

the country, to make a calculation on the principle of the Parabola, who sent us the following communication :
Mr. NEVILLS.

"I have taken the angle of elevation of the course of the boiler, after the explosion, with as much accuracy as possible, and find it to be 50 degrees and 12 min. This elevation, by the common rules of Projectiles, makes 105 feet 6 inches, the perpendicular height of the boiler, in the vertex of the Parabola, and the time of its flight in describing the curve, from the point of projection to the place of its fall, 5 seconds and three quarters, the distance between the two points, being, by actual measurement, 352 feet."

TRADE BETWEEN ENGLAND AND CANADA.

Many of the principal towns in England and Scotland, interested in the Trade of Canada, have presented Petitions to the House of Commons, praying that a law be passed to permit the free and unrestricted importation of Grain and Flour, the produce of the Canadas, into Great Britain and Ireland. A bill to this effect would, no doubt, excite the jealousy of the English Landholders, and call forth a more vigorous opposition, than, were they fully acquainted with the circumstances of Canada, they might think it worth while to exert.

The late alterations which have taken place in our trade, are as yet but partially felt. Ships have arrived as usual (though in diminished numbers) to carry off our Timber—our farmers, though burthened already with the useless produce of their labours, have still ploughed their lands and sown their seed, and our merchants have enabled them to do so, by supplying their immediate wants, and relieving them of a part of that produce in exchange for their merchandize, and this they have done in the hope that either the British markets will open to us notwithstanding the existing restrictions, or that these restrictions will be removed, and that England will be content to receive the only payment we have to offer for the manufactures and other goods with which she supplies us. If this hope prove fallacious—if every outlet for our produce is to continue shut against us, Agriculture and Commerce will in the end be totally ruined, and the Country must return to its original barbarism. These are not vain nor fanciful speculations, but truths, plain to the common sense of every man who will take the trouble to consider them, and we feel well assured, that if they were represented in their true light, and through the proper channel, to the British Parliament, they would not be disregarded. It is not from the querulous paltry Petition of a few Merchants engaged in a Grain Speculation, that we are to expect relief, nor from the Petition of any one class amongst us, but from the united remonstrances of the whole community, every individual of which is alike a sufferer. It is the duty of our Representatives, as such to convey the general sense of their Constituents, and to plead for the interests of the Country, to shew that she has been drained of her last and only resources, and that if all relief is denied, bankruptcy and ruin must be the inevitable consequences.

Were such a representation to take place, we have no right to believe that it would be unsuccessful, or that England has so long protected and cherished these Colonies, aims to crush them at last.—Quebec Gazette.

FREDERICTON, (N. B.)

7TH AUGUST, 1821.

The grant of 280,000£ proposed in the House of Commons on the 28th of May for the Civil Contingencies, was objected to by several of the Hon. Members on account of there being included in that sum 43,000£ for defraying the expenses incurred in the late trial of Her Majesty. Mr. Bennet said, "He considered it shameful to charge the people with the payment of that which they reprobated and detested. On the present occasion he thought the House would do well to imitate the conduct pursued by their ancestors at the time of the Revolution. They had voted that the expense of the infamous prosecution in the time of James, should be paid out of the estates of those who had instituted and carried them on. He, for one, would support the same principle, and make the estates of Ministers liable for the expense of those proceedings with respect to the Queen, which they had originated." The grant for 280,000£ was carried by a majority of 29.

A detachment of the 62d Regiment sailed for Cape Breton from Halifax on the 26th ultimo, and on the 27th, a detachment of the 74th for Newfoundland.

St. Andrews, July 24.

A small field, belonging to Mr. C. CAMPBELL, in the Town Plot of Saint Andrews, 160 feet by 130, (less than half an acre,) was mowed on Monday the 9th instant, and produced 4945 lbs. or 2 tons 4 cwt. 0 qrs. 17 lb. of well made clover and herds grass.

This field had been planted with potatoes for six years, and was laid down into grass (for the first time) last season.—The manure used upon it was a covering of sea weed in the Fall.

This is a convincing proof that our land only requires proper cultivation, to be equally productive with that of our Neighbours, as it is well known the soil of Saint Andrews is naturally a bed of cold, stiff clay.
