvre, and to penetrate by the Grand Gallery of the Museum to the King's apartments, whilst by way of a diversion the soldiers who were to have been gained were to have had a skirmish on the place du Carrousel with the Guards of the Palace.

The Moniteur states the number of the conspirators who have been arrested at 25, none of whom are above the rank of Captain.
Amongst them are some officers of the 2d Regiment of Guards. It appears that they had not communicated their plot to the privates, as they despaired of making them the instruments of their treason. One who, it is said, was to play a principal part in this conspiracy, is a Captain of the Legion of the North, who served in the Guards of Murat, when King of Naples.

AUGUST 25.

The preliminary proceedings against the individuals implicated in the late conspiracy, are actively pursuing. Seven Officers of the 2d Regiment of the Royal Guards, are amongst them, and a person belonging to the Treasury; the latter has been placed in solitary confinement. The majority of the conspirators were Officers in the Legion of La Meurthe. Many of them have aggravated their crime by the most odious ingratitude, as they were indebted for their promotion and honorable distinctions to his Royal Highness the Duke d'Angouleme.
The mother of one of them subsisted upon a pension granted her by Monsieur. The illustrious and distinguished personages, whom they had destined as their victims, amounted to fifty-two.

Lieutenant-Colonel Dentzel, was arrested on Tuesday, by order of the Attorney-Gen.

AUGUST 27.

Yesterday the high court of Peers assembled in their palace, to commence the trial of the conspirators now in custody.
The indictment against them was read by the Sieur Ravez, the Procurer-General. A Committee of twelve was appointed to report preliminary proceedings. The court will proceed without delay to the trial of all the persons arrested on the 10th inst. on charges of crimes provided against by the 87th, 88th and 89th articles of the Penal Code, with their abettors and accomplices.

Conflagration in the Pyrennes.

AUGUST 28.

A frightful conflagration is laying waste the huge forests which crown the Appenines in the vicinity of Fondi. At the moment in which we are writing, the commune of Fondis on all sides surrounded by flames.
The conflagration has even extended beyond this territory, and especially into that of St.
Andre, along the consular road through the territory of Serragione, and of Sela. The Sub-Intendant of Fondi has put in requisition all the inhabitants, for the purpose of putting an end to this dreadful calamity. It is not known whether this has been the effect of chance or of malicious design, or whether it commenced in the Roman States or in the Kingdom of Naples.—Fondi is divided by the boundary of these two States.
