Or the Nun of Canada.

Containing Scenes from real Life.

*The moral world
Which though to us it seems perplex'd moves on
In higher order, fitted and impell'd,
By wisdom's finest hand, and issuing
In universal good.*—THOMSON.

NO Country presents more interesting subjects for the pen of a Novelist, than Canada. The romantic scenery, the history, and feudal character of the early colonists, their peculiar institutions and customs, the state of society, the habits and manners of religious orders, the Noblesse and Peasantry, derived from their ancestral connexion with France, and their own colonial circumstances, and modified by the introduction of British Laws, examples and intercourse, in consequence of the cession of the Province to Great Britain, afford ample and appropriate material for a Novel.

In the work offered for publication, the author has drawn fully from these sources. He has laid the main plot in Canada, extending it, however, to connect incidents and situations in France and England. His outlines are filled with the touches of a master. The manuscript has been perused by Critics of good taste, who think the performance cannot fail to gratify the lovers of moral tales exhibiting scenes, characters and occurrences of real life.

This native production of the Country is now offered to the patronage of the public, upon the following terms:

To be printed in two Volumes 12mo on good paper, and bound neatly in boards at 8s. 6d. the 2 volumes.

Subscriptions received by W. REYNOLDS, Bookseller, St. John, and at this Office. Persons desirous of procuring a copy of the abovementioned work, should make no delay, as the lists are to be returned to the Herald Office, in Kingston, U. C. on or before the 10th day of August next.

Addressed to the Moon, in Eclipse

Fredericton, 22nd July, 1823.

WHAT ails thee mournful Planet? why thus clad?

Darkness fast hov'ring o'er thy features sad,
A deathlike paleness trembling thro' the shade,
Ah—lovely lamp—thou'rt dying—I'm afraid!
Or has thy zealous neighbour, envious earth,
Aspir'd to rival thee of higher birth!
High in the heavens thou wast ordain'd to hang,
When two great lights from Light Eternal sprang,
Now shall this grow'ling Planet crowd between
The God of Day, and Night's majestic Queen?
From childhood's fanciful, but happy dreams,
I've gaz'd with transport on thy magic beams;
Although I've never vainly sought to pry
In nature's laws with Astronomic eye,
But glowing fancy taught my soul to admire,
And grasp the shade of each alluring fire,
Whether thou'rt water, land, or painted air,
Or heated substance, I but little care;
A beauteous something—and thy charms have long
Enliven'd and refin'd poetic song.

Dear, faithful, Guardian—while I've wander'd, still

Thou hast pursu'd—to duty taught my will;
With social smiles, have often stoop'd to hear,
Some valued friend my meditations cheer,
Then, with kind sympathy, turn pale to see,
The melting tear that spake—farewell—to me.

I have not lost thee in the tide of time;
Up different mountains I have seen thee climb;
I've met thee, creeping through the dark-green
trees,

That softly whisper'd ev'ning's solemn breeze;
I've watch'd thee sleeping on the silver stream,
And caught each tender soul-composing beam,
Then ey'd thee glitt'ring on the broader breast
Of deeper waters, till thou sank to rest.

When wrong'd, and griev'd—as sleep forsook
my eyes,

I've mark'd thy path thro' lonsome, midnight
skies;

When none but Heaven and Thee have heard me
say,

Oh! righteous God—direct my doubtful way:
The right confirm—let thine unerring will
Dismiss the wrong, and virtues there instil;
Then thy pure rays, gleam'd on with soothing
balm,

And joy'd to witness there, a holy calm.

Ah! mournful Goddess—canst thou charm no more?

No!—total darkness shades thy beauties o'er;
Prophetic colouring—stain'd with dismal red—
Chills all my blood, and shakes my frame with dread,

Points to that hour, when trembling stars shall fall,
At the great Angel's loud alarming call,
When thy bright Lord shall hide his frighted head,
And sink in ruins with all Nature's dead.

When other suns, with wand'ring worlds shall clash,

And wildly flame, with the last lightning's flash;
When the destroying Angel takes his stand,
One foot on roaring sea and one on quaking land,
With holy hands, rais'd high as Heaven, to swear
By Him that lives and reigns forever there,
With fearful emphasis, and awful zeal,
That time shall stop her burning rapid wheel.

No more—reflections great my soul o'erpower:
Save, save me, righteous Judge, in that approaching hour.
