HOUSE OF COMMONS, June 20.

On the motion of Sir G. Cockburn, the London Bridge Bill was read a third time, after an ineffectual resistance on the part of the Lord Mayor, in which his Lordship was supported but by 10 members against 71.

Mr. Brougham put a question to the Right Hon. Secretary for Foreign Affairs, upon the subject of a rumour, generally prevalent, that the Members of the Holy Alliance had withdrawn their Ministers from the Court of Stuttgart, in consequence of the King of Wirtemberg's neglect to suppress the Carbonari.

Mr. Canning admitted that he had heard a report upon the subject, but treated it as one which interested the British Government merely as spectators.

This doctrine was vehemently contested by Mr. Brougham.

JUNE 23.

Mr. Hume opposed the grant of £5,000 for propagating the scriptures in North America. The grant was, however, carried by a majority of 49 to 29.

Mr. Wilnot Horton then moved a grant of £15,000 to encourage emigration to Canada from the south of Ireland. This motion gave rise to a discussion of some length, in which Sir John Newport objected to the sum proposed as inadequate. Mr. Abercromby hinted that it might lead to unreasonable and injurious expectations; and Mr. D. Browne suggested that the money might be better laid out in the encouragement of manufactures, more particularly the linen.

Mr. Peel explained, in reply, to Sir J. Newport's suggestion, that the present grant was merely an experiment; and Mr. Ricardo answered Mr. Browne, by observing upon the folly of meddling with commerce, by legislative enactments, and upon the injustice of taxing one part of the empire to provide capital for another. The grant was agreed to, as were also some other grants.

The House of Commons has been occupied with Irish questions nearly throughout the whole week.

On Tuesday the Irish Insurrection Act was read a second time, after a debate of some length, in which all the Members who spoke, (Mr. Denman alone excepted), admitted the necessity of the measure; but Sir Henry Parnell, and some others, demanded a select Committee on the affairs of Ireland, as a necessary preliminary. Wednesday, Mr. Hume proposed his motion, to abolish the Vice Regal Government in Ireland, which also gave rise to a long debate; and last night Mr. Brougham moved that a petition, complaining of the mal-administration of Justice in Ireland, should be referred to a Grand Committee upon Courts of Justice; the debate on this question exceeded in length and animation all that had preceded; but like the motions of Sir H. Parnell, and Mr. Hume, Mr. Brougham's proposition was rejected by the House.

Whatever may be thought of the merits of the particular propositions agitated, there can be no doubt that the late discussion of Irish affairs cannot be otherwise than beneficial. A country wanting the advantage of a resident Legislature has the strongest claim to attention; and through the liberal admission of every apology for inquiry alone can a country, circumstanced as Ireland is, receive the attention which she requires.

Extract of a letter from General Pepe, dated Lisbon, May 30.—“You will be surprised to learn that the Prince D. Miguel, son of the King, revolted at the head of two regiments. Yesterday, General Sepulveda went over with another regiment. The Provinces are in complete revolt. I am in the midst of treachery and infamy. However, this morning the national guards came to me, demanding that I should put myself at their head. What contrast between their conduct and that of the Chiefs; I shall remain in this city so long as there is a breath of Portuguese liberty.

“The 30th, in the evening—I resume my pen to tell you, that ‘even the King has joined the factions!’ All is lost!—The marine has also revolted!”

LONDON, JULY 5.

MADRID, JUNE 23.—All perfectly tranquil here.

Gen. Molitor, pursues his success in dispersing the troops of Ballasteros.

The following are the principal articles of a decree promulgated by the Regency on the 22d of June:—

Art. 1. An accurate list shall be made out of the members of the present Cortes, of the members of the pretended Regency elected at Seville, and of the Ministers and officers of the volunteer militia of Madrid and Seville, who ordered the removal of the King from Seville to Cadiz, and who supplied the means to carry it into effect.

2. The personal property of the individuals inscribed on the said list shall be forthwith sequestered, until it shall be otherwise ordained.

3. The Members of the Cortes who have adhered to the deliberation, pronouncing the deposition of the King, are, by this fact alone, declared guilty of high treason, and the punishment adjudged by the laws against this crime shall be enforced towards them on simple proof of identity.

4. Those who shall effectually contribute to the deliverance of the King shall be exempted from the above enactments, and they shall, besides, be suitably and honorably recompensed.

5. The Generals and Officers of the troops of the line, and Militia, who have attended the King to Cadiz, are declared personally responsible for the lives of their Majesties and Royal Highnesses, and they are liable to be cited before the Council of War, and tried as accomplices in any violence done to the members of the Royal Family, and which it was in their power to prevent.

A letter from Deal, dated June 30, says—“Came down from the River and sailed, the Prince Regent and Royal Sovereign yachts, for Cowes, to attend on his Majesty.”
