THE WISH.
Propitious Father, God of Truth,
Unto my humble wish attend,
O deign to hear an humble youth,
Who pleads the merits of a friend.

I seek not this world's store to claim,
Nor yet a king's or prince's throne;
I seek not honour's gaudy name,
Nor yet to call the world my own:

I seek more noble things to find,
(Tho' to the world it may seem odd,)
Nothing can fill my finite mind,
But a Triune, Infinite God:

To know the Father reconcil'd
Thro' that dear blood on Cal'v'ry shed;
To know he views me, tho' defil'd,
Unspotted as in Christ my head:

To recognize Jesus as mine,
And all be did as done for me,
My soul into his hands resign,
And feel him set my spirit free:

To feel the Sacred Spirit's power
The pow'r of inbred sin controul;
To save me in temptation's hour,
And cleanse and sanctify my soul:

This my petition deign to hear,
O thou indulgent God of love!
So will I praise thy name white here,
And chaunt thy praise in realms above.

A THOUGHT SUGGESTED BY GEN. 12.

'Twas Love Divine that hover'd o'er th' abyss,
And from chaotic wildness—the rude mass
Of shapeless atoms—form'd this beauteous world.
'Twas love, whose breath in undulations soft
Spread o'er the bill'wy flood's far sweeping wave,
And hush'd the storm of nature into peace.
And oh! 'tis love alone whose pow'r benign
Can breathe sweet peace into the trouble'd soul,
Can hover o'er the dark abyss within,
And make the wild chaotic breast of man
A humble dwelling for the Lord Most High.

A stammering countryman belonging to Connecticut, offered a horse for sale to a merchant in Boston. The merchant supposing from his appearance, that he procur'd the horse dishonestly, asked him if he knew 'Squire _____? He answered in the affirmative.—"Well," says the merchant, "he is a rascal," "Very well," replies the jockey, "he says the same of you." Being asked which he believed; "Fa-a-ith," says he, "I be-be-belove you both."

SPANISH HEROISM.

An authentic anecdote, related by the Captain Korff, who served in Spain, in a regiment of infantry of the guard of Jerome the Ex-King of Westphalia.

Fatigued and exhausted by forced marches, the regiment to which Captain Korff belonged arrived before the monastery of Figueras in Spain. The Colonel of the regiment, a Frenchman, sent in an officer, to demand of the prior the necessary refreshment for the men, as well as for the staff, consisting of about 20 officers. The prior with some of the monks came out to meet the general, assured him that the inhabitants of Figueras would provide for the soldiers, but that he himself would prepare a frugal meal for the staff. The prior's offer was accepted; Captain Korff received from the general some commission for the regiment, and about an hour afterwards it was announced to the prior, that the dinner was served up in the refectory of the monastery. The general, who was aware that the French in Spain had reason to be on their guard in eating and drinking what was offered by the natives, invited the prior to dine with them: he, and two other monks accepted the invitation in such a manner, as to leave no doubt: that he felt himself much flattered by it. After the officers had taken their seats, the prior said grace, carved, eat of every dish first, and with his two brethren, who poured out the wine, drank plentifully with his guests. It was not till towards the end of the repast, that Captain Korff returned, having been detained by the commissions of the general, longer than he expected. During that interval, he had found an opportunity to take some refreshment, and only participated in the lively conversation of the company, hosts as well as guests, at the monastery. The general in particular, expressed his satisfaction to the prior, whose kind reception had surpassed all expectation. Suddenly, however, the cheerfulness of the prior was changed into profound seriousness; he rose from his seat, thanked the company for the honour they had done him, and concluded with asking if any of them had affairs to settle in this world? adding with emphasis, "This Gentlemen, is the last meal you and I shall take on earth: in an hour we shall all be before the Judgment Seat of God!" Cold trembling horror seized the amazed guests; for the prior and his two monks had poisoned the wine in which they had pledged the French officers; all the antidotes given by the French physician were in vain: in less than an hour every one of them ceased to live.

Reputation!

A Notice having appeared on the 20th March last in a New-Brunswick Paper, published at Fredericton, signed by John S. Cox, I conceive it as a duty I owe to my own character and family, to state the whole transaction as it occurred, and to shew the Public, that the representation made against me, is as gross as it is unfounded.

In July 1817, being possessed of a certain Bill of Exchange for £100 Sterling, which had been drawn by Thomas King, Esq. late Paymaster of the late 98th Regiment, in my favor, upon Greenwood & Cox, as Army Agents; JOHN S. COX applied to me to lend him some money, when to befriend him, I immediately gave to him the Bill just mentioned. As I was then on my way to England, upon my own private concerns, JOHN S. COX wished me to take a Power of Attorney from him to collect sundry sums which were due him in England, from several Officers who lately belonged to the late 98th Regiment, but on my making a presentation of these demands, their legality was refused, and I immediately returned to Fredericton in October last, and informed Mr. COX of the result, at the same time giving to him all the vouchers and his Power of Attorney; and as he stood indebted to me in the sum of £119, on the Bill of Exchange and on other accounts, I immediately applied to him for a settlement, with the interest, when he told me it was not in his power to pay the amount, and requested the indulgence of a further time; to this I readily agreed, not feeling a wish to embarrass him in any way, or to do him an injury, and he gave me 4 doubloons, together with a Note of Hand for the balance, being one hundred and five Pounds, which is the same note to which he refers in his advertisement, and becomes due in the present Month of May. This I have never received, nor is there a likelihood of my ever getting any part of it; and I leave it to the public dispassionately to judge, whether Mr. COX can be possessed of those principles which should guide him, when he makes the unjustifiable attack he has made on his benefactor who relieved him in distress—never pressed him for his lawful demands—nay, even went to great personal inconvenience to set up demands against persons who denied owing him one sixpence. These facts speak for themselves, and is the best refutation an old and honest Soldier can offer to the notice he has made against him.
