MARRIED] At Beaubair's Island, Miramichi, on the 19th ult. by the Revd. Mr. Bacon, Alexander Fraser, Sen. Esq. of that place, to Miss Elizabeth Gregg, of London.

At Honon, on the 16th inst., by the Revd. Mr. Wright, John Whidden, Esquire, Barrister at Law, to Miss Lavinia Chipman.

DIED] On the 15th June, at his Seat, Most Noble the Marquis of Salisbury.

Mr. LUGRIN,

At a time when there is great and well-founded alarm, that the Small Pox, of a very virulent nature, are spreading in different parts of the Province, the publishing of the following testimonies in favour of Vaccination, by the Medical Colleges of Edinburgh and Dublin, may tend to calm the Public mind with respect to those who have already been vaccinated, as well as to induce those who have not been so, to lose no time, but as soon as possible to procure inoculation.

J. S.
Physicians Hall, Edinburgh,
26th Nov. 1806.

Gentlemen,

The Royal College of Physicians of Edinburgh, have but little opportunity themselves of making observations on Vaccination, as that practice is entirely conducted by Surgeon-Apothecaries, and other Medical Practitioners, not of their College, and as the effects produced by it are so inconsiderable and slight, that the aid of a Physician is never required.

The College knew that in Edinburgh it is universally approved of by the Profession and the higher and middle ranks of the community, and that it has been much more generally adopted by the lower orders of the people than ever the inoculation for small pox was, and they believe the same to obtain over all Scotland.

With regard to any causes which have hitherto prevented its general adoption, they are acquainted with none except the negligence or ignorance of Parents among the common people, or their mistaken ideas of the impropriety or criminality of being accessory to the production of any disease among their children, or the difficulty or impossibility in some of our country districts of procuring vaccine matter, or a proper person to inoculate.

The evidence in favour of vaccine inoculation appeared to the Royal College of Physicians of Edinburgh, so strong and decisive, that in May last they spontaneously and unanimously elected Dr. Jenner an honorary Fellow of their College;—a mark of distinction which they very rarely confer, and which they confine almost exclusively to foreign Physicians of the first eminence.

They did this with a view to publish their opinion with regard to vaccination, and in testimony of their conviction of the immense benefits which have been, and which will in future be derived to the world from inoculation for the cow pox, and as a mark of their sense of Dr. Jenner's very great merits and ability in introducing and improving this invaluable practice.

I have the honour to be,
Gentlemen,
Your most obedient humble servant,
TH. SPENS, C. R. M. Ed. Pr.
To the Royal College of Physicians
of London.

The following extract from an Ipswich paper of January last, may serve as an additional and convincing proof of the unostentatious charity of our late lamented Governor:—

Sir Robert Pocklington, Knt. and Wm. Fowke, Esq. gave each their annual donation of 1lb. of beef and bread to the poor of Chellesworth; Major-Gen. Smyth, also, who resides in America, but has a farm in that parish, gave a good dinner of beef, beer and bread, to all the Sunday Scholars and their Parents, distributed two chaldrons of coals amongst the poorest and largest families, and gave a benefaction of Ten Pounds towards the erection of the new bridge in that parish, the further sum of Seventeen Pounds, to pay the highway rates and compositions of the small occupiers of lands, &c. which would otherwise have been very heavy and oppressive to them, who were obliged to pay 2s. 6d. in the pound last year for that purpose.

At a Special Session of the Peace of our Lord the King, holden at the County Court House in Fredericton, in and for the County of York, on Monday the 11th day of August, 1823.

ORDERED, That from and after Wednesday the 19th inst. the ASSIZE OF BREAD in the Town of Fredericton be as follows:

Most respectfully addressed to the celebrated
Dentist; the great Preserver and Restorer of Female beauty.

We hail thee welcome—Artist of renown!
Thy name become immortal by this Town:
Her race of Beauties high shall raise thy fame,
And justly strive to Deify thy name.
Exert thy skill—convert us all to youth,
Nail fast in mouths decay'd, the wholesome tooth,
White, beautiful, and smooth—friend of the Fair,
How shall we all our gratitude declare?
Tear out the fell-tale stumps—the yellow race—
What pain so great as beauty in disgrace?
Twist in the golden wires—no pain we feel—
Lost charms restor'd, the wounds will quickly heal;
Our Ivory, then, we'll shew with graceful laugh;
And never tell they once adorn'd the Calf!
When e'er we wish to live them over white,
Just clean them well, and lay them by at night.
Asleep—one does n't care to look so well,
They're ready in the morning—who can tell?
A well-bred person would not be so rude;
On our retirement surely to intrude;
And as for servants—should they chance to chat,
Who'd be so foolish as to notice that?
Or who, at Church, at Balls, or Plays, would dare,
With vulgar rudeness, in our mouths to stare?
And if they should, the shining pins and wire,
Would tempt them the new fashion to admire.
They'd ask, for such a set how much we paid;
And quite dislike their own, that nature made.
But then—dear Dentist—after this is done,
The work of kindness is but well begun.
You know the bleaching, chilling snows of time;
Are ever falling in this Northern clime,
Over our well-dress'd heads have car'd to stray,
And turn'd our charming locks a little grey!
By this our Lovers might suppose we're old,
And not consider that the climate's cold.
With friendly hand—Oh! friend of Beauty—tear,
Deep from its root, this busy-falling hair.
Teach love's soft ringlets o'er our necks to flow,
Thou must transplant them, like the teeth, we know.

The artificial locks we often use,
Does not display a richness so profuse,
Ever deficient of that pleasing grace,
The native charm, which shades an artless face.
Another favour we would ask of you:
The roses on our cheeks seem dying too;
But not so much to time we charge this stealth,
As to the sad reverse of peace and health.
The rigour of the climate, as was said,
Bleaches and turns the pretty auburn head;
Sudden transitions from the cold to heat,
Those foes to beauty, here again we meet.
Sol's envious beams, in this destructive Town,
Changes our fine complexions to the brown;
The harmless Rouge—the fair-improving dye,
In Towns like this we cannot always buy,
When purchas'd, oft is deem'd less soft and sweet,
The smile of approbation fails to meet.
They say the adopted blush does not declare,
Nor contradict that modest worth is there.
But Beauty will criticize, do what we will,
'Tis hard—when every art's to please them still,
Great Beauty Maker!—try if thou canst peel
The shallow outside, and new charms reveal;
Remove the furrow'd covering quite away,
For underneath is far superior clay;
Collect the wand'ring blood, and make it glow,
It shall remain where beauty ought to glow,
But oh—our orbs of love—once so divine!
Lamented truth!—do now forget to shine.
What can be done?—we ask, entreat, and bribe,
For this misfortune—Man of skill prescribe.
Our friend—restorer—hast thou not in store
Some brilliant glittering gem, unseen before?
Those fading Lamps tend from their sockets quite,
Replace those fires that once inspir'd delight.
And now, we humbly ask one favour more:
Our languid hearing quickly to restore,
Or all is lost, though thousands should admire,
And beauty's fame should set the world on fire,
If the dull, torpid, careless, lazy ear,
Cannot the sounds of adoration hear;
Swift through the sleeping porches clear the way,
The enchanting music to our souls convey;
Then let us bloom a thousand centuries more,
To see and hear the doating throng adore.
Yes! by thy art, complete we'll proudly bloom
And mock the threats of the insulting Tomb!

Written by a Lady, a little past the blooming age of seventeen, and scarcely arrived to the sober years of seventy-seven. How much nearer the last number than the first, it does not become politeness to enquire.

CHARLES RATH,
DENTIST.
