- 4 Small do.
- 2 Grapnels with chains,
- 2 Long ladders,
- 2 Short do.
- 2 Axes, and a Saw.

Considerations on the prevailing custom of visiting on Sundays.

The sentiments here offered against the prevailing custom of profaning the Sabbath, will probably be a satisfaction to every serious reader, and be productive of much good; especially as it is in every body's power to inform one, and as then his own conduct will be a tacit reproof of his acquaintance, who may probably, through his example, be induced to weigh those proceedings attentively, and no longer follow a multitude to do evil. It is certainly a matter of importance to inquire whether Sunday visits are justifiable upon the principles of scripture and of reason? as the conscientious observation of the Sabbath has of late years been so much disregarded; and as it is now become the principal day of visiting among persons of all ranks.

The chief advocates for the continuance of such a practice, should, methinks, defend it publicly, that their arguments may be properly examined, if (in their opinion) such a custom can admit of any rational defence,—and those who are sufficiently convinced by what is here advanced, should resolve to discontinue Sunday visits themselves, and discontinue them in others, as far as they can consistently with decency and prudence. That the number of such well-disposed persons may be daily increasing, is undoubtedly the hearty wish of every one who is sincerely desirous of promoting the glory of God, and the good of mankind.

Quere.—Whether it be right for truly-serious persons to visit on Sundays?

The persons here mentioned are truly serious. As to many people it matters not whether they are at home or abroad: God is not in all their thoughts; they have no concern for their eternal welfare; they therefore are in every place, altogether and alike unprofitable.

But when we begin to discern the things that are excellent; when we sincerely desire to obtain salvation, with eternal Glory, by Jesus Christ; then whether it be proper to fall into the prevailing custom of visiting on Sundays, is the question.

Were our companions religious, and was our conversation edifying, I should make no scruple to give my voice in the affirmative. Every parlour would then be a little sanctuary; would echo back the exhortations, and second the designs of the Pulpit; and we might truly say, "It is good for us to be here."

But, alas! where do we find such company? where do we hear such conversation? The general conversation is all impertinence; not so much as seasoned with a spirit of religion—"They talk of vanity every one with his neighbour."—Psal. xiii. 2. For which reason, I cannot think it safe or expedient, allowable or innocent, habitually to visit on Sundays. It is inconsistent with the best example. "I was in the Spirit on the Lord's day," says St. John.—I was filled with the communications of the Holy Spirit, gave me clear views of Christ, bright hopes of Glory, and shedding abroad the love of God in my heart.

But is this compatible with the idle, trifling, insignificant chat, which engrosses our ordinary visits?

LONDON, JAN. 5.

A circumstance of much importance has been communicated to us, and which we are assured, is a fact that may be relied on. It is this—the seven men under sentence of death, in the county of Limerick, have made an offer to induce their friends, the deluded peasantry, to give up 1,100 stand of arms, on Wednesday, (this day,) at Rathkeale. If such an important occurrence really takes place, immediate application will, of course, be made to Government in their behalf.

The Norwich Mercury says—We have heard the most upright and intelligent of our Norfolk farmers maintain, that there is not a patch of land in the county that in the present state of affairs can afford a shilling for rent.

In Sussex, (particularly in the eastern part of it,) the farmers are, in a very deplorable condition. Several of them who rented large portions of land and who have been reputed wealthy, have, within these few weeks, failed to an immense amount; one it is said, for £20,000. A second meeting of the Agriculturists of Sussex will shortly take place.

On Saturday a Court of Directors was held at the East India House, when Lieut. Gen. the Hon. Sir E. Paget, G. C. B. was appointed provisionally Commander-in-Chief of all the Company's Forces in India, and second member of Council in Bengal, on the death, resignation, or coming away of General the Marquis of Hastings.

An opponent has at length entered the lists against the Constitutional Association, and bids defiance to their utmost efforts, the Six Acts, or to any Acts that ever have been, or ever can be passed. This opponent is no less a personage than Waddington, of Radical notoriety—the eloquent and successful little Waddy, who has entered "Carlisle's Temple," where he officiates as the High Priest, and has commenced upon a system which augurs difficulties innumerable in the way of future attacks from the Association, and ever bids fair to defeat the united efforts of the two indefatigable Societies. The plan of publication adopted is this:—At the back of the shop is a partition, in the centre of which is a small box, somewhat like those of the cheque-takers at the Theatres. The person desirous of making a purchase of any forbidden work taps at the door, "What do you want?" demands a voice from within. The name of the work is then mentioned; and the purchaser puts down the money for it in the box. A door closes over it and opens again, when the particular publication is found in the box. No one is seen or can be identified.
