NEW-YORK, February 4.

GREECE.—The Oriental Spectator, received at Boston, by the brig Nile, has a variety of articles relative to the operations of the Turks and the Greeks. It is pretended on the part of the former, that they have been successful in the island of Candia, and have defeated the latter, killing and wounding 5000 men—that in Canæ the Turks having been reinforced by troops from Egypt, left their fortifications, had repeated actions with the Greeks, in all of which they were successful, and took five villages, where they made two or three thousand prisoners, whom they had conducted to Canæ. The paper of the latest date re-asserts these accounts, as it states on further information, but says that they have been positively contradicted by the Greeks. It is added, that in the latest accounts, the Greeks at Hydra admit that their countrymen in Candia had met with the disasters above stated, but that subsequently those who had retreated to the mountains redescended, attacked the Turks, and after slaying many hundreds, compelled them again to retire within their fortifications. The Smyrna editor admits the truth probably is that the Turks finding nothing more to combat, had retired to their fortified places with their booty, and that the Greeks had again taken possession of the plains. But these accounts of the Spectator must be received with great caution, as the source from whence they emanate is well known to be entirely hostile to the cause of the Greeks. Passing over these exaggerated accounts, however, we proceed to those which we find in the London papers. A letter from Zante, published in a subsequent column, confirms the capture of Corinth by the Greeks. According to letters from Trieste a report prevails that the Greek Government have addressed to the Cabinets of Vienna, London, and St. Petersburg, an important Note, in which they demand of these Powers to recognize the political independence of Greece, which, it is supposed, will oblige the Porte to renounce all further attempts to have that nation under its power.

ENGLAND.—The British Traveller intimates that the recent visit of Lord Liverpool to Lord Grenville, is reported to be connected with a new political arrangement, which is likely to be carried into effect before the meeting of Parliament. It was also rumoured among the public offices that a partial change is about to take place in the administration, which is to be reinforced by the Marquess of Hertford.

Mr. Secretary Canning, is confined with the gout.

Mina, at the last accounts, had taken up his residence near Taunton. He was waiting the arrival of his wife. He was constantly receiving visits from persons of distinction. Before he left Plymouth, a dinner was given to the gallant General, by the commander in Chief, on the Plymouth station. The Taunton Courier states, that one of the most respectable houses in that town, had received instructions to honor the pecuniary demands of General Mina to any extent.

The good people of England are not losing sight of the cause of the Greeks, At Winchester; and at Cambridge, a public subscription has been headed by a liberal donation from the Chancellor of £100.

Belzoni, the celebrated traveller, is on a tour to Tombuctoo. The Cambridge Chronicle contains some interesting letters from this gentleman, which we shall give hereafter.

The premises of Mr. Benson, grocer, and Mr. Higham, Liverpool, were destroyed by fire on the 14th Dec. damages estimated at £15000.

The Cambridge 80 gun ship, was about to sail from Portsmouth, with the Consuls for the South American States.

A speculation was going on in London, in Mexican Mine Shares, which were selling at a premium of £2 per share of £40.

A very sudden death occurred at Bath on the 9th of Dec. As Mrs. Tudor, a celebrated lady of that city, and who was previously to her marriage, on account of her fortune (£30,000 a year,) and beauty, the toast of Bath, was on her way in her chair to the Italian Opera, she was taken suddenly ill, and desired the chairman to return home with her; but before they could get back to her residence, which is only a short distance, she had expired.

Capt. C. Bullen, is appointed to the African station, in the room of the late Sir R. Mends: he goes out in the Maidstone frigate.

The Hussar frigate Capt. Harris, was to sail immediately, it was supposed, for the West-India Station.

The Jupiter, 60 gun ship will, it is said, on her return from the East Indies be fitted for the flag of Rear Ad. W. Lake, C. B. appointed commander in chief on the North American station.

The Courier states that the officers who are to be appointed to commissions in the regiments of infantry, which are to be raised, will be taken exclusively from the half-pay list.

A gale of wind was experienced at Liverpool, on the 12th of Dec. It was feared vessels on the coast had suffered. The brig Jessie, from Quebec, foundered in a gale at Blackpool. She was first seen about half past one standing at the north, bearing for the Lune. She struggled hard against the storm for some time, but finding all her efforts to get into the Lune or tack about for Liverpool to be in vain, she was at length driven on shore, and struck within one hundred yards from the beach, about half past three P. M. The sea, at this moment, ran tremendously high, with a rising tide, rendering it impossible to afford the least assistance from the shore. About nine o'clock, the tide having ebbed for about three hours, the inhabitants proceeded with carts to succour the unfortunate mariners. On bringing them to land it was found that one of the men was missing; a visit was instantly made to the wreck again, when he was discovered stretched upon the deck a lifeless corpse, having perished with cold, hunger, and fatigue. The mate was washed overboard and was drowned when the vessel first struck upon the sand; the rest of the crew, eleven in number, and two passengers were all saved, and treated with every attention by the people of Blackpool.

PARIS, DEC. 6.

Dr. Castaing was executed to-day, at two o'clock in the Place de Greve. A prodigious crowd had assembled to witness the execution. The prisoner was brought at 5 o'clock this morning, from the Bicetre to Conciergerie, the Prison of the Palace of Justice. About half past one he was brought out to be transported to the place of execution, before the Hotel de Ville. He seemed extremely dejected, his mental resolution appeared overpowered, and his bodily strength entirely prostrate, apparently unable to support himself. He leaned his head on the shoulder of the Priest who accompanied him to administer the consolation of religion. Though the whole of the immense area of the Place de Greve was filled with spectators, and the interest of the public in the demeanour of the unhappy man was excited to the highest degree of intensity, no accident happened, and no other feeling but that of curiosity was manifested. On arriving at the foot of the scaffold he remained some time in deep and earnest prayer with his Confessor. On mounting the scaffold, which he did with faltering footsteps, he looked round upon the assembled multitudes with a dejected countenance, and then casting his eyes to heaven, he remained some moments in deep meditation, and resigned himself to the executioner. On the latter's placing his hand behind his neck, to assist in adjusting his head upon the block, Castaing turned suddenly around and addressed a few words to him, but from the low tone in which he spoke we could not understand their purport. After a few moments passed in awful suspense, the fatal axe rapidly descended, and the unhappy sufferer was thus hurried into the presence of Him who alone knows his real guilt or innocence. Castaing protested his innocence to the last, though with less vehemence than on the delivery of his sentence. The physicians join the rest of the world in ascribing Ballet's death to substances administered by Castaing, but they regret that criminal justice could not, owing to the negligence or ignorance of Pallatin, obtain more satisfactory proofs of the crime.—Beyond his own confessions, contradictions, and admissions, there was confessedly no ground to convict him. Castaing's father has resigned his place under the Govt. His brother had previously given in his commission as Capt. in the Guards. So this man's crimes have ruined as well as disgraced his whole family.
