By Command, GEO. SHORE, Adj. Gen. M. Forces

Capt Sir GEO. COLLIER, of the Royal Navy, put a period to his existence, in March last, by cutting his throat. It is said that in consequence of the great agitation of mind caused by the publication of a Work called 'James's Naval History' (a passage of which went to throw a slur on the character of Sir George) he became deranged, and that that circumstance alone caused him to commit the dreadful act.

His Excellency Sir T. Maitland, died at Malta on the 7th of January last.

The Mail arrived here on Saturday last.

We understand that the Lieutenant Governors of the Provinces, are in future to receive a certain Salary in lieu of Fees.--Hal Journal.

MARRIED] On Saturday evening last, by the Rev. GEO. BEST, Mr. ISAAC H. C. COX, to Miss ELOISA LAMB, both of this place.

Died, at the Grand Lake, Queens County, on the 22d ult after a short illness, in the 62d year of her age, Mrs. ANN, wife of JUSTUS EARLE, Esquire: leaving a numerous family and a large circle of friends and acquaintance, to lament their loss.

At St. John on the 16th inst. in her 54th year, Mrs. ISABELLA, wife of WM. DONALD, Esquire.

At St. Martin's, Mr. WM. FOWNES. At the same place, on the 14th inst. Mr. RUBEN VAIL, Shipwright of that place.

JOHN PHELON.

Miramichi, 25th April, 1824.

PLYMOUTH, March 20.

Some recent accounts from the Peninsula, state that the greatest ferment prevails in every part of Spain. Merino has declared himself against the Government, and at the head of 4000 men in Segovia, he has set at defiance the orders of Ferdinand. In a town near Segovia, he took prisoners all the Royalist volunteers, and after giving them a collar each, he discharged them, saying, "that they ought to take arms against the foreign invaders of their country." This Priest was a determined enemy to the Emperor Napoleon, and never ceased his labours so long as a Frenchman occupied his country. At the latest advices from Madrid, several French regiments had marched from that city in quest of him.

LONDON, March 24.

Letters received from our squadron at Algiers (via Marseilles), dated March 2, state that the Dey had renewed his engagements with Admiral Sir Harry Neal, not to make Christian Captives, and to abide by the treaty made by Lord Exmouth. Sir H. Neale was in consequence about to return to Malta, with the Revenge, Naiad, &c. The Dey's treatment of the Spanish prisoners has been extraordinary. To each sailor he has given the range of the town, and 5 sous per day for his support. The French Consul at Algiers has also given 5 sous per day to the common sailors, and 10 to the captains.

NEW YORK MAY 7.

Our French papers received by the Don Quixote, contain intelligence from Constantinople, Feb. 24. stating that the Vice-Roy of Egypt had declared himself independent of the Grand Seignior. This is very important news, if true. The character of this chieftain, his intelligence, activity, and high military name, would naturally lead us to expect that he would avail himself of the first good opportunity to throw off the Turkish yoke, and assume the rank and station of an independent sovereign. And perhaps, the present is as favourable a moment as he could expect. The Ottoman power is weak, poor, and to a considerable degree exhausted by its late efforts for its own preservation against the threats of Russia on the one hand, and the Greek insurrection on the other. Unable as the Sublime Porte is to carry on the conflict successfully with the latter, the addition of another insurgent foe will have a tendency to distract its counsels, and destroy its remaining energy. From Egypt the Turks expected assistance in their warfare against the Greeks. If instead they should meet with a bold, active, and determined foe, it will add much to their difficulties, and naturally tend to dishearten them.

That the news may prove to be true is our most cordial wish;--for if so, we shall consider it as decisive of Greek emancipation.
