CORONER'S INQUEST.

A inquest was held on Thursday last by William Taylor, Esq. Coroner, on the body of a Labourer named William Stafford, (of Waxford in Ireland,) whose death was occasioned by the following circumstance. While some persons were engaged in hauling a Tobique boat on shore above the Market House, and just as the horses were in the act of starting, one of the rollers on which the boat was placed caught the foot of the unfortunate man, by which he was immediately thrown down, and both the roller and boat passing instantly over his entire body, he was crushed to death upon the spot. When taken up his stature was considerably diminished; every nerve and sinew seemingly contracted, and the spectacle was dreadful to behold. Verdict, "accidental death."

Extracts from a Review of a late Treatise upon the Calendar.

ADVENT SUNDAY.

"ADVENT SUNDAY, or the first Sunday in Advent, depends upon the Festival of St. Andrew, and is always the Sunday nearest to the commemoration of that Saint, whether preceding it, on the day itself, or on that following it. The three next succeeding Sundays are also denominated Advent Sundays, and the whole of the church service for that important season is calculated admirably to qualify the mind for the approaching great FEAST OF THE ADVENT, or of CHRIST'S coming in the flesh, which the term advent, from the Latin Adventus, a drawing near, or an approach, was meant to express.

"The primitive Christians practised great austerity during this preparatory season, at first fasting three days in each week, and subsequently every day throughout the Advent; and it was customary to preach, in our several cathedrals, sermons, appropriate to the occasion, on every Wednesday and Friday during Advent, in like manner as is still the usage in Lent.

"From the earliest period on record, Advent appears to have been regarded with peculiar reverence and devotion; the church began her annual course of service at this time, and even yet perseveres in that usage, whereby the ecclesiastical year differs in the period of its commencement from all other computations.

"The services for Advent confirm us in the belief of CHRIST'S coming among us, and annually revive the awful consideration of his second coming, to execute judgment on such as disobey his Word; from whence, to Trinity Sunday, we are taught most impressively the inestimable blessings flowing from the acts and sufferings of our Lord; his Nativity, Circumcision, and Manifestation to the Gentiles, and placed in regular succession for pious remembrance; while, to incite our grateful adoration, we are next reminded of his doctrines and miracles; his baptism, fasting, and temptation; his agony and bloody sweat; the cross and passion; his death, burial, resurrection and ascension; and lastly, the heavenly mission of the Holy GHOST upon the Apostles, when they successfully commenced their public ministry."
