

The unfortunate gentleman was found dead about nine o'clock this morning, in one of the out-houses attached to his residence. Near him lay a pistol, the implement of his destruction. It appeared that he discharged the pistol into his mouth, and the ball had lodged in the brain. An inquest sat on the body, and a verdict of insanity was recorded.

Mrs. CANNING — It is confidentially mentioned that it is intended, at the opening of Parliament, to propose a pension of £4000 a year to Mrs. Canning and her family. When we remember that £50000 were asked to pay Mr. Pitt's debts, and an equal sum to Mr. Percival's family, we cannot but think the posthumous claims of such a statesman as Mr. Canning, are entitled to some substantial regard.
