EDINBURGH, AUGUST 12.

A most distressing accident occurred this forenoon, about 10 o'clock, on the Castle Hill, from the falling of a range of scaffolding on the north side of the parade ground, which was in an unfinished state. It was crowded with spectators to the number of 900 or 1000, who assembled to witness the procession which was to take place on the removing of the Regalia from the Castle, when it gave way instantaneously. The scene that now presented itself is beyond our power to describe. We saw a poor soldier lying between two planks, his eyes staring from their sockets, and with his hands protruding; a boy with a wound in his head that would have adorned a hand; another with his brains protruding, and a fine young lady had the whole side of her head crushed off. Among the fallen planks we counted about a dozen teeth that had been knocked out of the jaws of some unfortunate persons: 14 or 15 persons were carried into the castle, with broken legs, arms, &c. and 15 or 20 to the shops of different medical men near the spot. We have heard it reported that three are already dead: another report says that five have died.

AUGUST 16.

CEREMONIAL

OF THE RECEPTION OF HIS MAJESTY KING GEORGE IV. ON THE SCOTTISH LAND.

From nine to ten o'clock yesterday morning, the various persons appointed to form the procession began to assemble, pursuant to notice in the Gazette, in Queen Street. Every thing seemed to augur well for the ensuing ceremony. The morning was remarkably fine, and ample time was allowed for every one to assume his proper station for duty or for amusement.

On the platform at Leith, ready to receive the King, were assembled, the Duke of Dorset, the Earl of Fife, dressed as a Spanish Grandee, the Marquis of Lothian, the Earl of Cathcart, Lord Charles Paget; the Presidents of the Supreme Courts, viz. the Lord Chief Baron, the Lord Justice Clerk, Lord President, the Lord Chief Commissioner—all in their robes of office, and attended by their respective maces; the Lord Clerk Register.

The Magistrates of Leith, the Admiral of the Port, with Drs. Robertson and Dickson, two clergymen of South Leith.

At a few minutes past 12, a Royal salute was fired; the Royal Yacht came in sight, and immediately the Marquis of Lothian, Lord Paget, and Sir Thomas Bradford took their stations on the gangway. The Yacht moored—and the moment His Majesty set his foot on Scottish soil, Sir Thomas kneeled, and made a low obeisance.—The other Noblemen made suitable reverences. His Majesty then uncovered, and took hold of Sir Thomas's hand, and was conducted up the steps of the gangway, at the top of which he was met by Mr. Secretary Peel. All the other Noblemen on the platform immediately made their obeisance. The Senior resident Magistrate, Mr. Hill, along with the Admiral, welcomed his Majesty; and the Lord Clerk Register spoke a few words, but they were quite inaudible to us.

His Majesty shook hands with him, and also with the Magistrate and Admiral, and most graciously received the salutations of the functionaries. (He seemed considerably affected at the hearty congratulations of his subjects, who displayed their joy by shouts of acclamation, &c.) The King then walked across the path assigned for him, his way being previously strewn with flowers, accompanied by the Duke of Dorset and Secretary Peel, and Lord Paget. On his way he noticed the Earl of Elgin, who commanded the Archers, with whom he cordially shook hands. He was then conducted to his carriage; the Duke of Dorset, and Sir Charles Paget took their stations on the opposite seat.—His Majesty remained in his carriage for about five minutes, and appeared to be greatly affected with the enthusiastic loyalty and animated delight of the myriads of spectators around the quay. The cavalcade then moved forwards, and fell in with the procession, previously arranged in Bernard Street.

His Majesty was dressed in a rich uniform having a sprig of the thistle and the heather in his hat.

As soon as his Majesty got into his carriage, the procession began to remove on its return. The Royal Company of Archers attended on each side of his Majesty's carriage, and the Glengary Highlanders on the outside of them.

BARRIER.

When the procession had proceeded a short way up Leith Walk the Usher of the White Rod, supported by Marchmont the Islay Herald, preceded by two State trumpeters, and attended by two Pursuivants, advanced to give the summons to the city in such times as to prevent the procession being stopped until the barrier was opened. When within sixty or seventy yards of the barrier, a flourish of trumpets was given,—a second at about thirty yards distant, and a third when they reached the barrier—Marchmont, herald, was here directed to summon the city, which he did by giving three knocks on the barrier, when the Chamberlain of the city (who in the right of his office keeps the keys,) desired to know his commands. The herald replied, that his most gracious Majesty, King George the IVth, had landed on a visit to Scotland, was approaching, and he was warranted to demand an entrance for the King into his ancient city of Edinburgh. The Chamberlain having conveyed the summons to the Lord Provost, the gate was by his authority opened, when they advanced to the Ld. Provost, and Marchmont Herald presented himself before the Lord Provost, and said—My Lord—I have the honour of announcing to your Lordship, the very near approach of your most gracious Sovereign the King, to visit this his most loyal and ancient capital of Scotland; and I am commanded to request admittance to the city for himself and retinue.—The Lord Provost expressed his readiness to comply with the demand, and immediately ordered the gates to be thrown open to admit the King.—The Usher of the White Rod, took off his hat, and made his obeisance, when the whole party reined back and retired to their places in the procession, which now entered the city.

When the carriage of the King entered within the Barrier, the whole procession halted, the Magistrates being in waiting on the south side of the street, stood in the following order, with their front presented to the left side of the Royal Carriage.

Old Bailie Mackenzie.	Old Bailie Anderson.
Old Bailie Waddell.	Old Bailie Child.
Old Treasurer Lovel.	Old Dean of Guild Smile.
Merchant Councillor.	Merchant Councillor.
Trades Councillor.	Trades Councillor.

Ordy. Council Deacons.	Ordy. Council Deacons.
Extraordinary Council Deacons.	Extraordinary Council Deacons.
Mace.	Sword.

Bailie Tho. Blackwood and John Lyall.	Bailie A. Henderson and J. Smith.
Treasurer Dickson.	Dean of Guild Anderson.
Chamberlain Turnbull.
Clerk C. Bell.	Clerk C. Cunningham.
Assessors Mr. J. Simpson.	Assessors J. Lang.

The Lord Provost, Magistrates, and others, formed behind the Sword and Mace, and advanced through the opening forward by the double line of old Magistrates, Deacons, and Councillors, to the royal carriage; the door of which was thrown open, and the King stood up to receive them.—Having advanced with three reverences, the Lord Provost made a short speech of congratulation, and kneeling, presented the ancient silver keys of the city. His Majesty was graciously pleased to make a suitable reply, and redelivered the Keys to the Lord Provost, who, with the Magistrates, retired to their carriages, and took their places in the Procession, which then moved forward to Holyroodhouse.

HOLYROODHOUSE.

That part of the palace which was open for the ceremony is handsomely fitted up. The presence room, in the west end of which is the Throne, is worthy of our great and good King; the walls are covered with scarlet cloth, a large mirror covers the east, and the Thorne and canopy the west end.

Peals of cannon announced his Majesty's descent from his coach; and the King was received by the Duke of Hamilton, the Duke of Montrose, Lord Melville, &c.

On the King being seated on the Throne the Knight Marshall and his two Esquires bearing the Regalia, advanced, making three reverences.—The Knight Marshall then, on his knee presented the Crown; and the Deputy Lord Lion of Scotland, by the King's Command, summoned the Duke of Hamilton to receive it, on his knee.—The Knight Marshall then received the Sceptre and presented it in like manner. The Sword of State was then presented and delivered to the Earl of Erroll, on the right hand of the King.—Immediately afterwards, the Duke of Montrose announced the Lord Provost and Magistrates of Edinburgh, attending with an Address; which was read by Mr. Crichton, the city clerk.—To which his Majesty made a suitable reply. The King then entered his carriage amidst the loudest cheers, and proceeded with an escort of the Scots Greys to Dalkeith.

MONDAY, AUG. 19.

His Majesty arrived at the Palace at 4 before 2 on Saturday last; having been only 19 minutes on the road between Dalkeith and Holyrood House.

His Majesty was dressed in a full suit of the Royal Stewart Tartan, to receive his numerous visitors.

The entire room was filled with the different officers of the Household, and those of the civil, naval and military departments: About the throne were the Duke of Montrose, Marquis of Conyngham, Lord Melville, Lord G. Beresford, &c. &c.

[Here follows a list of several hundred Noblemen, Officers and Gentlemen, who were presented to his Majesty.]

Addresses were presented to his Majesty, from Aberdeen, Dundee, Stirling, Perth, Greenock, Nairn, Fortrose, Ayr; Corporation of the city of Glasgow, Linlithgow, Leith, Selkirk County, Caithness &c; numerous other places and different institutions.

The illuminations and fire works on Friday night were indeed much too superb to
