long afterwards, Brother Jones looked at his wife, and said, "My dear, I feel a strange drowsiness! What can be the meaning of it?" She had never seen any one die, and replied, "My love, I cannot tell." Soon after he cried out, "Come, Lord Jesus, come quickly!" and a few minutes afterwards exclaimed "Glory, glory!"—and blessedly entered into it. Thus he died with his head leaning upon Mrs. Jones. She called to the Captain, but received no answer, for he too, poor man, was dying. For a few minutes she held the remains of her dear husband to her breast; but soon a wave washed him from her unnerved arms, and he fell at her feet. For a few seconds she saw the body floating, and then fell into a state of insensibility. In this state she remained until rescued by Mr. Kentish and Mr. Ashford, two gentlemen, who, on hearing of the wreck through an American Captain, who, it is said passed by at noon, humanely went off without delay to render all the help they could. When she was found, her face was so swelled that her head appeared almost a shapeless mass. On being touched she came to herself, and asked what they were going to do with her? They conveyed her ashore with all possible dispatch, and at the house of Mr. Kentish she met the best of care and medical skill. Dr. Peddie was up with her all the night; bled her two or three times to keep off inflammation, and happily, under God, contrary to his own expectation, saved her life. He told me, that if she had been there two hours longer, nothing could have saved her. That she lives is a great wonder: God only could have preserved her, and to him therefore be the praise. She says, that it appears to her as if boats pulled or sailed towards them a considerable way, and their hopes on such occasions were strongly excited. They now rejoiced over approaching deliverance; but alas! it was joy of but short continuance, for they all either turned back, or passed them unobserved. I asked her if she thought the Brethren who attempted to swim ashore would have lived had they remained on the wreck, and she believes not.

MISTAKES OF THE TYPE.—None but printers know how much mortification printers suffer from frequent and inevitable typographical errors, which escape the most scrutinizing eye, in the hurry in which newspapers are generally put to press. A trifling error, which they themselves perhaps detect one moment too late for correction, brings upon them the imputation of carelessness, and even ignorance, which they are obliged contentedly to bear. We have said all this in extenuation of our own blunders which we have no doubt are very many. These slips of the type are sometimes so ludicrous that the craft cannot help laughing at each other, though it be at the expence of real sympathy. A few years ago a paragraph from a London newspaper went the rounds of the American press, which, after mentioning the impossibility of avoiding errors in a periodical publication, goes on to say:—"One journalist lately stated that a young surgeon (surgeon) having been caught near Lime-house, was sent to Brighton express, where his Majesty was graciously pleased to eat a part of him, roasted, for dinner. This, (adds the writer) has been, time out of mind, a royal dish." We are told, in an account of the re-opening of a Jewish synagogue, that the usual ceremonies were performed by a rabbit of very imposing appearance. A provincial paper tells us that a prisoner was committed in Norwich Castle, for horse-stealing, and adds, "he was sent off to Norwich in a post-chaise, in the custody of a tutey." A metamorphosis as whimsical as either of these was lately made by a compositor in the office of the New-York Evening Post. In publishing a card of thanks, from the captain, passengers and crew of the brig Argo, to a captain who afforded them assistance in distress, the names of the captain and passengers are printed, and following them, in the same imposing capitals, is the name of Andrew Crew instead of and Crew.—Montreal paper.

Murder indicated by a Dream. The following extraordinary circumstance we have heard from the party concerned, James Charles Ware, Esq. of Norfolk:—"About the latter end of Autumn, 1819, I had retired to rest one evening earlier than usual, having invited some friends to supper on the following night. I had slept some hours, when I dreamt that a lady, clothed in a long white robe, rushed into the chamber, and fixing her eyes upon me, with a look of agony, exclaimed, "They will murder him!" and immediately a cry of one in pain fell upon my ear. I awoke, but all was silent through the house. And I again composed myself to slumber. I had scarcely closed my eyes, however, when the same figure gave me the same warning, and the same cry was heard. I started from sleep, and awoke my wife, to whom I related my wonderful dream; but she said it was absurd to pay any attention to such fancies. I again fell asleep, and a third time the same figure appeared, but this time it was all bloody, and whispered, "It is too late! The cries were repeated, and I awoke a third time in a cold sweat; the cry of distress still rung on my waking sense; my wife was also awakened by the noise; conscious that my dream was not a mere illusion, I hastily snatched my pistols from the table, and rushed down stairs. The cry still continued, but not so loud as at first; the sound seemed like the gurgling of blood in the throat. I cocked my pistols, and flew into the kitchen, whence the sound seemed to proceed, when the first object that caught my eye was a wretch, armed with a large knife stained with blood. The man wore no coat, but his sleeves were tucked up to his shoulders, and his arms, face, and shirt, were all covered with blood! I rushed forward and colared the villain: and giving the alarm, the room was immediately filled with servants. I dragged the miscreant to the light, and discovered my own cook. He had been engaged in killing a young pig, which I ordered to be stuffed for supper on the following evening."—Edin. Observer.

Oaths.—At the recent session of Malacca this country, among the ceremonies which took place on the occasion, was the administration of the oaths of allegiance, which displayed a singular diversity of sects and nations. The chief of the Chinese settlers approached an altar with a living cock in his arms, and having gone through a series of prayers, proceeded to cut its throat and to make a libation with its blood, hoping that his own might, in like manner, be poured out, should he ever be wanting in fidelity to his new sovereign. The leader of some Hindoos, who had been naturalized for many generations in Malacca, reverentially approaching the commissioner, swore by the veracity of the priest, the horse, the elephant, the arms, the accoutrements of the soldier, and by the merchandise of the trader, that he and his followers would be faithful; and imprecated the direst curses on the mechanic and servile man who would break the compact. The superior Malayan being a Mahomedan, swore by "one God, and Mahomet his prophet," sealing his oath on his koran. Next came various Christian denominations, who by the simplicity of their modes of adjuration, furnished a remarkable contrast to the rites of paganism.—Ch. Obs.

One Hundred Live Rattlesnakes are now exhibiting at a room in Cornhill square, of various ages and sizes; the oldest is 13 years, as indicated by the number of rattles, and the largest, about five feet long. They are perfectly active, and often in motion. Most of them have already thrown off their coats the present season; their first appearance after this process, the colors are very brilliant. The skin thrown off covers every part, even the eyes. It is said they eat nothing; and though furnished with water every other day, drink but very little.

Growth of New York.—The growth of New York, since the year 1800, has been such as to excite the admiration of all who have seen it. The Merchants Exchange, the Bank, the Episcopal College, the public School House, a Masonic Hall, Arcade, several Churches, and eighteen hundred houses and stores.—August, 1826

A violent earthquake at Jerusalem, has destroyed two monuments equally the pride of Musselmens and Christians.—The first, the Mosque of the Caliph Omar; the second, the Sepulchre built over Calvary

The Cotton Weavers of Belfast have forwarded a memorial to Government, praying that Ministers may take their state into consideration and grant them an opportunity of emigrating, before the inclemency of Winter adds to their sufferings.

Among the features of the late remarkable drought it may be mentioned, that Lincoln spring water, drawn from the conduits, formed an article of export to Boston by the steam packet boats.

On the 12th July, the election of the sixteen Representative Peers of Scotland took place in the presence of an immense assemblage at Holyrood House. The following peers were duly elected: The Marquises of Queensberry and Tweeddale; the Earls of Errol, Holma, Kellie, Elgin, Roseberry; Vicounis Arbuthnot, & Strathallan; Lords Forbes, Saltoun, Gray, Sinclair Colville, Napier, Belhaven and Stenton.

It would have gratified us much (says the Caledonian Mercury) to have been able to confirm the report in a London Paper, of a valuable employment having been bestowed on the Great Unknown. The late Mr. Bruce held the office of King's Printer for Scotland, in conjunction with Sir David Hunter Blair, by patent, which does not terminate for thirteen years, and for which period it was to be enjoyed by them, their heirs, executors and assignees.

Owing to the great increase of the Methodists in this town and neighbourhood, it is, we understand, proposed, at the approaching Conference, which commences next Wednesday in Liverpool, to divide the Leeds Circuit into two, under distinct superintendents.—Leeds Mercury.
