

answer: Was the clerk an Italian or an Englishman. I don't know what he was.

Mr. Denman made no observation.

The Cross-examination resumed.

Did you not tell me you did not know what he was? I don't know what he was: I don't know what he was, but I believe he was an Italian or Sicilian. He wrote only part, you say—Now was the part you wrote written in Italian or in English? The part I wrote was in English. Did you not tell me just now that the log was written in Italian? In Italian. Did you not tell me it was written in Italian? (After a pause,) Yes. And now you tell me it was written partly in Italian and partly in English.

On this question being propounded to the witness, he appeared totally stupidified and incapable of giving an answer. He stared vacantly for a few seconds, and then by some extraordinary and fortuitous impulse, fainted away. The gentlemen near him caught him before he fell to the ground, and conveyed him out of the house. The effect produced by this accident was extremely peculiar. The Peers seemed astonished: the Counsel gazed at each other as lost in surprise; while the Lord Chancellor directed a more free admission of air to the Court, by the opening of the windows.

After an absence of some minutes, Mr. Flinn was again conducted to the bar; and addressed himself in a half whisper to the Solicitor General.

The Solicitor General—My Lords, the witness wishes that several of the questions and answers may be read to him.

Mr. Gurney now proceeded to read all the questions and answers after the question "Do you usually write in Italian or English?"

After Mr. Gurney had read all the interrogatories up to the period when the witness fainted away, the following alteration was made.

The Witness—That clerk, I must observe, was a sailor, add his name is Pasquelli. He was a servant of mine.

Liberty! Equality! Independence!
REPUBLIC OF HAYTI.

ADDRESS TO THE PEOPLE AND ARMY.
Citizens; Soldiers.

The undersigned Magistrates and Generals announce to you with most lively joy, that they have just made a solemn declaration, that there exists this day in Hayti only one Government, and only one Constitution.

Citizens! Soldiers! Peace is made, and there is no more war amongst us; all Haytians are brothers and re-united—President Boyer and his army will soon enter this town to receive and give the salutation of peace and fraternity; prepare to receive them with all the enthusiasm which characterises true Haytians. Then let us repeat a thousand times these cries, pledges of the happiness and safety of the country—Vive la Republique d'Hayti! Vive l'Independence! Vive la Liberte et Egalite! Vive le President Boyer!

Given at the town hall of the Cape, 21st Oct. 1820, 17th year of the Independence of Hayti. (Signed by a great number of Magistrates and Generals, at the head of which stands the name of P. Roman.)

Liberty. Equality.

REPUBLIC OF HAYTI.

John P. Boyer, President of Hayti.

TO THE HAYTIANS.

Haytians!—The time of discord and division is passed. The day of re-union and concord, the most happy in my life, is arrived.—Children of the same family, we have all rallied under the shade of the sacred tree of liberty. The Constitution is restored throughout Hayti; from the north to the south, from the east to the west, the Republic holds citizens devoted to its prosperity and independence.—I will not recount the history of your past miseries; preserve the memory of them in order to secure yourselves against the recurrence of such evils. After having taken up arms to free ourselves and our fathers from a wretched state of slavery, to which we were in subjection two centuries; after we had poured out our blood and made the greatest sacrifices for the country, who could have imagined that we should have become the victims of ambitious men, who did every thing for themselves and nothing for the people. You know their names. Their fatal celebrity fixed all those dreadful evils upon the country, and has sent their names down to posterity with the execrations of an oppressed people. You have before your eyes the history of the inquisitious Government of Christophe, whose caprices were the supreme law. This ought to convince you that at all times the law should emanate from the general will, and not from the fancy of the individual who is placed at the head of the state.

The Constitution of the Republic, the work of Representatives of all the Departments, has established wise securities against arbitrary power. If during fourteen years, it has blessed those which remain faithful to its provisions, it shall now constitute the happiness of those whom the rebel Christophe led into error, and who this day shall return to the Constitutional Government. But to obtain this result, it is necessary, Haytians, that each one of you divest himself of its personal considerations, of all particular pretensions, recollecting that every man's services are for the country, and not for himself, disdaining all advantages which take their source in intrigue or favour.

We ought never to forget the names of those brave patriots who ceased not to contend against despotism to the very last. Those who gave the most solemn pledge to the people, to make an effort for the recovery of their liberty, are worthy of the national remembrance.

I regret that that blood of which I shall always be sparing, flowed so profusely; all my care shall now be to spare. My order of the 17th, sent express to the Cape, by my aid-de-camp, did not arrive time enough to save the life of the son of Christophe, or those officers who have been most conspicuous in executing the barbarous orders of his government.

Haytians! the past is forgotten. I declare it most solemnly; believe me; haste to concur with the government in its designs to establish the independence of the country. The first President of Hayti is the depositary of the public tranquillity and prosperity. He will spare neither pains nor cares, in making this his duty. Let every citizen imitate his example, and the wounds of the country, occasioned by this civil war, will very soon be healed.

Haytians! render thanks to the Supreme Being, who has permitted us to unite as one nation, and has brought us together as brethren. We pray that we may be inspired with sentiments of peace, and that we may leave our children the heritage of peace in a free and independent country.

Vive la Republique!

Vive la Constitution!

Vive la Liberte et l'Egalite.

Given at the National Palace at Cape Hayti, the 26th October, 1820, and in the 17th year of Independence.

The Secretary General.

FREDERICTON, (N.B.)

2D JANUARY, 1821.

The Mails from Halifax and St. John, furnish us with no later European dates than we were previously in possession of.

The collection made in Trinity Church at St. John, on Christmas day, for the benefit of the Poor, amounted to £46:4:4, and at the Methodist Chapel, for the same purpose, £18:7.

The collection made in Christ Church on Sunday last, in aid of the Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge, amounted to £9:9.

On the 22d October, BOYER was proclaimed President of Hayti, at Cape Henry, and on the 26th he entered the city with 20,000 troops—the Constitution was immediately proclaimed, and the city restored to tranquillity. Previous to which, Christophe, after the revolt of his troops, finding that he could not even place confidence in his guards, shot himself.

MELANCHOLY OCCURRENCE.

Yesterday morning Mr. Justus Todd, an inhabitant of this place, left home to go to Sugar Island for hay; when he had proceeded about 6 miles, he was seen to stop his horses, and go before them on foot; the horses continuing to stand there for some hours, induced some of the neighbours to go and see if any thing was the matter. On reaching the horses they observed his track about a rod ahead, which led to an hole in the ice, in which it was supposed he fell, and was carried by the rapidity of the water immediately under. He has left a wife and three children to lament his loss.

DIED this morning, after a lingering illness, in the 7th year of his age, HENRY WENTWORTH MILLER, son of E. W. MILLER, Esquire. His funeral will take place on Thursday next, at two o'clock, when the friends of the family are requested to attend.

MRS. DENNISON, respectfully informs her friends, and the inhabitants of Fredericton, that her School will recommence on Monday the 8th January; when she hopes by her diligence and attention, to merit a continuance of their patronage.

IN looking over some of the last GAZETTES, I saw an advertisement, by JOHN COLE, of the Parish of St. Peters, in the County of Northumberland, stating, that I had either departed out of the Province, or kept concealed within the same, with an intent to defraud him of his just dues, which is all a falsehood, for I have neither been out of the Province or kept concealed, and I have Mr. J. COLE's receipt in full, dated the 4th day of September, 1820. JOHN LAWRENCE.
